'You've Got a Mayor Who Has Backbone, They Tell Me, Stand Back of Him' Scoville Says to Crowd.

Only Twenty Minutes Before Train Time 'Old Glory Face' Said He Would Speak Again This Evening.

This Was Given to Mission Worker Who Had Been Boy's Best Friend in Days He Was Down and Out.

CAMPAIGN FIGURES. Trail hitters last night, 42. Total trail hitters, 3,323. Attendance last night, 3,800. Total estimated attendance, 17,600.

Ed Card will speak again tonight at the tabernacle. This announcement was made early today by Guy S. Williams, the Scoville publicity manager, after the mission worker had agreed, late last night to stay.

'Old Glory Face' Card will speak again at the Scoville tabernacle tonight. Shortly after midnight last night, and only twenty minutes before his train time, the mission worker agreed to give Keokuk another night of his smile and songs and heart talks. He will speak preceding the sermon.

Charles Reign Scoville had finished his sermon last night—the last Wednesday night, as most of the campaign—and was in the midst of an impressive invitation service. The trail hitters were being applauded down the aisles in all parts of the building. The chorus and audience were singing 'He Surely Means Me.' It was the first time the 'raggy' song had been used for an invitation hymn.

Ed Card, mission worker of St. Louis, had been asked by Scoville to take his stand in front of the platform and to greet the converts with the evangelist. He stood, his face beaming, his arms outstretched, smiling jubilantly each time he shook the hand of a penitent.

'In a little while I shall be on my return trip to St. Louis. But before I go I want to say, friends, that I thank you all for your kindness. I want to thank Dr. Scoville most heartily for his invitation to be present at this wonderful meeting. I went down to the Y. M. C. A. today to the business men's lunch and do you know, I really got full. You know if there's anything a Methodist likes, it's chicken. We had plenty of it and a great time.'

Suddenly, out of the crowd, came a man. He was of middle age and plainly dressed. On either side of him was a woman. One was his wife, apparently, and the other his daughter. His arms were about them. All three were weeping. The man was unshaven and his eyes were red. As he took his place in 'glory row,' Card stepped to him, placed an arm around him and whispered a congratulatory word.

'Old Glory Face' will have a different story for the crowd tonight. He is 'chuck full' of tales of the mission life, any one of which is a treat and a sermon. Nineteen years of experience in the mission field have revealed to him all sides of the life the 'under dogs' lead. And, before his conversion, he was one of those 'under dogs,' himself, so he has seen rough seas from every angle.

'And, too, before I go, I want to say that Jesus Christ is the same, yesterday, today and forever. His power to save men from sin is being manifested every day, not only in the churches but in the underworld—among the down and outers. In the rescue missions of our land.

Card is in Demand. Mr. Card is one of the most noted mission workers in the world. His Sunshine mission at Sixteenth and Market streets in St. Louis, is a four story and basement structure, built at a cost of $100,000. He has spent some time in Europe and has spoken in every large city of the United States.

The Keokuk meeting is wonderful, he said last night. 'This is one of the happiest of times in my life. I think the crowds are amazing. I can't understand—I guess it just shows that the people are interested in God after all. I wish I could just stay till it was all over Sunday night!'

'It's Card,' I answered. 'Oh, is it you, Mr. Card?' came back the voice and the door was opened. I saw my boy was ill. I rushed him to a hospital and told them I wanted the best physician and the best nurse in the city; I tucked him in bed like his old mother used to tuck him in and I pilloved his head on a downy pillow.

Crowd Gives Cheer. Card turned to Dr. Scoville and handed him the vial. High in the air the revivalist held it and the crowd cheered wildly. When quiet had been restored Scoville spoke. 'We've had many a souvenir like this in our campaign,' he said. 'Here's a man who is cutting out the booze. Give him a cheer.'

Mr. Card will speak in Cedar Falls, Iowa, three times Sunday. He is in demand all over the country and spends many days traveling from one state to another to speak in churches—some of them among the largest and most stately edifices in the land.

'The boy went back to New York. He wore the watch. But his appetite for beer grew into an appetite for the stronger drinks and finally whiskey drove him from his mother's side, drove him from his father's home. For a time he lived with a sister in Pennsylvania. Whiskey finally drove him from her home. It was while he was in her house beastly drunk one night that she took the watch from him and kept it locked away for ten years.'

And the trail hitters continued to pour down the aisles until nearly an other half hour had come. And the bottle of 'red liquor' sat during it all upon the evangelist's pulpit, the contents sparkling and scintillating in the bottle like myriads of liquid diamonds.

'That's all,' he cried. 'That ends it. You've come to the right place, brother; Jesus is the only one who can put this dope out of your life.'

'Where did you find it?' he asked. 'Where did you find it?' he asked. She told him, how, back there in his clothes. 'What shall I do with it?' she asked.

Well dressed men and women made the pilgrimage to the front in late coats of the finer service. Little girls came—and little boys. Many brought their friends, left them in front and were swallowed up in the sea of faces as they sallied forth to talk 'Jesus' to others in the throng who had not yet gotten the sawdust on their shoes.

John Jenkins, tabernacle man, left Keokuk at 12:45 o'clock this morning for Nevada, Mo., where Dr. Scoville is scheduled to begin his campaign late next week. Mr. Jenkins will not return to Keokuk. Another member of the evangelistic company may leave for the Missouri town today or tomorrow, it was said this morning.

'My friends, you will pardon this personal allusion. I tell it only for Jesus' sake. He put a thin white hand out from under the quilt and said 'Give it to this prince of men. This man who fed me when I was hungry, who clothed me when I was naked, who pilloved my tired head, when I thought no one loved me. Give it to him.'

Dr. Scoville's sermon was one of the most eloquent he has preached. It was not long. But every word carried with it the essence of force and power that held the crowd still as death during the half hour that he talked. He grew dramatic at times and the grip he exercised over his auditors was not lessened when he drifted easily into some bit of pathos that brought tears from the crowd.

Dr. Scoville noticed that the walk had caught fire from a bonfire. Immediately he summoned the two 'lads' to his side and they rushed for the scene of the conflagration. Dr. Scoville procured a long pole, McElroy a bucket and Mr. Card his hat. They extinguished the blaze and as they returned to the evangelistic company's domicile the mission worker was heard to breathe heavily. 'Well, the chief, assistant chief and nothin' went to the fire, and they put 'er out!'

'I may never, never, meet you face to face on this mortal earth again. But my earnest plea is that we may see hundreds of you lining up for God in this service tonight. God bless you and keep you, one and all, and may there be none missing when at last the roll is called up there!'

Pentecost is Thine. He talked again upon the theme of 'Pentecost.' He referred again to 'the 3,000' that had been converted that memorable day in Jerusalem. 'And,' he cried, 'just as more than 3,000 have come down these aisles already, so God can save a hundred more tonight if you will only come.'

Missouri Republicans. EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., April 6.—Breakfast talk among the delegates to the republican state convention here this morning indicated that Jacob Babler of St. Louis, would be the new state committee man. Walter S. Dickey, who has senatorial aspirations, said the votes of the Kansas City delegation would swing with those of the St. Louisans. The St. Louis delegation today was reported lined up for Babler, who is chairman of the state committee. Thomas K. Niedringhaus, incumbent, said he would remain in the race 'to the bitter end.'

'I know one dish I can prepare for breakfast as well as any cook on earth,' said my husband one morning when the cook was ill and he had volunteered to help get breakfast. He appeared with his dish and I discovered it was Grape-Nuts which, of course, was easy to prepare for it, was perfectly cooked at the factory. But it was a good illustration of the convenience of having Grape-Nuts about.

'Have I painted the picture too dark?' he asked. 'Have I? Tell me, yes or no.'

Several booms, among them 'Hallelujah for vice president' are expected this afternoon when the gavel drops for the opening of the G. O. P. convocation.

'I may never, never, meet you face to face on this mortal earth again. But my earnest plea is that we may see hundreds of you lining up for God in this service tonight. God bless you and keep you, one and all, and may there be none missing when at last the roll is called up there!'

'You've got a new mayor, now,' he continued, 'a man who, they tell me, has a backbone and who will help you to clean up. Let's stand back of him and help him and may God bless him in his efforts for old Keokuk!' The shed rang with applause.

Brewery on Fire. CHICAGO, April 6.—Fire of unknown origin early today destroyed the south side branch of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing association at an estimated loss of $10,000. Families in two adjoining cottages were driven out.

BETTER FOR COMMUNITY. Keokuk's One-Newsplan Plan a Boon to Advertisers and Readers.

Bonaparte Record: The Gate City and The Constitution-Democrat of Keokuk have combined and will issue but one paper, and that on six evenings of each week. C. F. Skirvin will be general manager and C. E. Warwick will be business manager. They state that the combination was caused by high price of materials used, etc., and the fact that they were both covering the same field. The new plan will be better for all concerned. The advertisers and the readers will get more for their money, and the publishers should be able to drop some of their financial worries.

wouldn't be so many worthless fellows around the country filling that office; making a success of mature years is no difficult task, either. But having the faith of a boy in the ability of everything to 'turn out right'—what else is there so wholly worthy possessing?
