

HAPPENINGS IN AND ABOUT TOWN

CHICAGO AD MEN ARE HERE FRIDAY

To be Principal Guests of Ad-Sell League at Banquet in Evening.

"Chicago Night" will be celebrated by the Ad-Sell league at the Oliver hotel on Friday night. A big crowd from the Advertising club of Chicago, headed by DeWitt Clough, president of the organization, will come to the city for the meeting.

Dinner will be served in the tap room of the Oliver hotel. About 100 members will be in attendance in addition to the Chicago guests, judging from the list of acceptance cards already in the hands of John E. DeHaven, secretary of the league.

Notre Dame News

Walsh hall formally opened the interhall social season at Notre Dame Wednesday night, with a smoker and an extended program of vaudeville in the K. of C. council rooms.

Notices to the effect that all students will be forbidden attendance at "balls and dances to which the public is indiscriminately invited" were posted in all the halls. This faculty ruling will permit attendance only at approved dances under church auspices in South Bend and at the several student affairs now being planned for the coming social year.

REP. BARNHART SPEAKS. Congressman Henry A. Barnhart gave a short talk at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary club at the Oliver hotel Wednesday noon, telling some of the queer incidents that happen in congress.

RECREATION BOARD MEETS. The recreation board held a brief business meeting at its office in the high school building Friday afternoon at which details of the winter work of the social centers and the playgrounds were discussed.

ABSYNIAN EMPEROR AFTER ANOTHER JOB

EMPEROR LIDZ-JASO.

Absynian emperors in this day and age rarely hold their jobs for any length of time. The 18-year-old Emperor Lidz Jaso, who succeeded to the throne in 1912, has been deposed. When Lidz Jaso came to the throne at the age of 16 years, he was hailed as a "strong man," but evidently he was not strong enough to keep his job as ruler of the little kingdom in northern Africa.

Indian Chief On Trail of Notre Dame Reporter

Lo! the poor Indian, but pity, too, the poor reporter who is hiding his scalp from a thirsty tomahawk. This game of hide and seek began last week when a student of the University of Notre Dame thought he would turn press agent, so he picked on Jackson Glen Berryhill, head big Injun from Sapulpa, Okla., and groomed him for publicity. Chief Berryhill made his debut in the News-Times of last Monday, but he did not like the way he was advertised and hesitated not the least in letting the world know his embarrassment. Through some friends he invited the reporter to come around to get a bigger story, but the wily newsgatherer, with no visions of a pipe of peace feast clouding his judgment, turned down the invitation. For he knew that if he faced the Indian some one else would have to write the story. When the transient press agent did not call around to his room in Walsh hall, Jackson's face flushed a deeper red and his slumbering anger woke like a sick man from a dream, and he muttered, "Ugh. Me greet om."

Berryhill Plans Revenge. He wrapped his blatant blanket tighter around his wide shoulders and slipped a rusty tomahawk in his hip pocket (he happened to be wearing his trousers at the time), but he did not stamp out of the room like the villain does in the second act—he merely sat down on his long pipe and with that stoical nature of his forefathers he sat and sat, planning a means whereby he could add another scalp to his mural decorations.

The reporter who lives in South Bend was in the habit of taking the 5:30 car to the city. Thursday as he was coming down the main path from the university building, he espied a helicopter colored blanket in the crowd of people waiting for the car. He lost no time in making tracks for cover. Jackson, indulging in Indian slang, waited at the car line until the supper bells called him to the mess room.

Betrayed by Blanket. The redman made several other attempts to get him, but his noisy blanket betrayed him. He has not tumbled to the cause of his failures, so we hope he does not see these lines. Since this little game started between the two, many stories are circulating around the campus that exaggerate the tone of romance in the life of the Oklahoman. At the risk of life and limb we are able to release a story which is so accurate that it needs but the signature of the hero to make it real. A year ago Jackson Glen Berryhill shook off the traces of the wild and woolly west, donned store clothes, and came to Notre Dame. His first appearance on the campus caused no excitement, for the students accustomed to Mexicans, Spaniards, Greeks, Filipinos, and Chinese did not note the peculiarities of the bronzed stranger. It was not until a week after school opened that Berryhill blossomed out as a "heap big Injun". He was called Chief.

Assigned to Brownson. Jackson was assigned quarters in Brownson, a dormitory hall, for it was thought the environment of the place would settle him. It did not. The novelty of his new surroundings, which at first made him timid, began to wear off and his second impressions were concealed in the mutterings of a new lingo. But Jackson liked the fellows and they liked him, but the Brownsonites would not forgive him the offense of wearing a zebra striped blanket which some Indian maid had given him before he kissed and said good-bye. Big Chief did not bring the blanket with him wherever he went, he wore it only on formal occasions, such as at the athletic contests and in the study hall. He could not bear to have his shoulders exposed in the study hall, so he got permission to wear the offensive blanket by pleading his infirmity to draughts.

Like the Sunday morning buns, the beds in the Brownson dormitory are hard, yet they were too soft for Chief to sleep in. He used to wrap his blanket around him and curl up on the floor. Many mornings when the prefect would look in his compartment and see no Indian and later at the breakfast table when he saw the Chief's place vacant, he went out with a horrible suspicion, but afterwards the Chief would be found asleep under his bed where he had rolled in the excitement of a healthy dream.

Regular Jim Thorpe. Many other customs were violated by this social incoerciat. But during his year's residence in Brownson hall he endeared himself in the hearts of the more active students. He played tackle on the Champion-Inter-Hall team and was never once scalped. He made a name for himself as a sprinter by doing the 40-yard dash fast enough to win a few points for Brownson. He was mixed up in every student prank on the campus and often had the laugh on the other fellows. He did not attempt the Glee club, but he used to entertain the boys by singing Indian songs. Thus a year passed in this fashion and Chief went home where he could shake off the trappings of the white man and roam over his father's great ranch with nothing but a feather and a blanket and a lively mustang to furnish excitement.

September interrupted his Arcadian simplicity for we find him

LABOR LEADER TO DELIVER ADDRESS

Samuel Gompers Will Discuss Legislation Affecting the Workingmen Tonight.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who is one of the most prominent labor leaders in the United States, will speak at the high school auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight under the auspices of the Central Labor union. He will speak on labor legislation as it affects the workingman, taking up laws that have been passed within the past few years.

Mr. Gompers is making a tour through several states, talking to laboring men and others interested in labor problems. Owing to his long career as an advocate of the rights of labor, he is able to discuss these subjects with as much authority as any speaker in the country. It is expected that Mr. Gompers will discuss the Adamson eight hour law, which has been made one of the issues in the present campaign, at considerable length. The labor leader favors the law and will point out the workings of the bill in his speech tonight. The eight hour law also will be considered by the speaker.

Charles E. Miller, president of the Central Labor union, will open the meeting and will introduce Joseph Sachaneck, the first president of the Central Labor union. Mr. Sachaneck is a co-member with Gompers of the cigarmakers union and will introduce the latter to the audience. Arrangements have been made to have the women who are members of the garment makers union usher at the meeting tonight.

To Address Students. Gompers arrived in the city at noon, coming here from Indianapolis, where he was scheduled to speak last night. This afternoon he speaks to the political economy students at Notre Dame university, an invitation to make an address having been extended to him by Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of the university. Rev. Cavanaugh invited Mr. Gompers to speak through E. C. Porter, secretary of the Central Labor union.

With the exception of one year Mr. Gompers has been president of the American Federation of Labor since 1882. He was one of the founders of the organization and has been editor of the official magazine. The labor leader is 66 years old, being born in England on Jan. 27, 1850. Ever since he was 15 years old he has been connected with the efforts to organize the working people. He is a cigarmaker by trade and has written a number of pamphlets on labor questions and labor movements. He is the author of "Labor in Europe and America."

back at Notre Dame, and in Brownson hall, too. His residence in this hall was short lived. The many new students could not understand the Oklahoman, and besides Chief was sick, and sore at the whole darn thing. He packed up his things and established his wigwam in Walsh hall, which is the place de luxe of the campus. Chief can now lock his door against any intruders and tell them to go to Brownson.

But the style and exclusiveness of his new home did not let Chief forget the yearnings for his real teepee back in Oklahoma. When the Haskell Indians played here a few weeks ago Chief was so overjoyed to see the old boys that he forgot to write a letter home for a week.

Berryhill is 22 years old, big, and muscular. "He would not be the reporter if they happened to meet," Chief is taking the commerce course newly established at Notre Dame, although he is the owner of a large ranch near his father's. He is till on the trail of the poison pen and will not listen to any offers of burying the hatchet. He is waiting his chance to bury it in the head of the reporter.

REPUBLICANS SPEAK. A. E. Martin and Fred Woodward were scheduled to speak at a republican meeting at the Gleaner hall at Granger Wednesday night, but Lenn J. Oare, Miller Guy, W. E. Cady and Charles A. Byers were sent to take their places. State issues were discussed by the speakers before an audience of 50 people.

DISCUSSES HYMN. Rev. J. L. Gardiner Begins Series of New Sermons. "Timely Messages from Great Hymns" is the subject of the series of sermons which Rev. James L. Gardiner, D. D., began Wednesday evening. "Nearer My God to Thee" was the subject of the sermon discussed by Dr. Gardiner, who gave an interesting interpretation of the meaning of the hymn. Preceding the services a dinner was served to 400 members of the congregation. The hymn that will be explained at the mid-week services next Wednesday will be "Jesus Lover of My Soul." Half a dozen other hymns will be discussed in the series. The Men's Bible class of St. Paul's church will hold a meeting in the church parlor this evening and Dr. Gardiner will give a talk. Friday evening a Halloween party will be held at the church under the auspices of the Epworth league.

The first of these, a meeting of the house, program, and the women's and men's athletic club committees, will be held Friday evening. Short talks by Miss E. E. Harmon on "Community Music" and by F. B. Barnes on "Community Center Work" were given at the meeting last night.

How to Judge a Woman by Her Hair. There are always the well-known and semi-humorous methods, such as saying brunettes are quick-tempered. But there is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge a woman's neatness. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good preparation made expressly for shampooing. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water when your shampoo is all ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth. —Adv.
