FASHION'S MODEL IS LARGER NOW

New Styles Have Changed Figure, Standard Size Now is Thirty-eight.

"Madame takes a standard model size, yes? Then show Madame thirty-eight." "But I'm not a thirty-eight," protested the fair shopper seated yesterday in the costume section of a large department store. "I'm only thirty-six and have never worn a larger size."

"Ah, yes, but that was before the new styles arrived," the head of the department explained. "This season practically all our models are made one size larger. The perfect thirty-six used to have it all her own way until fashions and figures changed. Now the perfect thirty-eight is the model queen."

When asked why the model standard has changed one degree in the passing from one season to another the buyer explained that women's hips were responsible for the new thirty-eight size. They are too large for the rest of her figure according to this authority. "We discovered that our thirty-sixes, which used to slip on easily and adjust themselves almost as though made for the wearer, never requiring many alterations, were too snug around the hips," he said.

Hips Have Increased in Size. "This slight increase over the perfect model thirty-six was not noticed when skirts were fuller. But with the new fashions the tight skirts in the old sizes are too narrow. So when a customer asks for a thirty-six we usually end by selling her a thirty-eight. The difference in the waist part is so slight that we seldom have to alter it, and the extra inch or so in the skirt breadth is actually required if the tight skirt is to fit properly."

"Yes, I know what you are going to say. That you thought since the hipless fashion's advent women had reduced themselves several inches. But that is not the case. The corset worn now gives women a straight and hipless appearance. They have no curves left belonging to the hour glass and straight front periods of the past. Corsets are adjusted to give freedom to every movement of the waist and hips, and that means corsets are worn looser than they used to be. And what is the result? Naturally, the hips being less confined, have increased in size."

"Waists are larger, too, and, sartorially speaking, busts have almost disappeared. They are now confined by wadding supporters that women look almost flat in front. That is the fashionable silhouette."

Fashions Are Fickle. "Every woman strives to have narrow shoulders, a rather squeezed effect at the bust, a generous waist measurement and curveless hips. Is it any wonder that models have to alter their gowns to conform to the new fashions?" "If changing the measurements upon which models are designed did not entail a good deal of labor, wholesale customers might use a thirty-eight skirt with a thirty-six or even thirty-four waist. But fashions are too fickle for them to take the chance. They might have to make a wholesale alteration again in six months. Instead of rearranging the foundation figures we simply buy thirty-eights for standard size and know that there will be little alteration in skirts with possibly a few slight changes in the waist."

Foreign models have not changed, although French dressmakers learned some time ago to recognize the national differences in the figure of her American reproduction. The American is taller and broader and therefore models made especially for this country are designed to fit. Americans just as the Japanese have grasped the fact that our women are several inches taller than their quaint little women, now model their kimonos and coats on more generous lines.

SOCIALISTS MAY GET DEBS FOR CAMPAIGN

South Bend socialists may have a chance to hear Eugene V. Debs, socialist candidate for president last fall, before the mayoralty campaign has been completed. The secretary of the party has been instructed to try and secure a date with him to come here to promote the socialist mayoralty campaign.

Jacob Klahn of New York city, will speak in South Bend at arrangements made at a meeting of the city central committee of the socialist party Tuesday night. He will talk at several meetings late this month. At the meeting arrangements were made for promoting an aggressive campaign, and meeting places were arranged as follows: For Wednesday night, corner of Wayne and Michigan sts.; for Thursday night, corner of LaSalle av. and Emerick st.; Friday night, corner of Main and South sts.; and for Saturday night at the corner of Michigan and Wayne sts.

These Afternoon Gowns and Reception Wraps have the New Season Markings on Them—

They have the Look of Autumn—Autumn 1913—about them—these Gowns and Wraps now on Display at the Ellsworth Store—Gowns and Wraps the Like of Which have Never Before been brought on to South Bend.

Almost every style that is being shown has a High Girdle—and a good many have the upper parts of the bodices of Transparent Stuffs—Marquissette or Chiffon Embroidered—and Opening over Lace and Net Chemisettes.

Sashes are Pleated—Some Dresses have Tunics or Hip Draperies, showing all that is left of the Pannier the designers threatened to revive two years ago.

The Colors, too, have the Richness of Autumn about them—Golden Browns, Purples, Taupe, Blues and Blacks, Navy, of course.

And, as for Reception Wraps—the same tendencies—those of Fall 1913—are Clearly Apparent in the Wraps in this Unusual style Showing now in Progress at the Ellsworth Store—the Wraps also have all the Richness of Autumn about them, especially in their Colorings.

A Very Important Detail. The Style Showing we're talking about is the more interesting because the Prices on the Gowns, Wraps and Dresses are Decidedly Low—Appealing Prices on "Adorable" Garments.

Fashion Reigns Supreme. Again the Ellsworth Store Stands at the Front as the South Bend Store that Shows what's what in the Fashion World.

Read the Fashion Note from the Real Centers of Fashion—especially from Paris and you'll Quickly Note that there's hardly a Sentence but Mentions Duvetyne or Peau de Peche. Coats, Suits, Dresses, Hats—Duvetyne or Peau de Peche.
