SPRING MAKES HIM HOMESICK.
Texan Afflicted With the Ailment Like the Cattle on the Range.

"You can talk about Christmas and Thanksgiving and the other holidays being the high-tide times for home sickness, but they aren't a circumstance to the first spring days."

The old Texan looked out of the window of his Broadway office, and eyed the trees in Trinity church yard wistfully while he talked with a Sun reporter.

"I can stand this blamed town all right, in winter," he went on, "and I can put in a summer at Bar Harbor without much groaning, but every year, when the first spring days come, I get so homesick that I'm actually maudlin.
Maybe a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, in the spring, but I know one old man whose fancy turns heavily to thoughts of Texas Great Scott! What wouldn't I give to be down there today, with a good horse under me, and a herd of cattle ahead of me and the prairie rolling off in big waves, to the horizon line. I'm homesick. I tell you. I'd rather be drunk."

"It's this soft hinting weather that has crept into me. That's nature. Why, the very cattle on the range get restless on such days and break away. If the boys miss any of the herd in the early spring, they don't fool around wondering where the brutes have gone.
They know the place to find them in on the range where they were born."

"I've known steers to go across county, straight as a die, through all kinds of obstacles, back to their old range.
Horses will do the same thing. I've had wild mustangs break away in the night and make tracks for the place where they were foaled. A man is only a higher order of brute, and he keeps a good many instincts, though he doesn't always recognize them."

"I've been sitting here by my desk, and every little while, without any reason or warning, I would find a shallow, pebbly stream running across my ledger and shutting out the figures while there by the inkstand a dirty little chap would lie on the bank, fishing with an old hickory rod. I don't believe I ever caught a fish in that creek, but I was a tremendous optimist and the Texan blew his nose angrily.

Have a Good Thing.

Stories of big tips given in Chicago's fashionable restaurants are outshone by the radiance of the following recital of a Philadelphia waiter to a Record reporter:

"Sometimes," said the waiter, "I make as much as $50 a week in tips." He stood in the palm roof of a fashionable cafe and said this without a blush.
"The lowest tip I get is half a dollar," he continued. "That is given me by the young man who brings his girl to luncheon, and, very properly, buys me wine, because he is not yet married to her. The man who buys wine with a luncheon for two has a bill to settle of $8 or $9, never less. The dinner and supper tips are the big ones. You, for instance, come to me and say: 'Henri, I am bringing five guests to dinner here tomorrow at 7. I wish to spend $50. Reserve that corner table for me and see that the flowers and the candles are beautiful. I'll drop in at noon to look over the menu you will draw up.' For my trouble you tip me, maybe, $5.

If your dinner party is a large one, and you spend on it, say $80, you may tip me $15 for a dinner without any swooning being done by me. The biggest tip I ever got was $50, but the man was drunk."

"A percentage of my tip goes, of course, to the head waiter. A man, by the way, who isn't tipped half enough is the fellow in the hall who looks after the hats and wraps. He gives you no check, and yet among the hundred guests whose things are in his charge he remembers you, and when you come out to go he has your wraps ready for you without any questioning or any delay. A wonderful memory the fellow has, but he doesn't make much money."

A Business Young Man.
"Mr. Spudlong," began the youth, hanging his hat on the back of the chair, "I will occupy only a few moments of your time. I have come to ask you for your daughter—" "Young man," said the elderly banker, "do you—"
"Yes, sir, I realize full well that she has been tenderly nurtured, and that she is very dear to you; also that her home is one in which she has been surrounded by every luxury. But she is willing to leave it."

"No, sir, I can't quite maintain her in the style to which she has been accustomed, but I have a good salary, and I'm ready to chance it. So is she."

"Will you—"

"No, sir, I would not expect to live with the family. I am able to buy and furnish a modest home for her."

"Young man," said Mr. Spudlong, looking at his watch, "I rather like your style. You can have her. Good—"
"Morning, sir.—Chicago Tribune

BUTCHERS WRAPPING PAPER.
The Old-Style Brown Straw Paper No Longer in Use.

A man who a few years ago carried home from the butcher's once in a while a brown paper-covered parcel as carefully concealed as a broad overcoat sleeve or a convenient newspaper made it possible, went into a butcher's the other day and asked what had become of the brown paper which was formerly used for wrapping up meat.

"Why is it you never see that kind of paper at your butcher's now?" he asked.

"You mean what they call straw paper, of course," said the butcher. "Oh, yes, that's a back number, almost.
You'll find it sometimes in a country butcher shop, but hardly ever nowadays in a city store. Why is it? Oh, the white paper is cheaper and more convenient."

"You might not think so, but that is true. Ten years ago we had nothing but the brown paper. It came in sheets and reams and it required a lot of handling and it was always in the way.
Now almost every meat store has rolls of white paper, from which the clerks can tear off a piece of exactly the right size."

"The brown paper was more porous than the white. As a matter of fact, the white paper is almost waterproof, whereas the old brown paper used to be soaked through in almost no time."

"It was partly on that account that people didn't like the brown paper.
Men didn't like to carry home their purchases in such hideous wrappings. Nowadays we can put up a piece of meat in a neat, compact bundle of white paper and slip that into a fresh, clean paper bag and it's a pleasure to carry it home.
That helps us, of course."

"There are a few places in the city where you will still find the brown paper. Those places are the big wholesale houses, and the only reason they keep it is that the drivers use the paper as a sort of carpet for their wagons.
The white paper, however, is sometimes used for that purpose."

"It might surprise you to know it, but we have calls for the brown paper once in a while now. The calls come for the most part from persons who have young children in the family.
Somebody discovered a while ago that you could make excellent bandages or poultices out of this brown paper soaked with vinegar. We have to refer all applicants for the paper to some wholesale paper house. Yes, the times are changing, and not always for the worst, by a long shot."—New York Sun.
