THIS NEW MERICI TURBAN IS THE LATEST CONCEIT IN MODISH FALL MILLINERY

It is made of black velvet, which, by the way, promises to be a favorite material for hats this fall. The turban is a very close fitting, with a soft crush crown and narrow, rolling brim. The up-standing Merici ruff of wired lace gives the hat its name. It is threaded about the crown with ribbon or brilliant yellow. Black and yellow will be seen very often in combination on hats this winter.

Laziest Animals in World Clash 5 Days in Lazy Strife

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Of all the animals mentioned in the books of natural history the sloth is given the palm for sheer, plain, ordinary laziness. As a runner-up for secondary honors the anteater has no serious rival.

But the passengers and crew of the "Red D" liner Caracas, now at her Brooklyn pier reloading for another trip to South America, had a chance to study the inactive peculiarities of these two tropical beasts at close range and their report of the five-day battle that raged between the two strange creatures only goes to bear out the natural historians.

As part of the collection of strange birds and beasts brought to this country by William Sebill, of 333 East 34th st. the sloth and anteater occupied the same roomy cage on the trip up from Venezuela. No trouble was expected, as the sloth immediately hung himself head down, from a crossbar at the top of the cage and the anteater retired to a lower corner, both passing into deep, dreamless slumber.

Last Sunday, however, the anteater awoke hungry. Disgusted with his failure to find food, the anteater decided to blame the sloth for the emptiness of the larder. Carefully picking a soft spot on the sloth's peculiar visage, the anteater raised a claw-armed forepaw and smote the sleeping monstrosity on its nose. Reluctantly the sloth opened one eye and looked upon his assailant. According to one of the officers, the two beasts sat looking at one another all Sunday afternoon without moving an eyelash. Then the sloth, with an expression of bored resignation, loosened one paw from its clutch on the cross beam and reached out toward the anteater, which had by this time fallen asleep again. With utmost deliberation the sloth aimed a swipe at the anteater's ear, hooked it smartly with his long, curved claw and immediately lapsed into profound sleep.

All day Monday both animals remained totally oblivious to their surroundings. Tuesday morning the sloth awakened and, seeing the anteater just below him, reached down and hooked his enemy under the chin. The claw caught a firm hold and for the rest of the day the sloth retained its grip.

On Wednesday the anteater awoke, lifted its head off the hook and took another wallop at the sloth's nose. The effort proved too tiring and the anteater immediately returned to its dreams. The sloth was now thoroughly awakened, but all day Wednesday, all Wednesday night and until the ship had docked yesterday the most deliberate of beasts failed to make good the exchange of blows. Just before Sebill separated the two animals at the landing, the sloth made a third aimless swipe at its enemy, but fanned, leaving the score of the five-day battle two blows for each—and no bloodshed.

FRED W. KELLER'S PLATFORM.

If elected Mayor of South Bend, I shall be bound by the following statements and by the declaration of principles unanimously adopted by the Citizens' Party at a mass meeting held April 16th, 1913, which meeting was attended by representatives of all parties.

The oath of office pledges the Mayor to enforce all state laws and city ordinances. This I would faithfully and conscientiously endeavor to do to the best of my ability. Business conducted according to law cannot be molested by the City Executive. Habitual violators of the law, gamblers and prostitutes are of no value to themselves or the community. The enforcement of the laws tending to reduce those evils promotes the general welfare of the whole community.

Appointments will be made with reference to fitness for the work to be performed and not with reference to the amount of political work performed. The city should not be governed in the interest of a political party, nor in the interest of a state machine, nor in the interest of the law-breaking saloons, nor in the interest of the public service corporations, but should be governed in the interests of all of the people.

We are no longer content with former housing conditions, health conditions, educational methods, recreation facilities, nor public service. The functions of a municipal government should be exercised in such a manner as to give the whole people the largest measure of happiness, comfort and prosperity. The municipal business should be conducted on the same economical basis on which private business is conducted. A dollar expended by a city with good credit should purchase as much as it would for a private company with good credit and more than it would for a private company with a poor credit. For every one dollar expended for material or labor one hundred cents in value should be received and not seventy-five cents worth as is the average in American Cities today.

Contracts for material and supplies, including printing, will be placed with the lowest competitive bidder. I will give the same careful consideration to the affairs of the city that I have given to my own business. Advertisement.

BABY BASKET IS WELCOME GIFT

Pretty One Can Be Made at Home With Dish Drainer As Foundation.

If you are wondering what welcome gift you may make for a little guest coming to some friend by way of the "Stork Limited," why not try a small baby basket? You will blink somewhat skeptically when you hear that the basket is to be made of a wire dish drainer, but there isn't a doubt that the outcome will command your respectful admiration.

The dish drainer (it should be oblong) can be purchased for the small sum of 10 cents at any 5 and 10 cent store. Cut a piece of cardboard to fit inside the bottom of the basket and cover the board with a sheet of cotton wadding. Then cover the cotton with pale blue or pink silk. A cotton material may be used if silk is not obtainable. The covering for the sides of the basket—inside—which is also of silk, may be slightly pulled out to the silk-covered bottom and drawn up the sides and fastened to the rim of the basket.

Make Lining of Linen. Next cut an oblong piece of white linen (it may be light or heavy in weight, as preferred) of sufficient size to cover the bottom and sides (all in one piece) of the basket, and to fall over the edges on the outside about the depth of the basket, to hide the wire frame. It would be well to cut the linen in a simple oblong and a half inch or so larger all around than is actually required and then to draw upon it the exact pattern for the basket cover. The linen cover must be in one piece and must fit snugly into the corners of the basket without wrinkling. For this reason square pieces are cut out of each corner of the linen oblong, so that when the cover is put into the basket the edges of the corners will just meet. These corners can be tied to the basket by ribbon being run through four eyelets made in each corner of the cover for the purpose, two inside and two on the outer edge of the cover, and tied in a small bow on the outside.

Edges are Scalloped. After having drawn the pattern on the linen for the basket, proceed to go along the lines with a spool and pencil. The tops of the scallops should touch the top of the line, and this will allow a half-inch margin, which can be cut away after the scallops are embroidered. The edges of the cut-out corners are embroidered as well. A small scallop makes a daintier cover, especially if the material be light in weight. A tiny spray of embroidery worked on each of the four overhanging edges adds greatly to the appearance of the basket, and a similar design, slightly larger, should be worked on that part of the linen covering the bottom of the basket. Make a small embroidered pocket in one of the sides and fasten an embroidered line pin cushion to the other, each being scalloped and carrying out in the spray design to match the cover. When complete, fasten the cover to the basket with a few basting stitches to hold in place. The baby basket is then ready for fitting with weight. A tiny spray of embroidery, etc. As the linen cover may be laundered without detracting from its appearance, it is to be preferred to the pretty fluffy lace ones that are not really "sensible."
