

RUSS FUTURE IS NOT BRIGHT SAYS MILITARY EXPERT

No Revival Until a Normal State of Living Comes.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—Russia's ability to export raw materials in the near future has been greatly overestimated by foreign countries in the opinion of Col. E. Englehard, formerly a member of the Russian Duma and a student of economic conditions in Russia before and after the revolution. In a talk with the correspondent he said that foreigners seem to fail to realize the collapse of the Russian transportation systems, reduced manpower and run-down condition of the Russian farm lands.

This comment was evoked by reports of the negotiations of Russian economic agents with Premier Lloyd George in London and the announcement that the United States had lifted prohibitions upon American trade with Soviet Russia.

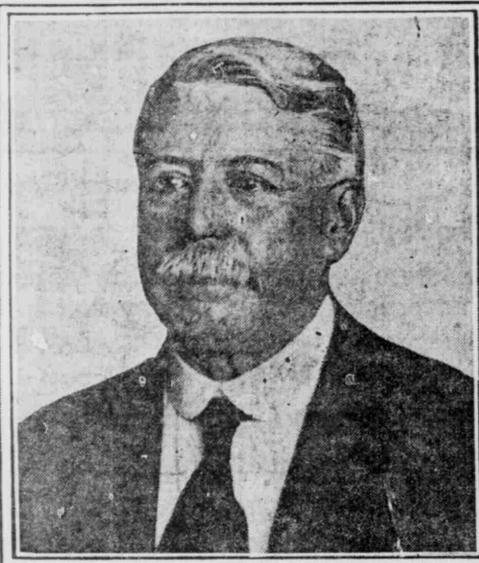

Col. Englehard is confident that Russia will again play an important role in European markets, but, he said, "the revival of Russian trade will not come until there shall be established a normal state of life when men shall renounce attempts of establishing immediately the paradise of communism."

"It should be borne in mind that European Russia has been greatly reduced in size," said Col. Englehard. "Formerly it had over 5,000,000 square kilometers of land and 17,000,000 inhabitants. Poland, Finland, a great part of the Caucasus and several Baltic provinces, with about 50,000,000 inhabitants and about 1,250,000 square kilometers of land have detached themselves. The greater part of these detached territories ordinarily had a notable surplus of grain and other farm products which constituted the major part of Russia's exports."

"In 1913, the last year when conditions were normal in Russia, exports were valued at 1,500,000,000 rubles, or $750,000,000. The greatest single item in the export list was grain. The total grain exports were 12,870,000 tons, valued at $25,000,000. European Russia used to harvest 58,500,000 tons of grain annually. With its reduced area, with the breaking up of big estates, lack of machinery and ruin wrought by continuous war in many of its most fertile areas it may be affirmed the grain harvest of the soviet republic will scarcely reach 31,500,000 tons annually. One cannot count on any considerable exportation of grain from soviet Russia in the immediate future. So far as Siberia and the provinces in Central Asia are concerned they used to produce 600 pounds of grain for each inhabitant. The Civil war must have reduced the normal very considerably and it is doubtful whether any considerable quantity of grain can be exported from Siberia."

Col. Englehard says livestock of all sorts has been reduced so greatly by the war that it is impossible

Running for Congress

Elias P. Dunn, staunch Republican, known throughout the land as "Farmer" Dunn, America's famous weather forecaster, has been entered as a contestant for Congress on the Republican ticket in the Ninth district of New Jersey. "I have predicted everything in the category of weather, from sunshine to showers, to cold waves and blizzards, but to forecast for political conditions as they appear between now and March 4, I shall have to add to my list a few calamitous features, such as volcanoes, earthquakes and landslides," was his answer when he was asked about the coming election.

to consider the exportation of meat or live animals. The Civil war in the Don and Kuban wiped out the sheep there and made the extensive exportation of wool impossible. The sugar industry is so disorganized and fuel so scarce he does not believe soviet Russia will be able to supply its local market for many years.

Flax is the one farm product which Col. Englehard believes soviet Russia will be able to export in large quantities immediately.

Oil is the greatest hope of the soviet government, in the opinion of Col. Englehard. Large quantities of oil still are stored and produced in the Bakur fields and it is the product which all the world is seeking. Fighting has interrupted the Bakur-Batumi pipeline repeatedly during the last few months, but Georgia and the bolsheviks have now reached an agreement and the prospects are better for oil sales in Batumi. "The strong oil field, which is entirely dependent upon the Vladikavkas railway for transportation is also in the hands of the bolsheviks, who have control of the railway and can readily transfer the product to Baku if rolling stock is available.

"But up to the present time the bolshevik regime has only diminished the production of oil," said Col. Englehard. "It seems certain that the nationalization of enterprises everywhere by the communists will work the same havoc in the oil fields that it has in Russian industries as a whole."

A "DEAD MEN'S CLUB" FOR LIVING SOLDIERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 19.—The formation of a "Dead Men's Club" out of the 2,000 ex-service men who, while living, are officially listed as killed in action is a probability, it was learned at national headquarters of the American Legion. William Wart of Akron, O., one of the "casualties" who was gassed and left on the field in Picardy, has suggested the formation of such an organization.
