MISHAWAKANS JOIN IN BOOSTING FAIR

Local Business Men Accompany South Benders to Woodland to Explain Proposition.

Madison township farmers met last night at the Woodland school house and were given the first outline of the prospectus of the proposed fair grounds and amusement park, since a meeting of the farm bureau Saturday at which it was decided to discuss the matter in all townships. A big crowd of interested farmers was on hand to greet the speakers who came from South Bend and Mishawaka.

Among those who spoke were County Agent John S. Bordner, John F. Devine, E. P. Dudley, S. D. Rider and Mr. Frank.

Mr. Devine gave a comprehensive outline of the proposed fair and explained the methods being used to sell stock and create an interest in the project in the farming communities. He said it was one of vital interest to the farmers of the county. The exposition building which was proposed to erect would at all times be available for meetings, farmers' exchange sales, stock exhibits, etc.

John S. Bordner, county agent, said he had been "talking" such a fair as was contemplated for the past two years. People from the adjoining states would come in great numbers to see what St. Joseph county could produce in the way of live stock, etc.

Mr. Frank said the fair would be well to get away from provincialism, and told of what could be done by united effort. Some of the best breeders of live stock in the country are right here in St. Joseph county, he said, and such an exposition as was projected there could be held but that their stock would line up well with any in the land.

Mr. Frank said the fair would be the means of putting the small farmer in a position to compete with the large farmer, and would encourage them to get into the raising of a higher grade of stock.

REPORT GERMANS PREPARE TO LIFT OSSOWICZ SIEGE. CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE. made in dispatches received from Cracow today. These declare that only few forces were left in Przemysl when it surrendered to the Russians after capturing its main purpose—holding back the Russians until the Austrian and German troops on the Carpathian front could make the preparations necessary to meet the main Russian arm.

Accomplished Task. They held the enemy at bay and in the meantime inflicted heavy losses upon him. All patriotic Austrians regret the fall of Przemysl, but this glory is assuaged by memory of the glory won by the defenders, whose names were for God, for emperor, for fatherland.

Official of the war office asserted today that the loss of Przemysl would have no effect upon the main campaign in the Carpathians and on the Dunajec river, across which the Russians were driven with terrific losses when they launched their first campaign against Cracow.

THE DOCTORS GIVE PLAGE OF TYPHUS

Sir Thomas Lipton, Back from Serbia, Describes Sacrificing Heroism of the Doctors and Nurses Engaged in Work.

LONDON, March 23.—Sir Thomas Lipton, who has returned from Serbia where he took a British red cross hospital mission at the attack by Erin, told of the heroic work done there by the American doctors and nurses in combating the terrible epidemic of typhus which is raging throughout Serbia.

"To us," Sir Thomas Lipton—concluding: "it is a plague such as the world seldom has known and all the benevolence of humanity is required to deal with it."

Incidentally Sir Thomas told of the death of Dr. James Francis Donnelly of New York which he thinks well typifies the noble work being done by the Americans. He said:

"On our arrival at Ghevgheli we were met at the station by Dr. Donnelly, whom I had known in New York. Having two hours to wait we accepted Dr. Donnelly's invitation to look over his hospital. On our way to the hospital we learned it had been a tobacco factory which has been hurriedly constructed into a shelter for the sick. The staff consisted of six American doctors including Drs. Donnelly, Hodge, Davidson and Gardner, and 12 American nurses.

"It was not a large building but packed into it were 1,600 patients, the majority of whom were suffering from typhus.

"There were no beds and very few mattresses. The patients were huddled together on the floor, many of them dying and some dead with scarcely any clothing to cover them.

"Donnelly, who was a fine specimen of manhood, spoke of the hard work but said he was very happy in being able to do something to alleviate their suffering. He spoke of the frightful conditions which exist, conditions which any visitor could judge for himself.

"We then went to another small building adjoining in which the hospital staff lived. There we saw a number of the American nurses, some of whom were suffering from typhus. There also two of the six American doctors were down with the same disease.

"Before leaving Donnelly told me he was afraid the typhus would be attacked by the enemy and asked me if I could give him American and Red Cross flags to fly over the building. I told him he could have the two largest we had on board and I sent to Salonika to get them.

"When we left Ghevgheli two out of the three remaining nurses, accompanied by Dr. Donnelly came to the station to see us off.

Doctor Is Victim. "Six days later on our return journey we stopped at Ghevgheli expecting to find Dr. Donnelly and the nurses awaiting us. Instead we were met by Dr. Hodge who broke the sad news that Dr. Donnelly had died before by typhus and that two more of the nurses also were down with the same disease.

"I arranged to take Drs. Hodge and Gardner with me to Salonika to see the American doctors who were on board the Erin where Dr. Hodge told me that the day before Dr. Donnelly died he wrote a letter to his wife in New York, saying that if he died the letters were to be handed to me with the request that I see they reached their destination.

"Poor Donnelly also asked that his body be wrapped in the stars and stripes and that the red cross flags which I sent him from the Erin. Needless to say these requests were carried out.

"While Hodge was telling me this I noticed that he appeared ill so I sent for Dr. Hodge and he told me that his friend was in a very bad way and showed every symptom of typhus. I wanted to take him along with us, but owing to the quarantine regulations could not be done so he was taken ashore by Dr. Gardner and the rest I heard was that his case was pronounced typhus.

Forwards Doctor's Mail. Sir Thomas has forwarded Donnelly's letters and post cards to their destinations and also has written a most sympathetic letter to Mrs. Donnelly describing her husband's noble death. Sir Thomas is full of praise for the great work being done by Dr. Edward W. Ryan of the American hospital at Belgrade whom he describes as "the most brave man in Serbia today." He has 2,900 patients—mostly typhus cases—under his care.

"Dr. Ryan told me," said Sir Thomas, "that unless something was done immediately to stop the disease, more than half the population of Serbia would be wiped out. What is urgently needed is tents, wooden beds, sanitary material, clothing, beds, drugs and medical stores, but above all, doctors and nurses."

Sir Thomas is planning to return immediately to Serbia with further large supplies and, he hopes, a good complement of American doctors and nurses.
