BUSINESS MEN EARLY VOTERS

First State-Wide Primaries Pass Off in South Bend Without a Hitch.

one voter had applied for a progressive ballot.

Candidates Keep Busy.

Political candidates spent the entire day urging their friends to get out and vote. It was reported that one candidate had five machines in charge of his co-workers that were lining up the voters in the west end and in the big seventh ward.

No word was received from the rural districts where a heavy vote is always polled. It was expected that the farmers and others living in the country would turn out in good numbers, however.

Constant vigilance was exercised by party workers and election officials to insure that there was no illegal rigging or that no mistakes in casting the ballot were made. Deputy election sheriffs were especially careful in the west end, and refused to allow more than three voters at a time in the voting rooms.

In the fourth precinct of the second ward there were 36 votes cast before 7 o'clock this morning. There had been 57 votes cast at 10:30 o'clock. The greatest rush was expected in the afternoon at both the third and fourth precincts.

Few estimates as to the comparative strength of the two parties in voting were made by the election officials. Save in one or two instances, the poll was about even. In the third precinct of the sixth ward, it was said that of a total of 30 votes cast, 15 had voted for democratic slates. This precinct has always been strongly democratic. In the third and fourth precincts of the second ward was swinging republican. Democratic leaders said that this would be offset by a heavy democratic vote which would be cast in the afternoon.

Many Slates Seen.

Many slates were in evidence Monday night and early Tuesday. The printed slates did not bear the names of the candidates but merely gave their numbers. The slates varied so greatly, however, that one narrowly "neutralized" the other. The slates were made by both parties and bore the numbers of some of the favored candidates.

There was practically no challenging of voters during the morning.

The election everywhere seemed to be working harmoniously. The only attempted challenge so far as it is known was made down in the second precinct of the first ward when one democratic voter was halted on the grounds of non-residence.

Following is a partial list of the votes cast up until 11 o'clock, with the 1914 registration:

Voting Light in South End. During the forenoon the voting in the south side was light. In the second precinct of the fifth ward there had been only 75 votes cast at noon and the prediction was that not more than 150 of the normal 450 would be cast. The heaviest voting at nearly all the fifth and seventh ward precincts was expected after 4 o'clock for the reason that most of the factories were to close at that time in order to give employees a chance to vote. With the exception of the fourth precinct of the seventh ward, where it was expected there close to the normal vote of 500 would be reached by 6 o'clock, it was the belief of the election clerks that full returns could be ready by 11 o'clock tonight at the latest. This allowed for twice the time usually spent in tabulating returns.

In the second precinct of the seventh ward there were 55 votes cast by 10:30. The normal vote is 375. In the fourth precinct of the seventh ward there were 90 votes cast at 11 o'clock. A total of close to 500 was expected during the day. In the third precinct of the fifth ward, where the normal vote is 450, there were 75 votes cast at 11:30. One challenge in this precinct was the only one in five precincts of the two wards during the forenoon.

Expect Afternoon Rush.

At 11 o'clock 126 ballots had been cast in the third precinct of the fourth ward, at the poll located at 705 N. Hill st. There are 600 voters in this precinct and it was expected there would be a rush on the polls after 12 o'clock. The voting was evenly split between the republicans and democrats, although the republicans predicted the heaviest vote in the precinct, which has always been democratic. This was denied by the democrats who claimed members of that party would cast the heavier vote before the day was over.

At 1 o'clock 133 votes had been cast in the first precinct of the fifth ward, the polls being located at the Sidney Unger cigar store on E. Jefferson Blvd. At the last election there were practically 400 votes cast in this precinct. Hope had it that the republicans were exceeding by active in this precinct and had outnumbered the democrats who had voted.

Voters in the third ward were rather inactive during the morning. At 1 o'clock 142 men had cast their ballot in the first precinct of the ward. At the last election 382 voted

Milk Men Change Attitude; Now Want Ordinance to Insure A Pure Product

Sentiment among milk dealers regarding regulation of the production, care and sale of milk has changed much in the past 12 months, according to Alvin L. Rogers, who spoke for 23 milk dealers before the committee of the whole of the common council Monday night relative to the milk ordinance now before that body. He declared that when a similar ordinance was brought up a year ago there was much opposition to it from practically all milk dealers but half a dozen favoring the legislation, but that since that time there has been a gradual change of opinion until now practically every dealer in the city wants the ordinance passed.

It was declared by Mr. Rogers that the people of the community are demanding a better grade of milk. No matter the price, they want a product that is clean and pure, according to Mr. Rogers, and the milk men are willing that any legislation for maintaining a high standard be enacted immediately. The committee decided to postpone definite action upon the ordinance until after May 4, when Dr. Charles E. North, New York consulting sanitarian, will speak here. He is an authority upon the subject of milk and those behind the ordinance believe that he will have some suggestions to make regarding the legislation which may be incorporated in the proposed law.

30 Sections in Ordinance.

Thirty sections are contained in the milk ordinance as it now stands. At least one-half of the ordinance is taken up with pointing out the method in which cows producing market milk shall be stabled and the care which shall be taken of the animals. Under the ordinance all stables shall be well constructed, lighted and ventilated, and must be fitted with plank, cement or other impervious floors having sanitary means of drainage. The ordinance prohibits the keeping of any other animal or fowl within the same room used for milking or the storing and handling of milk. The rooms must be painted or whitewashed at least once each year. Each cow must be kept clean and groomed and each yard or pasture used for cows shall be equipped with a proper receptacle for drinking and only fresh and pure water can be given the animals.

today," said Rep. Graham. "I want to be plain American." The house applauded vigorously as Republican Leader Mann strode down the aisle to make the final republican speech on the rule. He urged that the previous question be voted down and said that if it was so voted down he would vote for the Campbell sub-rule providing for a vote on a simple warning issue.

"We do not express any opinion on the subject of Americans traveling on belligerent ships by laying the McLemore resolution on the table unless such action could be construed as an invitation to American citizens to travel," he said. "I do not favor such invitation, for it may lead to war. The president has asked our opinion. Let us tell him freely, fully, frankly, that we do not desire complications which will lead to war."

GARRET CLOSES DEBATE.

Rep. Garret of Tennessee closed the debate on the rule for the democrats. "I support this proposition because it is asked by the president of my country," he said, "who by his position is today the foremost man of all the world and who is carrying the most tremendous responsibility that ever rested on any individual as the head of a neutral nation."

The house listened in tense silence to the vigorous debate. Prolonged applause which greeted the declarations of the administration leaders that the president was not for war and that the house by its vote must show a united country behind it, disturbed the rapid attention. Both floor and galleries crowded to overflowing, and closely to the arguments of the leaders as they analyzed the situation. Several times the applause that greeted praise for the president was so prolonged that Speaker Clark had trouble in bringing the house back to order and his gavel fell heavily on his desk.

understood to have paid high tribute to the work of the American diplomatic representative in London, Paris and Berlin. German public sentiment, the colonel is understood to have stated, is unalterably opposed to any concession to the United States and the German officials are compelled to take this into consideration in all of their negotiations.

All of the information brought by Col. House will be discussed at a conference between the president and Sec'y of State Lansing. At the same time it is expected that the appointment of the German ambassador regarding the invasion of man's submarine warfare will also be considered. Officials say that the so-called secret orders of the British admiralty seem to come into conflict with the position of this government regarding what constitutes defensive armed merchant ships. And whether this information will cause any change in the attitude of this government must now be determined by the president and Sec'y Lansing.

Inspectors and clerks at the voting place of the second precinct of the third ward, 527 S. Taylor st., had considerable trouble with a foreign voter during the afternoon. He passed the registration clerks and went into the booth to cast his ballot.

He had been in there sometime when he asked for information in regard to his ballot. One of the clerks went into the booth and found him laboring with his ballot and a slate. All of the names and numbers of the men he was trying to vote for were on the paper, but he was having trouble finding them on the ballot.

"You can't use that thing to vote with," said one of the clerks. "I won't vote, then," said the foreigner brokenly.

"You must either vote according to your own mind or you can't vote," he was told.

The law was explained to him and he stepped back into the booth to vote.
