Parker Rhodes.

On last Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Harless, in Osceola, Iowa, occurred the marriage of Miss Mary Rhodes, of Van Wert, and Mr. John Parker, of Decatur City, Rev. Davis, of the M. E. church, officiating.

Miss Rhodes is well known as one of the finest young ladies in Van Wert and is held in the highest esteem of her many friends who wish her great happiness in her new home at Decatur City, Iowa. Mary will be greatly missed by the Christian Sunday school and church people where she has been a faithful worker, and while we are the losers, Decatur City is to be congratulated on having her live among them.

Mr. Parker is a prosperous and successful barber at Decatur City, owning the shop in which he works. Mr. Parker was assistant for some time in Wheeler's barber shop at this place, where he conducted himself as a gentleman, winning the respect of our young people and the hand of the lady he chose to be his wife.

The happy couple came to the home of the bride's parents on the afternoon train where they were greeted by their many friends who had gathered to give them a suitable reception such as would produce a smile on the face of a rice merchant.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rhodes made ample preparation for their formal reception at eight o'clock, to which a few of the most intimate friends were invited. A number of uninvited guests came a little later in the evening and after confiscating the wedding cake and making a few noises like Indians were treated to cigars and candy and sent home rejoicing.

Many valuable gifts were presented to the happy pair as tokens of the love the community bears for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker departed Thursday for Leon where the groom's parents gave them a second reception and the day following they returned to Decatur City to make their future home.—Van Wert Record.

Farnes-Trogdon.

The wedding bells of Broadview rang for the first time at high noon on June 1st, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Trogdon, just east of the city, when Mr. Fred Farnes and Miss Geneva Trogdon were united in holy matrimony by Rev. A. J. Ferch of the First Congregational Church.

The occasion was one of the most pleasant affairs of the season. The rooms were tastefully decorated in green and white. The bride and groom took their places under a large floral arch and after the ceremony received the congratulations and well wishes of their many friends. The bride looked very charming in a dress of white batiste trimmed in ebony lace and carrying a bouquet of white flowers tied with long streamers of white ribbon. Following the ceremony a sumptuous repast was served. The remainder of the day was most enjoyable passed with music and pleasantries of the occasion.

Mr. Farnes is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Trogdon of Seymour, Iowa. She came to the community about a year ago, and has won for herself many friends, who join in well wishes.

The groom is a brother of Mrs. Trogdon and a young man of sterling qualities who enjoys the confidence of a host of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Farnes expect to reside on a ranch east of town where they will be at home to their many friends.—Broadview, Mont., Bulletin.

PICKETT'S CHARGE

AT GETTYSBURG

The Greatest Event in One of the World's Greatest Battles Graphically Told by the General's Widow at Our Chautauqua.

The Redpath-Vawter System and its patrons are alike fortunate in the engagement of Mrs. Lasalle Corbett Pickett for the season of 1909. She represents on the lecture platform that intangible something that all newspapers, magazines and platform seek, which belongs to and touches all our common humanity and which we call for lack of a better term, "human interest." She is a charming lady, with the beautiful memory of a brave and noble man. She comes with a laurel wreath to hang above his grave.

There is but one Pickett in history, the beau sabreur who saluted Lee on the fateful field of Gettysburg and asked for the order to charge. The fate of two republics hung upon Lee's nod that sent Pickett forward in the most magnificent and desperate infantry charge of all history. When the triple lines of gray moved to the attack across the historic meadows the genius of history rode on their bayonets and hovered over the thin blue line that manned the entrenched hills before them. When they reeled back, broken and decimated and dying, but unconquered and unconquerable, the Confederacy died. No more devoted men combed their hair as they smiled into the face of death at Thermopylae or laughed in the mouths of cannon at Balaklava than Pickett and his men. And so Pickett became history and of the grandeur of history.

It is his wife who comes to tell the story of her husband; the girl who married a soldier older than she and watched him go to battle with a heart gripped by fear, but soothed by the knowledge that he was hers, true as Bayard to every trust, a knight of the Eighteenth century. To Lasalle Corbett Pickett the prince of her girl's dreams and the husband of her wifehood lives as truly as though he moved by her side. Her story of her hero is sublime in its pathos and tenderness. It is part of the greatness of a great epoch and grips us as we listen with an intimate and personal interest in the man, the time and the women who waited at home. It is the vitagraph of many lives with one grand central figure glorified, a picture of human love and hope and suffering hung upon the walls of the temple of fame.

In thrilling, absorbing interest, in touching tenderness and true pathos, no platform attraction excels Mrs. Pickett. Her personality charms. She is magnetic, with the magnetism of the true woman; for Lasalle Corbett Pickett is to womanliness what her knight was to manhood.

"My child was burned terribly about the face, neck and chest. I applied Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The pain ceased and the child sank into a restful sleep."

John Deere RA-32 Automatic Cultivator

THE HORSES LIFT THE RIGS

IT IS not the price of labor, but what it is made to accomplish, that determines the cost of producing a crop. High-priced labor, working with the right kind of implements, is less expensive than cheap labor operating inefficient tools.

A few motions saved at the ends of each corn row enables the team and operator to accomplish considerable more work.

The ordinary cultivator requires at least six distinct motions in turning. The JOHN DEERE AUTOMATIC requires only two. Consequently, several more rows can be cultivated during the day and several more acres tended during the season.

When approaching the end of a row it is only necessary to release a lever and the pull of the team lifts the rigs. When the turn is completed, throw the lever down and the cultivator is ready for work again. There is only one lever to handle and no switching of the lines.

Rigs can be raised or lowered easily when team is standing still. Either rig, or both, can be raised or lowered same as on an ordinary cultivator without using the lever or automatic device.

The AUTOMATIC CULTIVATOR has the standard JOHN DEERE construction—it is durable.

Call and see this cultivator or send for descriptive booklet.
