YOUR PERSONAL APPEARANCE.

How to Take Care of Your Skin in Summer.

BY MADAME MILLEFLEURS.

Be out doors as much as possible during the long summer days. Exercise enough to get often into profuse perspiration. But do not needlessly burn or tan your hands and face.

If you are going for a motor ride or a game of golf rub your face over with cold cream made after the following recipe and then powder plentifully.

This skin food and cream is used by nearly all reputable beauty specialists, and time and use has shown it is much the best ointment for preserving and softening the skin that is known.

White wax, one-half ounce; spermaceti, one-half ounce; lanolin, one ounce; sweet almond oil, two ounces; coconut oil, one ounce.

Take off the fire and beat until cold, adding, little by little, two ounces of orange flower water, to which five drops of tincture of benzoin have been added.

Be sure to beat the ingredients constantly until quite cold. They must be of the best and purest quality, and the druggist from whom they are purchased must weigh them carefully.

After wiping off all the cream dust your face and neck with a pure powder.

If unfortunately you get sunburned cover your face a paste made of sub-nite of bismuth and lemon juice. Put this on immediately and it will ally the pain and take the redness out.

Use hot water freely on your face at night and then cover for a few minutes with cloths wet in cold water.

Do not tan your face and hands needlessly. Tan does not always denote health, for you can be just as healthy with a fine complexion as with an ugly one.

But your face is very dirty. "Well, I don't always wash my face when I take a bath," said Bobby.

bing the dirt off with cold cream. I think that once a day is often enough to wash one's face with water, either summer or winter, and this should be done just before going to bed.

Use plenty of pure soap, much hot water and scrub your skin well. The remainder of the time you can do as the little son of a friend of mine did.

He had been sent to the bathroom for a bath and came out with a very dirty face.

"Why, Bobby," said his mother, "didn't I tell you to take a bath?" "Yes'm."

"But your face is very dirty."

"Well, I don't always wash my face when I take a bath," said Bobby.

SEPARATE SKIRT HAS FOUND FAVOR

Many White Ones Do Duty With One Linen Coat in Color.

The separate skirt is established. Last winter cabled dispatches said that Parisians were wearing coats of one color, skirts of another. A little later the parti-colored coat suit was seen on this side of the Atlantic.

White Blouses With Coat Suits. The woman who has a cotton suit of any sort of color should possess herself of several separate white skirts.

They can be worn with white or light colored or figured mull or voile blouses with the coat of the suit, and so provide many attractive changes.

The coat of the two-piece wash suit, which is never worn so much as the skirt, and does not need to be laundered so often, will easily serve to wear with three or four skirts.

The white skirts can be bought ready-made in attractive materials and a big variety of smart designs.

Many linen skirts are made, but they are perhaps not so serviceable as those of other materials which wrinkle less easily.

Cotton corduroy—the kind that looks like wide-waived pique—is one of the most attractive materials for white wash skirts.

It is thin enough to take stitching and various other tailored finishes well, and it is heavy enough to have a good deal of body.

Cotton eponge and cotton crepe are made into more elaborate wash skirts. The separate wash skirts, however, should be made with little or no drapery, as experiment has shown that it is almost impossible to iron drapery satisfactorily.

Some of the new skirts are apparently made with special view to the laundering. They are made in four pieces, seamed over each hip and buttoned with big round buttons from belt to hem in the middle of the front and the middle of the back.

When they are laundered they are unbuttoned and are washed and ironed in two simple straight pieces.

Bone Buttons for Trimming. White bone buttons are much used to trim white wash skirts, and sometimes bone rings, slides or buckles are used on the belts.

Most of the skirts are provided with belts of the same material, but some of them are made so that leather belts can be substituted for the belts of the white material.

The buttons most used are the removable sort found in men's wash waists.

A pocket is a feature of many of the new skirts. Most of the pockets are fastened over one of the hip seams, but this placing is rather awkward. Some of them are fastened on one side of the front—a much more convenient position.
