IOWA PRODUCES CHEAP ALCOHOL. Green Corn cobs Yield Eleven Gallons To The Ton.

Ames, Iowa, Oct. 1.—Tests which has been made for the last two months in the experiment station of the State Agricultural college here have proven that denatured alcohol, for use as fuel, light and power, at a price that will be considerable lower than that of gasoline can be made from green corn cobs.

Green corn cobs to a great quantity are thrown away every year by canneries all over the United States. These were not only waste product but caused an expense as they soured and became so offensive it has been necessary to haul them away. The tests carried on here show that there are eleven gallons of alcohol in each ton of green corn cobs. The process of distillation is simple. A coverer carries the cobs to a grinding machine, where they are reduced to a pulp. This pulp is mixed with water and then brought to a boil. After being boiled a short time the yeast is put into the pulp and the whole mass is allowed to ferment. After that the usual process of distillation is followed.

The cost of manufacture is shown to be about 3 cents a gallon. Adding the costs of denaturation and a liberal profit to distiller and retailer, the product can be sold for at least as low as 20 cents a gallon, and perhaps for 16 to 18 cents.

The significance of these experiments is readily understood when it is known that gasoline sells for at least 22 cents a gallon. As an article of motive power alcohol would compete with gasoline. It has been hitherto established that a gallon of alcohol will produce at least 10 per cent more power than a gallon of gasoline. Therefore, with alcohol at 20 cents and gasoline at 22, it is manifest the alcohol would be easily the cheaper. In Germany a lamp is now made for burning alcohol with a Welsbach burner which produces a very strong, steady and high-grade light. Experiments testing this lamp with the most approved pattern kerosene lamps with round wicks and an equal candle power disclosed that a gallon of alcohol would keep the alcohol lamp burning twice as long as kerosene. Therefore with kerosene at as low a price as 15 cents, it would be 50 per cent more expensive for lighting purposes than alcohol made from corn cobs. It has already been estimated that at 25 and 30 cents a gallon alcohol could compete with kerosene. Comparison with results in foreign countries shows that nowhere has alcohol been produced at so low a price as this. In France the price has ranged from 30 to 50 cents, in Italy 32 to 38 cents, in Cuba 29 cents, in Germany, 27 to 29 cents.

Explanation of these higher prices is found in the fact that in Germany potatoes are used principally, in France beets, in Italy grains and in Cuba molasses is far the cheapest. And yet the Cubans, with the molasses right on their plantations, have not been able to bring the selling price below 29. In Germany, which has, perhaps, developed the denatured alcohol industry to the greatest extent, potatoes costing an average 27 cents per bushel are used for manufacture. In the United States the average cost of potatoes has been 45 cents. So if potatoes were to be used, it is manifest the cost of alcohol would be brought up to double that in Germany, or over 50 cents. It requires but 1.25 bushels of potatoes to produce a gallon of alcohol, as compared with almost 200 pounds of green corn cobs. But the important fact is cobs will cost practically nothing and potatoes close to 50 cents.
