NEWBERRY TRYING TO REGAIN FARM

Former Well-to-do Lee County Man Files Action to Recover 1,189 Acres, Deeded for Mercantile Business.

HIS REASONS SET OUT

He Claims in Petition That Representations Made Were Fraudulent and Asks Court's Judgment.

The tragedy of misplaced confidence is written in a petition of seven pages filed in the district court here today by O. O. Newberry, a former well to do land owner of Lee county, against Walter I. Manny, John B. Connor and Dan Rariden. Mr. Newberry in his petition filed by his attorneys, Holstean and Hill of Burlington, asks that the warranty deed conveying his farm of 1,189 acres be rescinded and that the title be forever quieted in him; he asks for an accounting from the defendants for the land, and on this accounting that the court award him judgment; that the defendants be enjoined and restrained from disposing of all or any part of the land acquired, and for other relief.

The petition sets out that Mrs. Helen V. Newberry, wife of the plaintiff, finding that they had lost their farm, brooded over the matter and that she became ill and died as a result. Plaintiff sets out that through the alleged transactions recorded in the petition he has lost all of his farm in Lee county, and that it is being occupied now by Dan Rariden, one of defendants, and that he has reason to believe that the defendants are endeavoring to dispose of the holdings.

The First Transaction.
On April 25, 1913, and prior thereto, according to the petition on file today, plaintiff was the owner of a certain farm in Lee county comprising 1,189 acres. Defendant Walter I. Manny, it is alleged in the petition represented to plaintiff that he owned a certain mercantile business which was located at Mt. Sterling, Ill., and which would invoice at $20,000 and that the stock and good will would sell at forced sale any time for this amount. This representation, plaintiff alleged in the petition was fraudulent, and that defendants realized this.

Plaintiff was induced, he alleges in paragraph three, to make a trip to the Illinois town and was introduced to John B. Connor who represented that the good will and the stock of the goods was worth $20,000. Plaintiff alleges that defendants knew he was not familiar with mercantile business and that they induced him and his wife Helen V. Newberry, to enter into a written contract for the exchange of plaintiff's farm for $46,000 and that the deed was made.

The Texas Land Trade.
It is further alleged that the plaintiff was told that a certain D. A. Haws of Decatur was the owner of land in Texas which was worth $25 per acre, the land amounting to 440 acres. Plaintiff alleges that he was persuaded to trade his stock of merchandise for this Texas land. When he went to have the deed properly recorded he alleges he found that Haws was not the owner of the land, but that D. W. McWilliams was.

HOT WEATHER SLICK COURSE; ROLLING BALLS

The hot weather has done more than hurt the crops and drive people to distraction. Yes, far more. For it has sadly tampered with the ancient and honorable game of golf as played on the local country club links.

There is hardly a green blade of grass left on the entire course and the result is that the once green covering of the links is now dried and burned and slippery. The consequence is that the course is too fast for accurate play.

Where a player could formerly judge the distance his ball was to travel on the tender greens, he now trusts to fate for on the sun-dried, slippery links, the ball rolls and rolls and rolls, defeating the most accurate paying. The Country club golfers are praying for rain just as ardently as anybody.
