Spray Your Fruit Trees With a Standard Spray Pump

The past experience of farmers and fruit growers has demonstrated that careful attention to the spraying and cultivating of fruit trees is necessary to the life and product of the orchard.

The farmer cannot afford to spend his valuable time poising on a ladder, building elevated platforms or handling unwieldy extension rods, which are required with the ordinary spray pumps.

With the Standard Spray Pump the operator stands on the ground and covers the highest fruit tree with a spray with less effort and in less time than with any other spray pump on the market.

The Standard Spray Pump can be used for spraying orchards, gardens, vineyards, whitewashing, disinfecting chicken house, killing vermin on stock, washing bugies and windows. It is provided with two nozzles which can be arranged to throw a fine spray 28 feet; a coarser spray 35 feet or a solid stream 50 to 60 feet. Will take pleasure in showing you a standard spray pump in operation any day you call.

Geo. B. McCloud falls under train at Prescott—Formerly worked at Van Wert

The following account of the death of an unknown stranger, traveling under the name of Geo. B. McCloud, is taken from the Corning Union-Republican of April 4th. Inquiry at Van Wert developed that the fellow had been working for a couple of weeks at the depot hotel at Van Wert, giving his name as Geo. B. McCloud. He left Van Wert on Saturday before his death, telling the hotel people he was going to Chicago. He had worked at the hotel for two weeks as roustabout, drifting into the town a total stranger.

Sunday morning the crew of the west bound fast mail train reported at this station that a man had been killed by a train a short distance west of Prescott. The mail train was the first to pass the point after it became light enough to see, and the dead man was noticed by the fireman. Coroner Christie and Sheriff Larson, together with one or two other gentlemen, accordingly secured a hand car and went to the scene of the fatality, where they found the remains of a man scattered for about 100 yards along the side of the track. The unlucky individual had evidently been attempting to ride the iron rods underneath the cars of an east bound train during the night before, and by some slip had been thrown under the wheels. He could not possibly have been so mangled had he been struck by the engine of an approaching train. The remains were gathered up and brought to Corning, where they were taken to Christie's undertaking establishment, pending steps taken for their identification. The features were mangled beyond recognition, and the body was so torn that even the stature of the man could not be told. About the only means of identification were two letters found upon the person of the dead party, addressed to two different parties and with two different signatures. However, the letters were evidently written by the same hand. They were as follows:

Van Wert, Ia., March, 1906.
Mr. W. W. Bates, Kansas City
Dear Sir: I will write you a few lines to let you know where I am and what I am doing. I am railroading in Iowa now. I am breaking on the Burlington. Well how is business now? How is old Bert making it? I close for this time hoping to hear from you soon. Yours respectfully,
J. B. LEWIS.

Van Wert, Ia., March, 1906.
Mr. H. C. Heckert, Missouri Valley, Iowa.—Dear Sir:—I will write you a few lines to let you know where I am. I am working at this hotel as night clerk and am going to ask you if there would be any chance for me out with you this summer. I will do better this time. Write and let me know by return mail. Yours very respectfully,
GEORGE B. MC CLOUD.

Coroner Christie immediately communicated with the parties addressed in order to see if any clue to the identity of the writer might be found. He received the following answer to the letter addressed to H. C. Heckert, Missouri Valley:

Missouri Valley, Ia., April 1, 1906.

Mr. H. E. Christie—Dear Sir: Your letter asking information about George B. McCloud received. This man was about 5 feet 6 inches, slight built, weight about 135 pounds, light hair, fairly good looking, about 25 years old. He began work for me July 2, 1905, as dishwasher, and later worked as porter, then as night clerk. He was unknown to me but was a quiet boy and a good worker. He finally got drunk in September and I had trouble getting him off the place. He came back a few hours later and tried to use a knife on me. He told a party here in his maudlin talk that his people were well to do in Salt Lake City. That his father was a harness maker, also said he had stolen $1400 from some of his folks and had served a term in Utah penitentiary for this crime. As to the truth of that statement I do not know but he seemed to be a nice boy until this time. Also claimed to be acquainted with hospital work for the government. Kindly advise us later what you may learn concerning him.

HENRY C. HECKERT.

Following the clue to this last letter, Mr. Christie has written to the chief of police in Salt Lake City to see if any person corresponding to the ones mentioned in the letter can be found. The inquiry sent to W. W. Bates, Kansas City, has not been heard from at this writing.

Along the railway near the scene of the disaster was scattered change to the amount of $2.21, which with the letters and a pocket knife were all the articles belonging to the dead man that the searching party could find. The remnants of clothing were of a cheap variety. It was not thought advisable to hold the remains longer, and they were buried Tuesday afternoon.

Human Blood Marks.

A tale of horror was told by marks of human blood in the home of J. W. Williams, a well known merchant of Bac, Ky. He writes: "Twenty years ago I had severe hemorrhages of the lungs, and was near death when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It completely cured me and I have remained well ever since." It cures hemorrhages, chronic coughs, settled colds and bronchitis, and is the only known cure for weak lungs. Every bottle guaranteed by L. P. Van Werden druggist. 50c $1.00. Trial bottle free.

News came Monday afternoon of the death of Jaben Alden at the hospital in St. Joe where he was taken last week for an amputation of that afflicted hand. The operation was performed and it was thought he would recover, hence the news occasioned a more surprise to some. This is a sad blow to his aged and feeble mother who just after the death of her husband a few weeks ago, said "I have nothing to live for now only to help take care of Jaben." He had always been more or less a care to his home folks.—Pleasanton Index.
