Leaving out of account the two-column columns of advertisements printed by the New York Herald on that day in the special section devoted to the celebration of Brooklyn and New Jersey and appearing only in those editions, the record of "The Tribune" for April 18 surpassed that of the Herald for the same day by more than 100,000 lines. Even allowing the Herald all its claims, including the Brooklyn and New Jersey supplements, the New York Herald on that day fell short of "The Tribune" by more than 1,000 lines in the actual amount of advertising.

The exact figures are given as follows: The New York Herald of April 16 printed in its main edition, exclusive of its Brooklyn and New Jersey supplements, 77,625 square lines of advertisements. Including those supplements it claims 86,740. The Chicago Tribune printed that day 88,450 square lines of paid advertisements. The completion should be made in lines of eight characters, because the columns of the Herald are longer and contain 300 square lines, while those of the New York Herald contain only 288 lines of eight characters.

For the four Sundays ending April 16, the number of columns of advertisements in the New York Herald of April 16 printed in its main edition, exclusive of its Brooklyn and New Jersey supplements, was 1,007,280. In the same period of time "The Tribune" printed 1,084,430 columns of advertisements. All advertisements in the Herald are reduced to eight lines, give the New York Herald 300,362 square lines of advertisements. "The Tribune" printed 380,701 lines in that period. The excess was equal to eighty-one columns of the size of those of the New York Herald. Therefore the New York Herald printed an average of 20.25 columns less each Sunday than the Tribune.
