ANCIENT TROY. EXTRACTS OF A LETTER FROM DR. SCHLIEMANN - HISTORICAL VALUE OF THE LATE ARCHAEOLOGICAL DISCOVERIES. The Troy (N. Y.) Times contains the following additional testimony from a private letter of Dr. Schliemann himself, going to show the validity of his early theories: It will, no doubt, be interesting to you and to our honored friend, Prof. North, to hear that Prof. H. G. Meyer in Vienna has already succeeded in deciphering ten of my Trojan inscriptions, all of which are in very primitive Cyprian character, but contain pure Greek words. This important fact is established, and the Trojan city, which has been the subject of so much controversy, as well as of all objects which came from the burnt city in 1873 to 33 feet below the surface, is now generally acknowledged to be between 1,500 and 2,000 years before Christ, while the Homeric city which was built about 900 years before Christ. But Troy's true date had remained in fresh memory, for it was sung in numerous rhapsoodes, and probably by hundreds of them before Homer, whose poems are alone preserved because they were the most popular of the time. The Troy, which dates from the fifteenth century before Christ, the Trojans of Iliad are described as fighting against Ramesses I, the Sesostris of the Greeks, while in the sculptures of Medinet-Abou at Thebes (Egypt) which date from the end of the fourth to the beginning of the fifth century before Christ, the Trojans still appear as one of the most powerful nations of the coast of the Mediterranean; but all these Trojans must derive from the prehistoric city which you find in 15 to 25 feet below the surface, on the top of Troy. No doubt, had been abandoned and uninhabited for centuries before the age of Homer, for the objects, and particularly the idols, found even in the highest prehistoric layers of ruins, show an immense difference in age when compared with those described by Homer; besides, the latter continually speaks of iron whereas I never found a trace of iron in any of the objects which I have discovered. Troy, and not even in the uppermost, which just precedes the Iliad of the Greek colony, John Murray, of London, who is well known by his guide books for travelers, is now going to publish my work on Troy in an English dress, and with I think, all my 218 tablets which he has got beautifully engraved. I trust this English translation will be well received all over the globe, for the world's enthusiasm for the Homeric story will never subside as long as our planet is inhabited by men. The Times adds: "It is a fact which has been long known, but we are informed to the effect that a plan of settlement has been agreed upon between Dr. Schliemann and the Turkish government, by which the former is to pay the barbarians one half of the value of the treasure taken from the site of ancient Troy. Three tablets have been chosen to make estimates of the value of the interests thus conceded to the Turkish government, and as soon as their report is made Dr. Schliemann will settle the demand, and come into undisputed possession of his treasure, which he values above all price."
