

EMBERS

They Relighted a
Flame of Love

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Paula Featherston was a creature of impulse. She had accepted her husband on impulse and married him on impulse. Before the honeymoon had waned she decided that she had made a mistake. Dick Featherston was a serious matter of fact fellow with a strong will. He never allowed his heart to run away with his head. If his wife was in error and he was sure she was in error he refused to condone the error.

Then, too, Dick was a different man socially from those to whom Paula had been accustomed. He was not a dancing man; he was not a social leader; he was just plain Dick Featherston, with not a ray of glitter in his make-up. When Paula had introduced him to one of her society friends the young woman said to her, "Not at all the kind of person I supposed you would marry."

Within a few years after the marriage of Dick and Paula there came a definite result to Paula's dissatisfaction with her husband. Denis Brown was exactly the kind of man her friends supposed she would marry. He was a cotillion leader, a club man, a lady killer. Denis saw that all was not right between Paula and her husband. He began by feeling a pride in being favored by a married woman. But he did not stop here. He persuaded Paula to leave her husband and child and go away with him.

The elopers were to meet near Dick Featherston's summer cottage by the sea. Paula started with a wildly beating heart. The journey seemed too short. When the train drew into the little station she paused for an instant on the platform and then ran down the steps to the highway which curved sharply away toward the sea.

Down a vista of golden hued maples she saw the blue water and the curling white crested waves. It was October, and all of the summer cottages were closed. There was an air of desolation in the boarded windows and the bare verandas. The wind was keen and there was a pungent smell of bayberries from the sandy bluffs that ran down to the beach.

Mrs. Featherston passed beyond the last small cottage and rounded a jutting point of land to turn into a cobblestone gateway that led to a more pretentious house. There were grassy lawns dappled with brilliant autumn leaves, and back of the house was a garage, but there was evidence that the place had been long untenanted.

Paula Featherston inserted a key in the front door and rather hesitated at the gust of musty air that rushed out as the sea breeze swept in.

When she had closed the door and stood within the silent house she hesitated again.

The dear familiarity of the hall struck some answering cord in her heart. She winced as she turned away and passed through the various rooms where the furniture was swathed in ghostly linen. Before one closed door she paused and then passed on.

It was her husband's library. It was useless to enter there. What she had come after was upstairs in her own boudoir. If she was to meet Denis Brown at the end of the beach road she must hasten.

In her boudoir she sat down before the little satinwood writing desk and unlocked it. It was growing late, and the room was quite dark. She went to the window and unfastened a shutter. It banged in the wind, and her fair hair was tossed into disorder before she finally fixed the catch and closed the sash.

She went back to the desk and opened a secret drawer which was stuffed full of letters. These she carried to the hearth and heaped into a little pyre and touched a match to it. The blue smoke curled spirally upward; then the papers burst into sudden flame.

Words stood out clearly here and there, brief messages out of the past written in letters of fire.

"The moments have been hours and the hours days. My dearest sweetheart, be careful of yourself. If anything should happen—Tomorrow I shall call you wife—my darling wife!"

With a flurry the last letter shot up the chimney, a black, charred thing, dead like their happiness. That was always the way when one expected too much of life, and Dick had been disappointing. He had curbed her in everything. No wonder she had rebelled.

She tried to laugh as she remembered her absurd happiness that evening when they arrived at Seaways to spend their honeymoon. They had made much ceremony about lighting the hearth fire in the library, and Dick had recited the "Hanging of the Crane" as they sat on the settle and watched the flames. Every year after that they had spent a few months at Seaways until last year, when the break came. Since then she had traveled the world over, the guest of the gay in every fashionable resort, while Dick pegged away in the Street, and baby Polly was spoiled by a doting grandmother.

Suddenly her face grew tense, and she closed her eyes. Things would be better after this, for she had made up her mind to go away with Denis own. Then—then Dick would have an excuse for withholding her freedom. As for Polly, why, Grandmother Featherston had undoubtedly weaned the baby away from her mother.

Paula's heart hardened, and she laughed unpleasantly. The Featherstons were all that way—proud and stiff necked and conventional to a fault. She could safely say that there was no ache in her heart for any one—Dick, baby Polly or any one!

She walked defiantly to the mirror and, removing her hat, looked closely at her fair face. She was as lovely as ever. The two years of strain and worry had not marred her beauty. She must keep herself lovely for Denis's sake. Denis was an artist, a dreamer, a lover of beauty, and if she had disappointed Dick, who was not a beauty worshipper, she must not fail to hold Denis's love forever.

A little terror took possession of her for the moment, but she shrugged impatiently and turned away from the glass.

Denis was to meet her at the end of the road, and they were to go in his car to Boston. She had wanted this hour to herself before she left Seaways forever.

Gently she closed the door and went toward the stairs. Halfway down the flight she stopped short.

From somewhere in the house came the smell of burning wood—it was cedar, perhaps driftwood—but, no; it couldn't be that. She was quite alone in the house.

It was merely her fancy. Something in the hour had brought back the past too vividly. How many times she had come down the stairs at twilight sensing that same pungent odor from the hearth fire in the library!

She must visit the library too. She wanted that dear picture of Polly from Dick's desk. He could have as many more taken as he chose, she thought bitterly, and he would have Polly too. Of course the Featherstons would teach Polly to despise her mother. But she must hasten; Denis would be waiting.

She turned the knob of the library door and entered.

Before the warm coziness of the room she stood in dazed wonderment. There was a great, roaring fire of driftwood on the hearth, and somewhere a gnarled bit of cedar was sending out fragrant blue smoke.

A red shaded lamp illuminated the room softly. Dick was writing at his desk, something big and splashing, in his dashing way.

Curled among the cushions on the settee was Polly, fast asleep.

A low table was drawn close to the fire, and on it were a singing kettle and some clumsily arranged tiny cups and saucers. Paula recognized them as Polly's cherished toys. There were other things—a pot of jam and some stale looking sweet biscuits. They might have been hurriedly rummaged from the chimney cupboard.

Paula saw these things in one swift glance. She also saw Dick's broad back as he bent over the desk. He did not turn his head at her entrance.

"I must go!" she told herself in wild alarm, but still she stood there, afraid to move.

Dick did not turn his head, but presently he spoke, carelessly:

"We've been waiting ages for you, dear. The kettle's boiling over. I've promised Polly that she shall pour the tea."

Paula leaned against the door and closed her eyes.

"Coming, Paula?" asked Dick after awhile.

She came forward and, resting her hands for support on the desk, leaned toward him.

"I—came here tonight—to—to run away with Denis Brown!" she said.

"Yes?"

"Well, you cannot want me to pour tea for you now?" she laughed bitterly.

"Polly is to pour tea," he reminded her gently. "Besides, you will want to say goodby to her."

"Ah!" she cried sharply. "You are cruel."

He was silent. His pen ceased to write, and she knew that he was staring into the fire.

He must have suffered. His dark hair was almost white.

Polly stirred, opened her eyes, yawned like a white kitten and stared at her mother with unbelieving joy.

"Oh, mummy, mummy!" she shrieked at last, and, tumbling off the settee, she came to Paula's outstretched arms.

For a long time Paula held her there, feeling her numbed heart slowly melting under the touch of the warm little body. Baby kisses smothered her face and throat, and little baby chuckles of endearment fell on her hungry ears.

At last Paula lifted wet eyes and looked straight at her husband. "I came after some letters of mine," she said honestly. "I must go now. This is the end."

Dick arose and went to the hearth fire. He stood there with an arm on the mantelpiece, his grave eyes searching her face.

"I'm sorry to spoil your plans, Paula," he said slowly, "but I can't allow any man to run away with my wife, you know. You've had a year or two of freedom, and when I heard—oh, well, he talked a little at the club about this, Polly, and I came down to stop it. I met Denis at the end of the road, I came around the other way by motor, and I thrashed him and sent him home."

A glad look came into Paula's face. "Dick!" she said softly, and she knew then that the hearth fire had never been dead. Something had blown the embers into the warm flame of love again.

"Come and make the tea, mummy," pleaded Polly.

GOTCH BREAKS LEG DURING EXHIBITION

KENOSHA, Wis., July 18.—Frank Gotch, champion wrestler of the world, is out of the game for an indefinite period, having suffered a fractured leg today during an exhibition. He was wrestling Bob Monograph of Chicago, a member of the circus with which Gotch is traveling when he caught his left foot between two mats and as he hurled himself upon Monograph for a hold he twisted the leg breaking the bone just above the ankle.

S. O. Gephart, at the examination, said the fibula was badly splintered.

A WAYWARD TONGUE

The chairman of the committee was addressing a meeting at a teachers' institute:

"My friends, the schoolwork is the bulwark of civilization. I mean—ah—"

He began to feel frightened.

"The bulwark is the schoolwork of civ—"

A smile could be felt.

"The workhouse is the bulwark of—"

He was evidently twisted.

"The schoolbul is the housework—"

An audible snigger spread over the audience.

"The bulwark—"

He was getting wild. So were his hearers. He mopped his perspiration glistened his teeth, and made a fresh start.

"The schoolhouse, my friends—"

A sigh of relief went up. Hamlet was himself again.

"NOTHING AILS THIS HAM"

"It Was Cured Last Week," Dealer Tells Him.

A colored man entered the general store of a small Ohio town and complained to the storekeeper that a ham he had purchased there a few days before had proved not to be good.

"The ham is alright, Joe," insisted the storekeeper.

"No, it ain't, boss," insisted the other. "Dat ham's sure bad."

"How can that be," continued the storekeeper, "when it was cured on my last week?"

Joe reflected solemnly a moment, and then suggested:

"Maybe it's done had a relapse."

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

The sage was carrying a big bundle as he stepped into the store for a ten cent out of chewing tobacco.

"It's a fright," he complained, as he detached a large corner of his purchase between his teeth. "It's this here modern extravagance I'm speakin' of. When I wuz a young feller an' wuz courtin' my wife, she wuz considered the best dressed gal in the township, an' the highest priced dress she had didn't cost more'n a dollar an' a half. 'Twuz made out of checkered gingham an' wuz real purty, too. Good enough fer anybody. An' now-a-days jest look at 'em. Lam' sakes, it's a crime the way they put on a lot of frills and fiddle-de-deos. Silk stockings and pany-maw hats an' fur topped shoes and sich. I'm agoin' it."

"What's that you have in your bundle, Uncle?"

"Jest been down to the dry goods store fer some stuff my daughter bought yistiday. Said it was a new fall suit, but there must be three'er four of 'em 'cause the ticket says thirty-one-seventy-nine. I ain't carin' though. Ain't goin' to have anybody say 'at my girl ain't fixed up as well as any of the rest of 'em. Nosir'."

LOOK GOOD—FEEL GOOD

No one can either feel good nor look good while suffering from constipation. Get rid of that tired, draggy, lifeless feeling by a treatment of Dr. Kings New Life Pills. Buy a box to-day, take one or two pills tonight, in the morning that stuffed, dull feeling is gone and you feel better at once. 25 cents at your druggist.

A good many of our citizens went to the Chautauqua, Friday afternoon to hear Bryan speak.

Mrs. Higgins and granddaughter, Rachel Wolf went to Audubon Thursday, to visit her son Chas. Higgins.

Mrs. Ross Higgins and children, went to Grinnell, Saturday, for an extended visit with her parents and friends.

J. Likens and F. Likens and families went to Lake Okoboji, Sunday, to spend the day.

J. A. Rutheford and family autted to Jefferson, Sunday, and visited with her sister, returning Tuesday morning.

Howard Rodgers went to Carroll, Thursday, on business.

Chas Wright of Montezuma, visited with his cousin, Ross Higgins, Thursday.

Jay Shingledecker went to Audubon, Thursday, to be present at the opening of the Chautauqua and visit his sister, Mrs. Ferguson.

Miss Rachel Wolf of Omaha, is here visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Higgins.

Chas. McLaughlin of Manning, was in our city, Monday morning.

Chris Jensen and Frank McLaughlin attended I. O. O. F. Lodge at Audubon, Monday night.

Mrs. G. E. Farrell was in Audubon between trains, Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Bert Aikman and children, who have been visiting her parents at Remsen, returned home, Friday evening.

Mrs. Higgins and Wilson were shopping in Manning, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rice are enjoying a visit this week with his sister, Mrs. Moore and daughter of Omaha.

Cameron Ross and John Shaw delivered some horses at Manning, Monday.

Frank Gray and Mrs. McMichael were in Manning, Tuesday.

Mrs. Glen Beer went to Council Bluffs, Thursday, to join her husband.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney and Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY and CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

HAMLIN

Mrs. Wm. Kroen and Elnora Christensen were Audubon visitors last Thursday.

Mr. Soren Sandbeck has been helping put up hay for Hans Rattenberg the last week.

Mr. Raymond and Fred Anderson and families spent Sunday afternoon in Marne, with relatives.

Mr. Jim Olson's sister who is in the Des Moines Hospital is getting along fine. We hope she will soon recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mortensen spent Sunday at the Soren Sandbeck home.

Hans Agaard family spent Sunday with M. S. Agaard's parents in Audubon.

Peter Mortensen and Soren Sandbeck and families autted to Elk Horn, Sunday evening to visit with Mrs. Mortensen's parents. Her father is quite sick with an attack of gall stone.

There was quite a number from Hamlin that attended the ball game

Exira Chautauqua

Brain Food for Sale
At Bargain Prices
Grab These Bargains

Average 15c per Big Double Number to Season Ticket Holders
35c to $1.00 Values

Victor's Venetian Marine Band
Produced by the famous organizer, Sig. Calfatty
Victor of New York

Nanah Rense
Charming, versatile, interpreter, "Peg O' My Heart" "Within The Law" "The Other Wise Man"

H. V. Adams
"Grapes of Gold" delivered 1,000 times. The Power of Suggestion.

Pamahasika's Performing Pets
"Educated" Birds, Dogs, Cats, Cockatoos, Monkeys, Macaws, etc.

Josephine Dominick Entertainment Party
Three fine artists—dialect interpretations, trios, soprano, violin.

Gov. H. A. Buchtel
Preacher, Governor, University Chancellor Lecturer

Mason's Jubilee Singers
Genuine Jubilee Program—Sunny Southland Songs and Stories.

James Bryan
Community Builder—A Real and Lasting Home Helper.

Mrs. J. Redding Cole
America's Greatest Woman Orator. Gifted Fearless

Hugh Anderson Operatic Company
Grand Opera "Martha" in costume—An unusual treat

Aug. 13 to 17 Inclusive

For further information see
Frank Dimick

Chas Van Gorder, Pres.
John McDaniels, V. Pres.
Ed. Delahoyde, Cashier

THE EXCHANGE BANK Exira, Iowa.

Transacts a General Banking Business
Collections Promptly attended to Money to Loan on Good Securities
Exchanges bought and Sold at Exira, Sunday. Elk Horn and Exdar played. The score was 13 to 11 in favor of Exira.

Prof. Victor Rasmussen is teaching the Danish school in Hamlin for a month or five weeks.

Lars Christoffersen was out to spend Sunday at Bertel Christoffersen's.

There has been a number of people from town spent Sunday and Monday at Chautauqua.