ENGLISH LAD'S TRAINED PIGEON GOES TO SCHOOL

WICKS AND HIS LITTLE FRIEND.

This pigeon goes to school! A little chappie named Wicks, who lives in Reading, England, owns this clever bird. It is his constant companion, and has often shown signs of homesickness and loneliness when the boy went away from home for a few days, where it could not follow. Now, Master Wicks discovered one day that the pigeon is quite wise! So he decided to try and teach it some tricks. What do you think he did first? Why, he taught the pigeon to accompany him to school. Each morning, when Wicks starts out for the school building the pigeon hops on his shoulder and remains there until the journey is ended. Instead of flying away home immediately, he waits to see whether the boy has a written message for him to take back. You see, this is a carrier pigeon. Another favorite trick this sagacious bird does is to fly to the window sill of the boy's bedroom at 7 each morning and peck and coo until his master wakes and opens the window. Look at the two friends.

COLEMAN TELLS AMUSING STORY

"Believe Me Or Not, It's the Truth," Says Carnival Promoter, "Monkeys Get On Awful Jag."

George H. Coleman, advance agent and promoter for the Frank J. Hatch Carnival Co. Thursday evening at the homecoming headquarters on W. Second st., related a rather amusing and interesting story of an incident which occurred last week while he was on the show train enroute to Auburn, Ind., where the shows are now exhibiting. This is the story, believe it or not, it's the truth. The company carries over 50 monkeys, together with other animals in a special car. A little educated monkey, Mr. Murphy, is the only monkey allowed the freedom of the car while enroute, and somehow unobserved during the trip she managed to open the case and release the whole batch of other monkeys. Swarms of them soon scrambled upon the top of the car and about the train nearly driving the crew to distraction trying to capture and restrain the little pulley into the yards and was going at a slow rate of speed several of the little animals jumped from the car to the ground and soon they all followed. The train then had to be stopped and the monkeys captured. The men then chased them about until they found some trees about a block from the tracks where they climbed to the tops. After trying all methods, and wasting several hours, William Allen, the veteran training master of the Hatch show, procured a quart of liquor and with this tempting drink was able to capture Mr. Murphy. After drinking enough to put on board a genuine Virginia reel jag her monkeyship she must have invited the whole bunch to join in the frolic, because pretty soon they were all enjoying copious draughts of jag water. As quick as one would stomp, they were into a helpless state, he would be picked up and placed into the case until they were all recaptured. That was a glorious time in monkey land, but the wisest looking bunch you ever saw the next day. A bit of strenuous strategy it must be admitted, but Mr. Allen's ingenuity saved a valuable collection of monkeys. Mr. Coleman said that this is only one of the many peculiar incidents of carnival and circus life.

DATE IS SET FOR PRIMARY ELECTION

Commissioners Determine Voting Day—Candidates For Various Berths Expected to Appear in a Few Days.

Sept. 23 was set as the day for the city's primary election at a meeting of the election commissioners, held Friday afternoon. The commissioners are City Clerk James Kennedy, Clarence McCullom and Isaac Kane Parks. Besides this board, Atty. Ralph Jernegan and Chairman G. B. Williams of the bull moose party, attended the meeting. The former was summoned from Eagle lake as the bull mooseers refused to take part in the meeting unless represented by council. With the date for the primary definitely decided upon it is expected that candidates will soon announce themselves for the various city berths. It was freely rumored about town Friday that there would be four tickets in the field at the coming election. These will be the democratic, republican, bull moose and socialist. It seems that the fusion ticket idea will be abandoned. It is said that party loyalty is the reason for this, although it has been said that both factions concede a democratic victory and would not want to unite unless in this manner. The next few days will probably determine which course the two parties will pursue. The democrats are united, and following the primary will probably be the choice for their candidate. The socialists will also be united but their strength is expected to be small to that exhibited by the other parties. The voting machines will be used in the coming primary election. The voting booths will be determined at a meeting to be held shortly by the election commissioners.
