Expelled From Church Because She Sings And Prays Too Loud

BY MARY BOYLE O'REILLY.

LONDON, England.—The right to go to church has given rise to a curious action in the King's Bench division, where Miss Alice Hancock, an elderly and slightly eccentric gentlewoman, is suing the vicar of Christ church, Harrow-Road for expulsion, charging libel and slander.

"After 42 years as a member of the Church of England I am excluded from the church and communion," says Miss Hancock. "I went to court to clear my character and to put a stop to people pointing the finger of scorn at me as the dreadful woman who had to be expelled from Christ church. It is the inalienable right of every Christian to enter God's house for worship."

"Well, the vicar said I handed round sweets during service. I did. But they were only licorice to stop people's cough. On one occasion I stepped out of my pew and put a few pieces into a blind man's hand."

"Then the vicar disapproved of my singing, saying that it was too hearty, that my yells reached to the vestry. When I heard how it was I promised not to sing out and after that I just mumbled."

"One day the vicar called at my house on a pastoral visit and read me 'Dream of a Church Mouse.' I listened and, well, I laughed. After that the vicar complained that I sometimes gave the responses in a loud tone saying, 'Amen,' or 'God be praised,' quite as if I meant it."

"The vicar forced me to give up my seat in the gallery. It is foolish, of course, but I loved that pew. Next day the vicar's solicitor sent a letter to the local papers about me. That is why I charge libel. It came good Friday. I went to church. A warden warned me off the steps claiming the church was private property. I replied 'rubbish', and slipped into the free seats. Some one tried to drag me off my knees."

"A policeman came, roughly laid hold of me and turned me out. The vicar stood watching. I said to him, 'Sir, you are a disgrace to the robes you wear. God will never prosper you. You are acting in an unkind, unministerial way to an old woman.'"

"With my umbrella I knocked off his silk hat in self-defense. 'One would think that a church was an exclusive club. Well, we shall see. Whatever the decision of the court I shall not stop attending service. It is the right of every Christian to go to church.'"

Should Have An Agreement

Money Matters Need Not Be Bugaboo Between Husband And Wife

Dr. Orison Sweet Marden in the September Pictorial Review makes a strong plea for a thorough understanding in money matters between husbands and wives. He says:

Many men have a way of keeping their wives in ignorance of their financial condition. If not by direct deception, by inference. Some one has said that a man is never so happy as when he has a few dollars which his wife doesn't know about and he has to admit the truth of the charge. I believe many men have an idea that if their wives really knew their exact financial condition they would take advantage of it and not be as economical and thrifty as they would if they thought their husband's means were more limited than they actually were.

When the wife asks for money some men put on that "hopeless look" which they think will arouse her sympathy and which they believe will be a woman's savior. If she asks for five dollars the husband believes that this "hopeless look" will be good for about 75 per cent in the reduction of the asked-for amount.

There is everything in starting out right when you begin housekeeping. The great majority of things which cause friction in married life, the little daily pin-pricks, the misunderstandings, the bickerings over the household affairs, the expenses, things which tend to kill love, could be avoided just by a few simple agreements between husband and wife, arranged at the very outset of the domestic career.

Some men are honest in their belief that women cannot handle money to such good advantage as men; that they cannot make it go as far, when as a matter of fact the majority of women would make it go much further and would spend it much more judiciously than their husbands, because women are naturally more conscientious.

As a rule women have much better judgment than men, and are better judges of material, wearing qualities, and suitability of things. Yet I know a man, and there are many like him, who insists upon buying his wife's clothing. I have known him to buy a dress just because it was cheap, and which his wife was actually ashamed to wear.

The girl who has had a fair education and a sound training in money matters, who has been brought up to expend wisely and thriftily, with a proper knowledge of the value of money is pretty sure to make a good manager of her household finances. Her husband will have no excuse for holding the purse strings—Pictorial Review.

By a small city, in small bodies so as to avoid attracting attention of the British warships, and deny rumors that several British vessels had been sunk in a night attack. It is understood that all the twelve men in the crew of the U-15 were drowned.

The admiralty today confirmed the report of the sinking of the German submarine U-15 in an attack upon British warships, and deny rumors that several British vessels had been sunk in a night attack. It is understood that all the twelve men in the crew of the U-15 were drowned.

The managing director of the Exchange Telegraph company, who has gone to Brussels, reported today that he had learned from a source absolutely reliable that the forts at Liege are still intact, that not one has been captured, and that the Belgian army was still able to prevent the German advance.

That a conflict between Japanese and German warships in the far east may be expected is indicated by a Reuter dispatch received here today from Tokio. It says:

"It is believed that Japan will adhere to the spirit of the Anglo-Japanese alliance to the very extreme limit. The whereabouts of the German squadron is not disclosed, but it is reported to be menacing British shipping."

The entire Japanese fleet has sailed from Yokosuka under sealed orders. The German fleet operating from Tsing-Tao captured the Russian steamer Riazan with many British passengers today. Scores of merchant steamers have been driven into Japanese ports and commerce of this country has been seriously crippled.

Several newspapers today published a dispatch alleged to have come from the United States saying an American fleet will be sent to Asia to protect American interests. This "dispatch" receives no credence in well informed circles.

A FALSE STANDARD OF CULTURE has gained ground in this country which looks upon the bearing and rearing of children as something coarse and vulgar and to be avoided, but the advent of Eugenics means much for the motherhood of the race. Happy is the wife who, though weak and ailing, depends upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore her to health, and when headaches and backaches are a thing of the past, brave sons and fair daughters rise up and call her blessed.

Ellsworth's Fall Lines are in Keeping With Your Fall Needs

We have had the courage to work along new ideas, to bring on new fashions, to buy goods that are scarce in market.

We sell at moderate prices. Imports are cut off, but this store has been rather more fore-handed than usual and we are meeting the increased demands for our merchandise, with the largest assortments we have ever offered.

Early in market this year we purchased our Fall staple lines at the old prices. Only today we received advices that certain import lines' prices had increased from 10 to 50 percent.

Fortunately we are covered on these goods and we are in better position than ever to take care of your needs.

It will pay you to come to Ellsworth's to do trading this Fall, as Ellsworth's prices are not going to be higher even though prices in the big markets are soaring.

It's our chance to do our best for our customers and we certainly will take advantage of this opportunity.

Are you with us?

We made our Fall purchases at the old prices. Not content with simply placing orders, we wired our buyers to spend an extra week in New York, seeing that the goods they bought were put on the trains.

They all want 'em. Correct Suits for Afternoon Wear. Miss Stripe: "Got your new, fall suit yet?" Miss Plaid: "No, but I heard Ellsworth's have some smart, new models. Reckon I'll have to buy one."

There is a sharp scramble in market for the desirable kinds of merchandise this store sells and we have expended extraordinary efforts to select the right goods. We wanted to be sure of them, and wired our buyers to see that every order was filled and put on the train.

So, during the past few days the new goods have been arriving fast, showing us here at the store that our buyers are getting the goods delivered.

We have been "onto our job."

We have had Nine Buyers in New York.

We are in position to serve you better than ever.

We make strong bids for your Fall Business.

FRANCE CONFERS MILITARY MEDAL ON KING ALBERT

Many Spies Are Captured. The French government is exercising the most vigilance and it is daily resulting in arrests of scores of Germans accused of being spies.

Some of these spies are accoutered as French army cadets and French army aviators. They are adepts in the French language and have been fraternizing with French officers and soldiers in order to gather such information as they can relative to the disposition of the French forces.

A large detachment of German Uhlans have concentrated in the woods north of Dinard and the French are surrounding them.

The Germans are meeting around Liege have begun to feel their way south. This has been shown by the fact that a number of skirmishes have occurred between detachments of French and French cavalrymen east of Namur. The Germans had been sent out to reconnoiter, and to test the strength of the enemy.

Correspondent account of the fighting around Liege contain stories of thrilling air fights between Belgian and German aerial squadrons. The aerial conflicts were desultory, and deadly. They gave the world the first glimpse of battles in the air.

The Germans mainly pinned their faith to dirigible balloons, while the Belgians and the French are relying upon aeroplanes.

A belated dispatch gives an account of a battle in midair between a Zeppelin dirigible and a Belgian aeroplane during the early stages of the fighting at Liege.

The German airship had been sent over Liege to make a reconnaissance. As soon as the balloon was sighted by the forts a Belgian aviator was sent in pursuit. The aviator, equipped with a rifle and automatic pistol, set out in a swift and powerful monoplane. The Belgian disdaining the use of fire arms, drove his machine against the gas bag of the big balloon risking his own life in an attempt to send the dirigible to earth. The bag was punctured and the Zeppelin dropped, useless and helpless.

After the destruction of this Zeppelin the Germans did not risk any more of their balloons over the city, but contented themselves with sending dirigibles skyward over their own lines to secure information about the movements of the Belgians. They kept up a continuous fire upon these balloons, but it was futile as the guns could not be elevated sufficiently to get the range.

In order to prevent troops from attacking their allies, the French and Belgian governments have printed designs of all the uniforms worn by the Belgians, British and French soldiers and have distributed them among their forces.
