New Accessories

For the Boudoir

Daintiness and Originality Shown in Pretty Home-made Trifles.

There is a new and dainty lamp shade for the pink bedroom, which is formed of three rings, each four inches in width but of varying diameters with the largest ring at the top and the smallest at the bottom. They hang in tiers, the fringe on the bottom of each ring overhanging the top of the ring below it, pagoda fashion, though they are not fastened together except at the top. The rings are covered with pink silk, over which white all-over lace is stretched and the edges finished with one inch wide silk fringe. These shades are very dainty in appearance and quite novel.

A pretty trifle for the table is the lingerie trinket basket. Its foundation is wire, with a high handle; the foundation covering is net, which is completely hidden by ruffles of lace. The lining of the basket being fine handkerchief linen with an embroidered medallion in the center. The ruffled handle is surmounted by a dainty satin bow which matches in color the other fittings.

The latest shape in lingerie pillows is the multi-shaped pillow, which has heretofore appeared only in silk. The foundation is of delicate pink or blue silk, then handkerchief linen is laid smooth on the bottom, puffed around the edge and drawn to the center, where it is finished with a huge lace rosette and caught by a satin-covered button the size of a 50-cent piece, which matches the foundation silk covering. When the cover needs laundering a cunningly-arranged drawing releases the big rosette, stretching it out to the size of the surface of the pillow, so that the case may be slipped off quite readily. The lace is put through a rosette iron after laundering, which makes it, when drawn again, quite as crisp and fresh-looking as when new, though of course no starch is put in the lace.

The daintiest new nightgown cases are made of fine French net over a silk foundation. They are in the envelope shape and are finished entirely around with a tucked ruffle of the net. Over the front there are applied lace butterflies, large ones at the corners, smaller ones toward the envelope flap. In the center of the pointed flap is a large applied lace monogram; no lace edge is used, as even the finest would take from the dainty appearance of this attractive bedroom trifle.

The fad for painted articles has extended to a Philippine shaped, hand-painted pasteboard fan. It is a half circle, with a cut out handle and a hole for the thumb like an artist's palette. The center of the fan is tinted to match the color scheme of the room and the edge has an inch wide Persian border. These fans are very decorative and have a futuristic touch about them which is new.

A quaint adaptation of the old-fashioned painted mirror is shown in a mirror with a wooden frame two inches wide, finished at the bottom with a basket of flowers so familiar on old painted furniture. The flowers are carved out before being painted. The frame of the mirror is white and the flowers are in their natural colors. At each side is a holder for a single candle. The mirror is designed to use over the old-fashioned highboy.

Another bedroom novelty is a shade to swing over an electric bulb. It is in the shape of a mandarin hat, made of painted pasteboard on which flowers are painted against a ground of solid color. Each panel is a different color, blue, yellow, grass green, terra cotta, white, gold and lavender being the ones used in this particular shade. The panels are separated by a single line black. The material is an opaque paper which sheds a soft light and makes the colors peculiarly attractive.

Mid-Victorian is this dainty frock of pink and white. White net, the skirt, and pink deboutante satin, the bodice. Gathered and gathered and then gathered a bit more are the three flounces which constitute the skirt. And scattered over them in the most careless fashion are tiny wreaths of pink rosebuds and blue forget-me-nots.

The bodice could scarcely be a more simple affair. From shoulder to waistline, it follows the lines of a basque ending in a bit of a point at the center front. Quaint little ruffles protect the shoulders. The small flowers are repeated as a bodice trimming.

HOME-GROWN MELONS ON CITY MARKET

Can't get any more of a Cent and Two Cents Apiece.

Plenty of homegrown watermelons can now be secured on the city market. Tuesday morning was the first that all of the dealers have been well supplied with them. Nearly every grower on the farm had a few of the homegrown variety, while several of them made melons their sole offering for the day. They sold at 10 and 15 cents.

Tuesday's cantaloupes were better than they have been this fall. The muskmelons had been rather tasteless, but those on sale Tuesday were juicy and solid. A number of the dealers had bushels of the smaller melons which sold for a cent and two cents apiece. The larger ones sold for five and ten cents.

Several dealers had cucumbers to offer Tuesday morning. With the approaching for pickle canning, this vegetable is expected to appear in large quantities within the next few days. They sold for 20 and 30 cents a bushel, containing a little less than a half bushel.

Peaches sold all the way from 75 cents to $1.10 per bushel. Prices this year have been much cheaper than they have for some time, owing to the heavy peach crop in Michigan.

That Touch of Fairy Lightness

Add it to your cake by the use of Roxane Cake Flour. It costs only a penny or two more and it insures success. The flour is a small item, anyway. Why use the ordinary kind and risk good butter and eggs? Light, white tenderness that seems like magic—that's the fairy touch of Roxane Cake Flour—specially milled from the famous grain fields of Indiana.

Recipes in Every Package

Here is one—tested, tried and true—for Walnut Cake. 1 cup butter, 1 cup sugar, yolks of 4 eggs, 1 cup milk, 1 1/2 cups Roxane Cake Flour, 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, whites of 4 eggs, 8 cup broken walnut meats. Mix ingredients in order given and bake forty-five minutes in moderate oven. Cover with white icing, cream in squares and put one-half walnut on each.
