Died.

MEMPHIS, Feb. 17.—Hon. London C. Hays, for many years a prominent politician in this State, died last night of inflammation of the bowels.

The Ice Blockade.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 17.—The harbor here is effectively closed, preventing the Georges and other fishermen from getting out unless by cutting the ice.

Arrested.

JACKSON CITY, Feb. 17.—Hon. James B. Day, ex-Attorney General of the State, was arrested this morning by shooting himself. He was the Republican candidate last fall for County Clerk.

Fire-Accident.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 17.—Ten small houses in the western section of the city were burned last night. Loss about $100. Insurance small. They were owned chiefly by colored people.

Prize Fight Arranged.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Allen and Rooke today signed articles of agreement to fight within fifty miles of Pittsburgh at catch weight for $1,500 a side and the championship of America, on the 17th of June. They posted $500 each today. Chambers, of Philadelphia, represented Allen. Rooke was represented by Harry Hill, who has also been chosen stakeholder.

Probable Extra Session—The Tax Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17.—The probability of an extra session of Congress is now freely discussed, and many members think there is no doubt but that the Tax bill is regarded as being in a very critical position, and some of the leading Republicans do not hesitate to say the measure will be passed.

Speaker Blaine, among others, entertains this view, and tells his friends privately that the bill is practically dead. The Louisiana Committee held no meeting last night, as it was announced they would. The members of the committee are engaged in writing out their views preliminary to drawing up their report. It is probable that a meeting will be held some time today.

Signed.

The President today signed the joint resolutions authorizing the President to appoint a committee to attend the International Penitentiary Congress at Rome; also the act to facilitate the disposition of convicts from the penitentiaries of the United States, and for other purposes.

The Ice-Bound Fishing Vessels—Ship Lost at Sea, &c., &c.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 17.—The situation of the fishing fleet off Cape Cod remains unchanged. The ice increased in thickness and extent yesterday, and tug boats are trying to force their way through it to the vessels, but with small prospects. The revenue cutter Gallatin is trying to pull off the vessels that are ashore at West End.

The southwest wind that prevails tends to drive the ice into Provincetown harbor more firmly than before. Most of the fishermen have left their vessels and gone home. Those who remain have easy access to shore and plenty to eat and drink.

Boston harbor still remains open. The ship Olive, bound from Calcutta to Boston, was lost at sea, the crew being saved. She was loaded with coal, and was bound for Calcutta, and was consigned to Cyrus Wakefield of this city, and had a quantity of tin on board for New York parties.

The Olive was a new vessel of 930 tons, owned by H. Ellis, of London. The cargo was fully covered by insurance in Boston offices.

The affairs of Chicago, Dubuque & Minnesota and Chicago, Dubuque & Clinton Railroads are being discussed and reported upon by a meeting of the bondholders here today.

The Tilton-Beecher Trial.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 17.—After the close of the STAR's telegraphic report yesterday, Kate Carey, the woman who had been a nurse in Tilton's house in 1893, was called to the stand.

She testified that she saw Beecher at Tilton's house frequently, but usually at such hours as Tilton was away from home. She saw Beecher go into Mrs. Tilton's bed-room once, and Mrs. Tilton closed the door.

At another time she said she and Mrs. Tilton were up stairs when Beecher's arrival was announced. Mrs. Tilton went down. It was nearly dark then. Soon after witness went down stairs for a drink of water, and saw, through the opening doors, which were open, that Mrs. Tilton was sitting on Beecher's knee, with her hand on his shoulder, and heard them whispering together. Heard Beecher say, "How do you feel, Elizabeth?" and heard Mrs. Tilton reply, "Dear father, I feel so-so." Heard nothing more of their conversation.

On cross-examination she said she had never told him or any one until about a week ago, when she told a lady who visited her in the hospital.

She testified that Beecher frequently sent Mrs. Tilton baskets of flowers, and she and all of the servants knew from whom they came.

Tilton took the witness stand again. Regarding Mrs. Tilton's justification of her crime he said she maintained that she was not to be judged either by her mother or me, but by God. She believed that God would judge her tenderly; she said she loved God, and she did not believe that God would have permitted her to enter into those relations if they had been sinful, and she said particularly that neither her mother nor I had made it the business of our lives to understand what was right and wrong as Mr. Beecher did; that he was a great and holy man; that he had repeatedly assured her that their relationship was not sinful, and she did not see how it could be sinful; that he had told her that love justified all things; that love had various expressions; that one expression was the shake of the hand, another expression was the kiss of the lips, another expression was sexual intercourse; and it made very little difference what the expression was if that love was right; the love itself made right or justified all the various expressions of it, and that she truly believed before God that her love for Mr. Beecher was right, and his for her was right, and therefore she did not see how it could be sinful, and she did not see how it could be sinful.

At the opening of the trial today Fulton referred Tilton to his examination before the Committee of Plymouth Church and asked him to explain the answer he made on cross-examination regarding the publication of the scandal story at that investigation. Tilton said he told several persons, including Mr. and Mrs. Morse at a chance interview between himself and wife.

Bessie Turner heard the whole story of the unchaste proposal and impure advances. Evans took exception. The prosecution claimed the right to explain the whole story. Evans strongly objected to this explanation, and a discussion on this point ensued between the counsel. Evans claimed the prosecution was irregular, and citing authority to support his argument.

Judge Neilson admitted the explanation, and Evans took exception, as the effect of the explanation was to prejudice Bessie Turner's testimony. Tilton explained the whole story as he told it, and the adulterous intercourse of Beecher with his wife.

He was examined regarding the story as told to Mrs. Morse. He said he told it with no idea that she would repeat it to other persons.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 17.—Tilton was then questioned regarding his ideas on Communism, and about the Communist newspaper in France. In regard to the Winchester scandal, he explained that a young school girl went with him from Brooklyn by the advice of his wife.

There was no occasion for scandal at all. The lady's name was Sophie Lovejoy. In all witness visits to Mrs. Woodworth, she was never in the room. Witness was unwilling to sign the tripartite agreement until Bowen did so. He identified the letter in Beecher's hand-writing written to Mrs. Tilton at Monticello.

Evans claimed it was inadmissible, being written before the alleged adultery, and therefore confidential between husband and wife. Evans argued in favor of admitting the letters. Evans delivered a long and logical address, maintaining that their introduction would be a violation of the precedent. The argument was continued till recess, after which it was resumed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—House. The House met at 10 A. M. Mr. Russell, of Pennsylvania, at the conclusion of the reading of the Journal, promptly called for the regular order of business.

Mr. Daves, of Massachusetts, moved to suspend the rules and go into a Committee of the Whole on the tariff and tax bill, and pending that all general debate be limited to three-fourths of an hour, which motion was agreed to by a vote of 95 to 83, and the former by a vote of 95 to 83.

The House went into a Committee of the Whole, with Hale, of Maine, in the chair. Mr. Burdick, of Illinois, was recognized as entitled to the floor and said for the first time since the House came to the floor on the proposition to increase the revenues; and the question is, at once, is there any necessity to increase the revenues to meet what the expenses should be?

The House has just taken up the Tariff Bill and have terminated a general debate of three hours and a quarter. The impression of the bill will be when it comes to be voted on. The House will hold a session to-night to hear the reports from the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Butler will bring up the bill regulating telegraphs.

Mr. Cox, of New York, opposed the bill. He condemned the fluctuation of the tax on distilled spirits. He thought it had been proved that more revenue was raised when that tax was lowest. He would prefer to replace the tax on tea and coffee, but above all he desired economy. He considered our entire tariff system a fraud.

Special to the Star.

COZADALE, Feb. 17.—The store of Mr. Renshaw & Co., agents of THE STAR at this place, was broken open last night. The thieves pried off the window glass and broke the glass to get in. All they took away was a bag of coppers.

BOILER EXPLOSION.

One Man Killed and Others Seriously Injured.

Another fatal and melancholy accident, the fourth within the past few weeks, occurred this morning at Lane & Bodley's boiler manufactory, on the corner of John and Water streets, by which the victim, Harvey Clover, a middle aged man, about forty years of age, and a native of Michigan, met his death at about five minutes to twelve o'clock this morning.

The circumstances in the case appear to be as follows: About 7½ o'clock the workmen, as usual, began operations on the different boilers, and at 8 o'clock the work was going one about to be shipped off was begun.

The testing operation was proceeded with in the usual manner, and everything worked nicely until a pressure of something above a maximum point had been attained, when the back suddenly gave way, a piece of the boiler fell down, striking him down. Another piece of iron of some two feet in diameter struck him in the legs, crushing them almost instantly.

A few of the other workmen standing around were also struck, but with the exception of a few bruises, escaped any serious injury.

Great excitement was caused at the time among the laborers and mechanics in the other portion of the building immediately after the occurrence, and every one was eager to lend a helping hand to the unfortunate man.

Mr. Bodley, however, arrived on the scene in time to see the unfortunate man being conveyed to the Hospital where, upon arriving, it was proclaimed that he was past medical aid, and where he died at the time above stated.

The deceased leaves a family in Michigan, and had been working in this city for the past three years, during which time he was ever a faithful employee at the manufactory where he met with his untimely end.

The coroner has been notified and will probably hold the inquest this afternoon.
