

REFUSES TO DIVULGE GIRL'S HIDING PLACE

William Spethart, Alleged Witness Tamperer, to Know Fate Thursday.

City Judge Warner will render his decision in the case of William Spethart, 1028 Tabbot av., who is accused of influencing witnesses, Thursday morning.

Spethart is accused of having persuaded Ellen Wilson, known to hide from officials who were armed with a subpoena for her appearance in the case against her father, Thomas Wilson, which is pending in the state court circuit court.

Spethart admitted that he knew the present whereabouts of the girl, but refused to tell the court. She was alleged to have gone to the home of Mrs. Anna Faust some five weeks ago, where she met Mr. and Mrs. Spethart.

Spethart went away with them to Michigan and has not been heard of since, was the essence of the state's case.

Conversations in which the Spetharts had boasted that "it would take more than $100 to get Ellen Wilson's address," were introduced as evidence by the state.

Judge Warner advised Spethart to give authorities the girl's address. His decision will be given Thursday morning.

CORSETS FOR MEN AS WELL AS WOMEN TO BE COMMON IN FUTURE

If corsetry makes the strides predicted for it by Madame de La Cour of New York who is lecturing at the Ellsworth store this week, future man will be as hot on the trail of a "correct model" as present woman.

Madame de La Cour, backed in her statements by the opinions of New York physicians, asserts that all children, boys as well as girls, should be properly corseted to prevent the development of defects in the position of the torso.

Madame de La Cour represents the famous Madame Franze shops at 513 Fifth av., New York. She represents also an innovation in the world of corsetry. She is essentially a lecturer, not a demonstrator, and her mission is to give counsel to the corseted rather than to sell corsets.

A state law to compel every woman who sets herself up to be a corset expert to take out a license based upon her ability to pass an examination in physiology and hygiene, is strongly advocated by Madame de La Cour, who is herself a physical culture expert.

"A woman should not dare to fit a corset without knowing the principles of physiology and hygiene, is strongly advocated by Madame de La Cour, who is herself a physical culture expert.

Before going into corsetry Madame de La Cour studied physical culture and dramatic art.

"There will be no more wasp waist lines," asserts Madame de La Cour with Emma McChesney confidence. "Women are too sensible, not only from the point of view of health, but she added smilingly, "because she knows that she must keep the fat hip line to retain her youthful figure."

Madame de La Cour will be at the Ellsworth store all this week. Wednesday afternoon she will give a formal lecture at 3 o'clock on the second floor and throughout the week she will receive visitors privately or will appear before women's clubs of the city.

DEATHS.

JOHN JOSEPH MOONEY.

John Joseph Mooney died Sunday at 4 p. m. at San Antonio, Texas, in which city he had spent the past five years for the benefit of his health, having undergone serious injury in a football game between the South Bend and Goshen high school teams when he was 16 years of age. His death came with a sudden change in condition, having shown gains at times which gave hope of ultimate recovery.

Mooney was staying with her son at San Antonio and Mr. Mooney left for there when notified of the change in his condition. They will return here the latter part of the week with the body.

Joseph was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Mooney. He was born at Urbana, O., March 6, 1892, being 23 years old at the time of death. His early education was received in St. Patrick's school and he served as acolyte and usher at St. Patrick's church, being the first president of its Holy Name society, and also a member of the Knights of Columbus.

With the parents he is survived by four sisters: Mrs. D. J. McNamara, the Misses Theresa and Helen Mooney, all of South Bend, and Mrs. A. A. Klugnardt of Kansas City, Mo.

E. J. McDONALD, 60 years old, died at Epworth hospital Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock from injuries received in a runaway near Galien, Mich., two weeks ago. He was brought to Epworth hospital March 11, suffering with a broken leg and abdominal injuries. It was the latter which caused his death, according to Dr. Stanley A. Clark, who was called in attendance.

MISCHKE AND ZIEMAN GIVE $500 BOND EACH

Men Charged with Criminal Assault Return Home After Being in Jail All Day.

John Mischke and Fred Ziemann, charged with criminal assault, gave appearance bonds in the sum of $500 each at 8 o'clock Monday night and then left for their homes in Berrien county, Mich., to await arraignment which will probably take place soon. Their bonds were signed by Barry Scanlon. The amount of the bonds was reduced from $1,000.

The complaining witness against the men is Wilhelmino Mischke, 1105 Queen st., a sister-in-law of John Mischke's. It is alleged that the assault occurred on Feb. 19 when the men visited the Mischke home while the husband was away at his work. The defendants are prosperous farmers living near St. Joseph, Mich. and they waived extradition proceedings when they heard that officers were after them. Their wives were with them while they were being held at the county jail Monday.

Woodrow Wilson on "When a Man Comes to Himself"

Praise for "the great captains of industry" and particularly for "one of the most distinguished and most justly honored of our great philanthropists" is expressed in a small volume by Prest' Wilson, reissued yesterday by Harpers. The little book is entitled "When a Man Comes to Himself."

"The great philanthropist" is not named by Mr. Wilson. Those who guessed that it was the elder Rockefeller recalled that Ambassador Page, Mr. Wilson's former publisher and present ambassador, was also Mr. Rockefeller's publisher, and a eulogist of his philanthropic motives.

Writing of those who "are not fascinated by the glitter of gold," and for whom "business is more interesting than pleasure," Mr. Wilson says: "It was this fascination that had got hold upon the faculties of the man whom the world was afterward to know, not as a prince among merchants—for the world forgot the merchant princes—but as a prince among benefactors; for beneficence breeds gratitude, gratitude admiration, admiration fame, and the world remembers its benefactors. Business, and business alone, interested him, or seemed to him worth while. The first time he was asked to subscribe money for a benevolent object he declined. Why should he subscribe? What affair would be set forward that would increase of efficiency would the money buy, what return would it bring?"

"Was good money to be simply given away, like water poured on a barren soil, to be sucked up, and yield nothing? It was not until men who understood benevolence on its sensible, systematic, practical and really helpful side explained it to him as an investment that his mind was held of it and turned to it for satisfaction. He began to see that education was a thing of infinite usury; that money devoted to it would yield a singular increase to which there was no calculable end, an increase in perspective—increased knowledge, and therefore of intelligence and efficiency, touching generation after generation with new impulses, adding to the sum total of the world's fitness for affairs—an invisible but intensely real spiritual usury beyond reckoning, because compounded in an unknown ratio from age to age. Henceforward beneficence was as interesting to him as business; was, indeed, a sort of sublimated business in which money moved new forces in a commerce which no man could bind or limit.

"He had come to himself to the full realization of his powers, and the full realization of what it was that his mind demanded for its satisfaction. "This is the positive side of a man's discovery of the way in which his faculties are to be made to fit into the world's affairs, and released for effort in a way that will bring real satisfaction."

As an introduction to his theme the president writes: "There is no fixed time in a man's life at which he comes to himself. It is a change reserved for the thoroughly sane and healthy person, one who can detach themselves from tasks and drudgery long and often enough to get a view of the proportions of life and the stage plot of its action."

Ortimes, the president writes, "the most immediate and drastic means," of bringing "the more imaginative and impatient reformers" to themselves "is to elect them to legislative or executive office."

"That will reduce oversanguine persons to their simplest terms. Not because to find their fellow-legislators or officials incapable of high purpose or indifferent to the betterment of the communities which they represent. Only cynics hold that to be the chief reason why we approach the millennium so slowly, and cynics are usually very ill-informed persons. It is because under our modern democratic arrangements we so subdivide power and balance parts in government that no one man can tell for much or turn affairs to his advantage."

"It is not that such men lose courage when they find themselves charged with the actual direction of the affairs concerning which they have held and uttered such strong, unhesitating, drastic opinions. They have only learned discretion."

When asked at the white house, during his regular weekly conference with the newspaper correspondents, who the great philanthropist was whom he described in his book, Prest' Wilson said that he had forgotten his name!
