SEVENTEEN KILLED BY AMERICAN SOLDIERS

Border Battle Results in Death For One American While Two Others Are Wounded.

NOGALES, ARIZ., Nov. 27.—Francisco Villa's power is shattered. Having abandoned Nogales, Sonora, without firing a shot in its defense, the former powerful revolutionary chieftain is in retreat toward one of his refuges further south with only a small remnant of the army that supported him when he broke with Venustiano Carranza, now recognized by the United States and other countries as head of the de facto government of Mexico.

Gen. Obregon, the Carranza leader who occupied Nogales yesterday, said today that plans for a campaign against Juarez had already been made. The garrison of that town is understood to be ready to abandon Villa's cause as soon as the Carranzistas appear and demand its surrender.

MANY POINTS MADE AGAINST LINE OFFICIALS

Government Attorney Believes They Have Proven Vessels Carried Supplies to German Warships.

DEFENSES READY TO ADMIT ALL FACTS

Hamburg-American Steamship Co. Men Expect to Show That They Acted Within Their Rights.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The government expects to produce its strongest evidence next week, when the conspiracy trial against Karl Bueuz and other officials of the Hamburg-American Steamship Co. is resumed in the district court, and it is expected that the trial will be concluded within the week.

In the testimony thus far brought out the federal attorneys believe they have proved: 1.—That the Hamburg American line chartered 12 vessels in the United States, loaded and provisioned them here and sent them out to supply belligerent war vessels, in violation of our neutrality.

2.—That all of the supply ships filed false manifests and thereby obtained fraudulent clearance papers from United States customs officials. 3.—That none of the vessels ever reached the port of ultimate destination for which it cleared.

4.—That the defendant Hamburg-American officials, Bueuz, Koetter, Hachmeister and Poepplinghaus, were responsible for the acts alleged. 5.—That Capt. Boy-Ed, attache of the German embassy, paid out the money that financed the venture.

Admit All Facts. Counsel for the defense have admitted all the facts introduced by the government and still say they are confident of acquittal. As the case now stands they probably will submit no defense evidence but trust to argument.

In admitting that they chartered the ships and that some of them supplied German warships, the defendants assert they were within their rights. That the ships did not comply with their clearance papers, they say, was the fault of conditions. Some of the masters refused to sail; fires in the cargo and British warships interfered with the movements of others.

The defendants base their main plea on the attitude of the administration that the Hamburg-American line violated no international law, but only the United States customs regulations.

SA FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—Accused of leadership in a nation-wide plot to place bombs in ammunition factories and aboard Atlantic steamships carrying war supplies, Charles Carlos Crowley, special investigator for Dist. Atty. Fickert and former chief special agent of the Southern Pacific Railway Co. in San Francisco, was taken into custody here Friday by federal authorities. His arrest on a warrant followed two days of surveillance by Deputy U. S. Marshal Thomas Mulhall and Special Investigator Don Rathburn.

He is accused of complicity in the recent dynamiting of the Great Northern docks at Seattle.

Crowley emphatically denies his guilt, declaring that he will have no difficulty in proving his innocence.

MACHINISTS WILL WAIT NEXT MOVE

Hope to Hear From Studebaker—Parade is Held by Strikers.

Waiting for the Studebaker corporation to take the initiative and looking after routine matters in connection with the difficulties which led to their walk-out Friday, over 100 members of Progressive Lodge, No. 218, International Association of Machinists, gathered at Carpenters' hall Saturday morning in a closed meeting.

"We have decided to rest our case until Monday," said Chairman F. E. Maher, Saturday following the meeting, "and there will be nothing done until Monday at the earliest. We have heard nothing from the factory."

"I have nothing to say whatever for publication," was the statement of Pres't A. R. Erskine over an office phone at the Administration building. Mr. Erskine refused to be interviewed.

Three hundred men, half of which are Studebaker employees, met Friday night and decided to sit tight. The meeting was preceded by a long parade from the Carpenters' hall on Main st., to the Central Labor union headquarters on Michigan st., the Carpenters' hall being too small to accommodate the large attendance. The Central hall will serve as strike headquarters during the remainder of the difficulty.

Organizer Here. Harry Lecker of Fort Wayne, Indiana organizer of the International union, was present at the meeting. He will remain here to lead the union men until the matter is adjusted.

A number of speakers outlined the position of the men who walked out Friday. According to these speeches, no demands have been made of the corporation, except that the machinists be given an opportunity to arbitrate several matters with representatives of the company. This demand, the speakers stated, was refused by the company.

According to the sentiment expressed Friday night, no request for a conference will come from the men, but if the Studebaker corporation gives them a chance to state their requirements, the union will be glad to arbitrate the disputed questions.

Peace Advocated. Peaceful measures were emphasized by every speaker. No violence will be attempted, and no strenuous measures will be taken to prevent anyone seeking employment with the corporation. Those who try to fill the job of the strikers will be told by the union pickets that there is a strike on, and requested not to seek work at the Studebaker plant.

The matter of sanitary conditions around the Studebaker factory will be one of the questions taken up with the management in case arbitration is decided on, several of the speakers stated. According to a number of the men, the sanitary conditions were anything but perfect at the factory.

Congress Plans to Strike Back At England Through an Embargo

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—With the arrival here of a majority of the democratic senators to take part in the organization conferences which begin Monday, the certainty that retaliatory embargo legislation against Great Britain will be pressed became known. Just what form it is to take is as yet uncertain.

The advocates of such measures to force England and France to release their stranglehold on American trade are keeping their plans a secret. But Sen. Hoke Smith, who is to see the president early next week, made it plain that the southern cotton men do not intend to submit to present conditions any longer than they can help.

"The British restrictions have been such that we of the south have been powerless until now," said the senator significantly today, "but we are now due to have our inning."

It is expected that the conference of senators representing cotton states and those of the middle west where meat products and other export goods have been diverted into British ports although consigned to neutral nations will be held soon. At that conference a comprehensive program for concerted action will be adopted.

A great part of the shipments will prove a total loss. These are the Christmas goods, toys and the like which will be of no use a year from now and for which the American importers paid gold.

RIVAL FORCES WILL MEET IN BALKANS SOON

Anglo-French and German Allied Troops Are Expected to Face Each Other Within Few Days.

SERB ARMY IS BROKEN UP INTO SMALL BANDS

Allies Must Secure More Reinforcements Before They Will be Able to Invade Bulgaria.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Austro-German and Anglo-French troops are expected to be locked in the grip of battle in the Balkans since the present campaign opened. Hitherto the Bulgarians have opposed the French and British and the Austro-Hungarian and German soldiers have dealt with the Serbs and Montenegrins.

To offset the great drive into Bulgaria which the allies are planning, the German allies have renewed their pressure at every point in the Serbian zone of hostilities.

German military experts claim that the Serbian army has been broken up into small bands which are taking refuge in the mountains wherever they can find safety. Even Col. Repington of the Times, the foremost military writer in the United Kingdom, admits that the main Serbian army has been shattered. Col. Repington holds the view that the next big battle in the Balkans will see the German allies lined up against the Anglo-French forces.

That the allies realize the desperate task before them in the Balkans is shown by the tremendous pressure being exerted by Lord Kitchener, the British war secretary, to secure aid from every available quarter. If the German allies are able to overrun all of Serbia, Montenegro and Albania as they eventually hope to do, the allies will have to fight for an entrance upon neutral (Greek) soil, unless a drive into Bulgaria is successful.

However, the allies have not got a sufficiently strong army to attempt the invasion of Bulgaria on a big scale at present. They must wait for Russian and Italian help and also for reinforcements of Anglo-French soldiers. At present it requires the combined strength of the entente troops to hold the Bulgars.

There has been no further developments in the Balkan political situation within the past 24 hours, military operations overshadowing all else.

BERLIN (via wireless, via Sayville), Nov. 26.—An official statement issued through the Overseas News agency today, says "101,000 Serbians have been captured by the German, Austro-Hungarian and Bulgarian forces in the Balkans."

It further adds that, with the capture of Pristina and Mitrovitza, the last section of the railway between Uskub and Mitrovitza has been wrested from Serbian control.

Two thousand Austro-Hungarian prisoners held by the Serbs were released by the retreat of the Serbian army.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—After offering extraordinary resistance the Serbian army is now retreating on all its fronts. Southeast of Pristina the Serbians launched repeated counter attacks against the troops of Gen. von Kovesse and inflicted heavy losses on the Austro-German forces.

ITALY WILL SEND ARMY TO BALKANS

ROME, Nov. 27.—Assurances were given to Lord Kitchener, the British war secretary, that Italy will take an active part in the Balkan campaign. Lord Kitchener was told that the fall of Gorizia will release Italian forces for service in other fields and the capture of the Austrian stronghold is expected within a very short time.

With a big army freed from duty on the Isonzo front, Italy will be in a position to send an expedition into the Balkans to reinforce the Anglo-French troops.
