BY ADELE MENDEL

Originally Halloween was the great harvest-festival, so nothing can be more appropriate than to emphasize that idea by using the different fruits, vegetables, leaves and flowers which form decorations for a Halloween party.

Of all the festival occasions of the year, none seem to hold the same charm as the Halloween Eve. According to different legends, the custom of lighting bonfires on the 31st of October is a relic of the Druids.

The bonning of apples is also handed down from a Roman harvest-festival in honor of the Roman goddess, Pomona. Decorate your rooms profusely with corn stalks, chrysanthemums, autumn leaves, wheat, etc.

The serious rites long ago disappeared from the celebration, and now Halloween is celebrated in the liveliest sort of manner.

Games are usually games of chance. One must duck for apples, must try tests of fortune, new and old.

Another way is to have the girls covered, each with a sheet. The men choose their partners, the unmasking causes much fun and breaks up any formality.

The table illustrated would be an excellent one to copy for a "Ghost Party" table cover.

The bonbon boxes are covered with ghosts' fashions of white crepe paper and wire. A candle design is cut from a decorative paper napkin and applied to the name card.

themselves in the very spirit of the witch-night.

Have the invitations written on black paper, decorated with a witch flying on a broom, or anything pertaining to the supernatural or the grotesque.

Partners may be matched for supper by distributing cards to the guests. Apparently there is no name on the paper, but when one has discovered the name of his or her partner by holding the card to the light, the others will quickly do the same.

The names on the cards are written with lemon juice.

LAWYER EJECTED. LONDON, Oct. 21.—A sensation was caused in the high court Tuesday while Sir Rufus Isaacs was being sworn in as Lord Chief Justice of Great Britain, when a barister named Oaks, who was seated among the spectators, suddenly leaped to his feet and interrupted Lord Haldane, who was eulogizing the retiring lord chief justice, Lord Alverstone, who resigned. The lawyer was seized forcibly and forced from the room.
