

WHEN A WOMAN TELLS

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING.

I thought for a moment, as I watched the expression on the face of John Ames, that his memory was about to come back.

But in an instant the flash was gone and he looked dully at the floor.

"Come dear," Mrs. Ames drew her husband to his feet and, like an obedient child, he walked along beside her.

I couldn't help thinking, as they walked out, of how much John Ames would have given for that "dear" on a certain night when he had wanted to talk to Lila and she impatiently closed her door on him.

Probably that kindness then would have prevented this suffering now. But it is characteristic of us humans to think of things after it is too late.

"Terrible— isn't it?" I said, realizing as I uttered them how foolishly superfluous the words were.

Tom didn't answer for a long time. Finally:

"Yes, it's terrible, and I wonder how it is all going to work out. But what about yourself? Are you tired?"

It was gratifying to know that he at least thought of me sometimes.

"I am tired," I said, feeling suddenly dizzy and weak.

"You had probably better go up to your room and rest. I'll drop in again soon."

He was leaving, but just then Grace appeared in the doorway.

"Pardon—I didn't know you were here." There was nothing in her voice which should have troubled me, but her smile was almost too happy and it lingered on Tom's face. I couldn't answer her smile. I hadn't seen her since I had heard her voice that afternoon in Tom's office.

"How is Mr. Ames?" I heard her asking.

And in Tom's answer it seemed that I could find a tone too gentle.

Without a word to either I slipped out of the door and started up the stairs.

"Helga—are you ill?" There was concern in Tom's voice.

But had I answered, my voice would have broken—so I rushed on up the stairs into my own room and there cried the thing out.

Alone in my room that afternoon I decided that I should never see Tom Bradford again. My little "milk-pot" I tore up and as I dropped it into the waste basket I felt as if I was destroying my own heart.

COTTON CROP FAR BELOW NORMAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Cotton crop conditions are worse today than at any similar period in the history of the cotton growing industry, according to a report today by the department of agriculture.

Poor weather conditions and the boll weevil menace now reported to have covered nearly the entire cotton belt, were given as the causes for the extreme poor conditions.

The condition was today reported as 42.2 percent of normal, which is 12.2 lower than average.

The department states that the cotton fibre has been weakened and shortened by poor weather and predicts there will be almost no middle crop or "pop" crop.

Cited for Contempt, But is Released From Custody

Failure of Daniel B. Brink to comply with a court order directing him to pay into the clerk's office money for the support of his wife and fees for her attorney caused him to be cited for contempt in superior court No. 2 Monday morning. Brink, who is an elevator operator at the Oliver house, told the court that he earned but $70 monthly, that certain of his funds are tied up, and that it has been impossible for him to comply with the order.

Judge Fred C. Klein issued an order releasing certain funds tied up in the litigation with which the plaintiff could make his payments. Brink was practically $50 in arrears. The divorce case is set for an early hearing at which time final order for allowance or alimony will be made.

YOUR HEALTH

Below your tonsils, between the back of your mouth and your bronchial tubes, is a part of the breathing apparatus called the larynx.

On the outside of your throat is a prominence, very large in some persons, and often referred to as "Adam's apple." This is made of plates of gristle or cartilage, and is the front of your voice box. Stretched across the inside of this hollow space are the vocal cords. All the structures and parts make up the larynx.

Like all other divisions of the breathing machinery, the larynx is lined and covered in its every part by a very thin and delicate tissue, the mucous membrane. Like mucous membrane elsewhere in the body, the lining of the larynx may become inflamed. When it becomes diseased the condition is called laryngitis.

Symptoms and Causes.

Just what happens in laryngitis depends upon what parts of the larynx are involved and the severity of the inflammation.

The first symptom is hoarseness. It hurts to talk. There may be some itching and feeling of discomfort in the throat.

Whenever there is inflammation in any part of the throat—tonsils, pharynx or larynx—there is a constant inclination to swallow. It may hurt, but like putting the tongue in the hole from which a tooth has been pulled, it is difficult to resist.

In acute cases there may be some fever, increased heart action, headache and general discomfort.

In the chronic forms there is always a change in the voice. It may be simple hoarseness or complete loss of the power to speak. There is considerable mucus coughed up, and possibly some blood. Coughing is sometimes a prominent symptom.

Extension of a catarrhal inflammation from the nose and upper part of the throat may account for the laryngitis. You know the mucous membrane, beginning in the nose, passes down over the pharynx, through the larynx, into the bronchial tubes. There is no arbitrary division, marking the end of one organ and the beginning of the next. It is like a one-piece bathing suit in this respect.

Ways to Relief.

If you have neglected nasal catarrh, you may get catarrh of the middle-ear or laryngitis. The disease process simply spreads and extends. This is especially true if your general health is none too good.

Being in a dusty atmosphere, too long in bad air or breathing in great quantities of tobacco smoke may excite the trouble. Constipation and indigestion are important factors.

Needless to say, recurring attacks of laryngitis should lead you to a study of your habits, of your voice methods, and of your general health.

In an acute attack open the window and go to bed. Keep warm, open the bowels. Gargle with hot water if your throat is not too sore. If there is much discomfort spray your throat with hot boracic solution or some alkaline solution, like a teaspoonful of soda to half a pint of water.

Steam inhalations are useful. If the trouble does not respond speedily you should consult your doctor.

MILK TESTS SHOW IMPROVED AVERAGE

Inspector Wolfe's Report Indicates Gain in Butter-fat Contained.

Recent tests made by Inspector Roy H. Wolfe of the city board of health department show the analysis of milk sold to South Bend citizens of a slightly improved average, especially in respect to amount of butter-fat contained, as compared with his report of a month ago.

QUICK AID SENT TO NIGHT POLICE

Wife Tells of Her Husband's Experience—Says He is Improving.

"Since my husband took Peppen, his strength has increased and his health has improved wonderfully," says Mrs. Joseph H. Allen, of 2815 English Avenue, Indianapolis, wife of a night policeman.

"My husband's chief trouble, before he took Peppen, was indigestion. At times, especially after meals, he suffered from severe cramps and pains in his stomach. They were so severe they made him sick. As a result of the indigestion, he didn't get much from the food he ate and finally got so he could hardly do anything.

"We had been reading in the newspapers of the good Peppen was doing for Indianapolis people and when a friend recommended this medicine to us, my husband decided to try it. In a short time my husband started to improve. After that he got better rapidly. Now, the indigestion that troubled him before has been relieved. He has gained strength and, over a period of several months, his weight has increased 26 pounds."

"Peppen, the new tonic, has a beneficial effect upon the entire system. It has given relief in hundreds of thousands of cases. Try Peppen.

Peppen is a new system tonic which is sold and recommended by leading druggists everywhere. It is now being specially introduced at the following drug stores:

Stribel & Steinfeld, Central Pharmacy, Bastian's Drug Store, Wetteck's Drug Store, Red Cross Pharmacy.

Former Chef for Roosevelt Held As a Bootlegger

From the proud position of an expedition's chef to the business of bootlegging in the career of Mitchell (Baby) Page, arrested here Sunday on orders from authorities at Auburn, Ind.

Page, who standing up to the measuring stick at the police station, could not graze five feet, eight inches, and who weighs 225 pounds, proudly told of being a member of the late Theodore Roosevelt's expedition into Africa after wild game and his catering to the dietary wants of the famous colonel.

Sheriff H. H. Squires arrived from Auburn Monday morning and took Page with him. He will face charges of unlawful selling of liquor on arrival in that city.

Many Building Permits Issued During September

Number of permits issued by the city building commissioner's office in the city hall during September show the largest number for any month this year, a total of 274. This compares with 223 for August, 1921, and 182 for September, a year ago.

September permits totalled a valuation of $439,324, as compared with $1,028,518 for August. The August valuation, however, included the LaSalle hotel, at $250,000, and the Palace theater, also at $250,000. September, 1920, valuation figures showed a total of $169,950.

Permits issued last month included 82 dwellings, a marked increase over any previous month this year.

In South Bend have been convinced that News-Times Travel Accident Policies are genuine.

If The News-Times were to take the liberty to print a list of names of people who have registered for this insurance, they would furnish sufficient reason why you should also. The fact that South Bend's business men have recognized the merit of this protection, ought to make you know that it is the thing for you to do too.

The management of The News-Times derive a great amount of pleasure when in the despatch of their effort to be a successful institution they are able to do an individual good for each of its readers.

They were glad because they were able to procure this travel accident protection for you.

The National Casualty Company of Detroit, Mich., write these policies. They are sound and dependable. Read what "Best's Insurance Report" on "Casualty and Miscellaneous" says about them.

"History—This company was incorporated December 19, and began business December 31st, 1904, with $100,000 capital and $31,242.15 surplus paid in. It succeeded the National Protective Society, a cooperative company, which began business in 1894.

In 1910 the capital was increased to $200,000 by a stock dividend of $100,000.

During 1907 this company reinsured the business of the Fidelity Mutual Aid Association of San Francisco, and in 1908 the business of the Consolidated Casualty Company of Minneapolis, Minn.

It writes accident and health insurance only.

"Management and Reputation—The business transacted is mainly written on the industrial plan. During the past nine years the losses and expenses have been reasonable and the net result is an underwriting profit.

The control of the company lies with the directors, and the amount of stock owned by them at par value was $156,300 on December 31st, 1918.

The methods of the company in the settlement of claims were investigated by a special committee of Insurance Commissioners and found satisfactory.

BEST'S INSURANCE REPORTS ARE TO INSURANCE COMPANIES AND INSURANCE BUYERS WHAT DUNN & BRADSTREET ARE TO EVERY BUSINESS.
