All over this land offices are being sought—not office-seekers.

The second session of the Fifty-second Congress convened on Monday.

Our readers are reminded of the fact that our Legislature is still in session.

Chattanooga, not to be outdone, experienced an earthquake shock last Friday.

The question of "adjournment" has come up again in our Legislature—an adjournment until after the Holiday.

SAM JONES, the world renowned Evangelist, will hold a series of meetings at Hopkinsville, beginning January 1st, 1893.

THERE were only seven safe robberies in one building and within one block of police headquarters the other evening, in Chicago.

BESIDES furnishing the three Congressional candidates for this district Daviess county polled the largest third party vote in the State.

AN extra session, if not immediately after the 4th of March, or the first session under Cleveland's administration will be something extra or an oddity.

A BILL to repeal in part an act to prohibit the sale, barter and traffic of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in Webster County has been introduced in the legislature, and will likely pass. It is known as House bill, 266.

THE Sunday Star, a society weekly paper in Louisville, is rapidly coming to the front. Mr. Brent Alsheler, its able editor, announces that the Star, will on Sunday, Dec. 18, issue a special edition of sixteen pages, profusely illustrated.

ALREADY a bill providing for the issue of $75,000,000 bonds, redeemable in coin at the option of the government after ten years, has been introduced into the lower House of Congress. The proceeds of this sale to be applied to the payment of the deficiency existing in the Treasury.

JAY GOULD, one of the richest men in America, died last Friday at his home in New York City, aged 56 years. He started life a poor boy but worked his way up step by step until he became one of the three wealthiest men in America. The bulk of his fortune was acquired in the last six years.

THE City Council of Chicago is taking initiative steps toward having Congress repeal all legislation prohibiting the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. In its memorial prepared for that purpose it reminds Congress that the Financial burden of the fair was laid upon Chicago and that she was not allowed a voice in the matter.

It has been given out from a trustworthy source that Surgeon Gen. Wyman, of the Marine Hospital service, will, in his annual report, shortly to be made public, make a strong plea for the suspension of immigration for the year 1893, as a precaution to keep the cholera out of the United States. The sentiment in favor of the suspension of immigration is growing very rapidly in Congress, and unless something shall occur to change it, some legislation looking to that end will almost surely go through at this session.

EASTERN Connecticut is considerably interested in a young peddler who trudges about the country with an enormous pack on his back, singing cheerfully and making money. His name is Samuel Ktdg-hufthubmystreim. He is called "Alphabet" for short. When he pronounces his name it sounds like an arm full of shingles blowing off a roof. There must be some great destiny awaiting this young man who carries a load 15 pounds heavier than himself and such a name. Without question, there is something heroic in his composition when he can bear this double burden and yet carol with the birds.—Cincinnati Post.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, Dec. 3, 1892.

As Democratic Congressmen assemble for the session of Congress it becomes apparent that there is going to be a very determined effort to induce Mr. Cleveland to call the Fifty-third Congress together soon after his inauguration. The talk that has been indulged in on both sides of the question for sometime has assumed the proportions of an earnest agitation and considerable feeling is developing. No matter what the slow-moving conservative business interests may require nor what the demands of the business interests may be the great mass of the Democratic Congressmen, who come from districts where the people are dissatisfied and have been elected upon the representation that Democratic success meant immediate relief from all ills, feel that if they do not get to work so as at least to appear to be doing something from the very jump they will stand a very poor show of being again chosen to stand in the boots of statesmen. It is believed that it will take a great deal of argument and influence to induce Mr. Cleveland to call an extra session, but there are those who are prepared to make a fight for it and to represent to him that if it is not done there will be music in the air for the Democratic party at the very next election. There is a suspicion in the minds of some of the radical tariff for revenue men that there is an element in the Democratic party composed of a few men who do not want to make any change in the tariff law which will to any considerable extent disturb protection. They suspect that these men will oppose an extra session and will do all they can to delay and mix up the tariff revision. Starting with a fight over the question of an extra session there may be some pretty lively sparring before the work gets well under way.

The personal bereavements of President Harrison have been of such a character as to entitle him to the sympathy of the whole people. None of his predecessors in office have ever been called upon to undergo such a succession of poignant griefs within his immediate household and administrative family. It is an experience that may be in some degree imagined, but only he who has added to the onerous and exacting cares of his high office the burden of repeated domestic afflictions can carefully understand the oppressiveness of its weight. Mr. Harrison has heretofore had, he will now more than ever have, heartfelt and unstinted, the condolence of his countrymen, and not only their condolence, but their admiration for the exalted fortitude which he has exhibited throughout his trying ordeals and the unwavering fidelity with which he has devoted himself to the performance of his great responsibilities. His heart, though heavy, is in his work, faithful in all things and constant to duty as the star to the pole. It would be a most gracious act on the part of the Congress, to which he is about to submit his last annual message, to extend to him in something more than a merely formal way its sympathy for his sorrows and its cordial recognition of the manly courage and heroic spirit of resignation with which he has borne them.

The estimates for the sundry civil appropriation bill are now being sent to the Capitol and being put into shape for drafting into a bill in the House Committee on Appropriations. The estimates are coming in by galley sheets and no footing of the total sum of the estimates can yet be made. There appears to be a general increase in the estimates over those of last year, but it cannot yet be ascertained how much the total will overrun! Unless some decided cut is made this bill as it passes Congress will be much heavier than last year. About $31,000,000 worth of river and harbor work was authorized at the last session to be contracted for, and if these contracts have been entered into in accordance with that authority the sundry civil bill of this year will have to carry the appropriations, as there will be no river and harbor bill.

Senator Dubois said today that it was his understanding of the policy of the Republicans of the Senate that they would make a vigorous and earnest fight against the revision of the tariff on the Democratic lines. He said that he did not think that the fight would go as far as filibustering or that any merely dilatory tactics would be resorted to, but it would be earnest enough to indicate very clearly that the Republicans intended to stand by their policy of protection. There was no probability of army tariff legislation this year, he said, and he thought the Republicans could make the fight and win the country back to the support of protection before the Democratic policy was well established.

The fuller publication of the Rothchild proposal to the monetary conference has provoked considerable discussion among those here who have been interesting themselves in the general financial problem. It is not thought at all probable that the proposition will meet with favor in Congress, even if the American delegates should approve of it, which is not expected. The administration, however, is very well pleased at the wide interest the conference is attracting and at the progress that is being made in the way of awakening European countries to a realization of the need of some sort of international agreement in the near future.

Mr. Whitney and ex-Gov. Campbell have both announced that they don't want Cabinet positions, but the commission that was trying to induce Pusey Gray to relinquish his claims is not ready to report. Would Carl Schurz take a Cabinet place if it were offered? Would Grover Cleveland shoot a duck?

LITERARY NOTES.

The holiday edition of "Tales from Town Topics," which is No. 6 of the series, shows an increase in size and contents, in addition to the collection of stories, poems and vignettes culled from the well known journal itself, an original novelette, seventy pages in length, entitled "The Sale of a Soul." The novelette is by C. M. S. McLellan, and it relates a story of metropolitan life in which a beautiful girl is raised from a Bowery saloon to the highest places in New York and London society. In its character and local character "The Sale of a Soul" is highly entertaining, while the melange gathered from Town Topics is of the unusual bright and graceful description.—Town Topics, 21 West Twenty-third street, New York.

The announcement that Fetter's Southern Magazine for December, which is the holiday number, would exceed the past numbers of this surprisingly popular publication, was received somewhat incredulously by the many readers of this magazine, as they, and in fact the whole reading public, had looked upon any further advancement as impossible, yet Messrs. Fetter & Shober, the publishers, in their advance notices announce many things of importance and interest to the patrons of the publication. In appearance the holiday number is extremely beautiful, and most appropriate. The cover pages are in white and gold, the evergreen holly, typical of the glad season of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to all Men." The frontispiece illustrating the beautiful ball poem, "December," by the rising young poet, W. H. Field, is from an original drawing by W. Bonneville Rhoades, the artist whose career since his return from Paris has been watched with greatest interest by the art-loving world.

The "Twice-a-Week" St. Louis Republic is unquestionably the best and cheapest national news journal published in this country. It has led the fight for Tariff Reform and stands without a rival as the leading representative Democratic paper of the United States. It is issued each Tuesday and Friday, fourteen to sixteen pages every week, for only one dollar a year—a great semi-weekly paper for the price of a weekly. It gives the news at least half a week earlier, and much more fully than any other. Everybody should subscribe for it now, and get the news, fresh and complete, during the closing months of the Republican administration, as well as the inauguration of Cleveland and Stevenson, when the Democratic party will be in absolute control of the Executive and Legislative Departments of the National Government. An extra copy will be sent free, for one year, to the sender of each club of four new subscribers, with four dollars. Write for free sample copies, and raise a club. Address the Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

Piles or Hemorrhoids.

This uncomfortable disease is the direct result of constipation. The hard matter in the intestines presses upon the veins, and finally engorges them in certain places with blood. Whoever has suffered from piles knows how painful and troublesome they are. To cure them we must abolish the cause, which is constipation. The patient and intelligent use of Carlsbad's German Liver Powder will do it. In old and chronic cases some little time may be required, but the good result is sure to follow. Price 25c at Robinson Bros.' drug store.

Why put on a common roof when you can buy the best? Cypress Shingles so cheap at Ruby's, Madisonville, Ky.

WHISTLE POSTS.

Asst. Supt. E. H. Mann was down over the Henderson division last Tuesday.

Section Foreman Pendegast and Armstrong, of Madisonville, attended divine worship here last Sunday.

Tom Harris is now prepared for a trip up Salt River, having through the kindness of a friend been provided with a through ticket up that stream.

A committee of railroad engineers called upon Chauncy Depew last week, asking an increase of wages on certain divisions of the road under his control.

Agent O'Connor is kept busy looking after the great demand for coke and other cars, and supplying the same. Foreign cars seem to be the most sought for.

Another locomotive blew up last week in Pennsylvania, instantly killing the engineer. Who ever heard of such an accident occurring on the Henderson division.

They say that Wash never killed those quails he claimed he did, and which he sent to that dispatcher. A poor shot can sometimes buy game cheaper than he can kill it.

James Spencer, a brakeman on the Henderson division, met with a painful accident a few days ago. He was making a coupling when one hand was caught and badly mashed.

No wonder Agent Schneider thought there was no place like Cedar Hill, as we now hear that in a few days one of the charming belles of that place will be led to the altar by him.

With the great care taken to prevent the robbery of cars, occasionally one is entered by thieves and the contents despoiled. It is hoped the day will soon come when such rascals will be made to wish they had pursued a more honest course to satisfy their longings, by being landed behind the bars where they belong.

Railroad companies may have just reason to kick upon the valuation placed upon their property in this State, which is something over $50,000,000, an amount $20,000,000 greater than their own valuation. It is a question open for discussion whether or not an inexperienced set of commissioners are more capable of saying what the taxable value of a railroad is than men who handle such property year after year.

At Weepka, Kan., railroads won a sweeping legal victory in the United States court last week. The attorney general of the United States had the pins knocked completely from under him in his fight on railroad associations. Judge Rainer handed down a lengthy and exhaustive opinion vindicating the right of the roads to form organizations and associations for the regulation of business and the prevention and demoralization in rates.

The death of Jay Gould, one of America's greatest railroad magnates, occurred last Friday. The great success he made at his calling shows what courage and brains can do. From a poor boy he worked his way up until his fortune was estimated at one hundred millions. Many stand ready to make the unjust claim that said millions were amassed through fraudulent means.

Yet the facts in the case don't show such to be true. He was, no doubt, the cause of thousands of others being able to lay up snug sums, derived from labor, provided by him. Such men as Mr. Gould do more for the laboring man than thousands like those who now cry against the means by which he secured his wealth.

Carelessness seems to have been the cause of some slight injuries received last week. First, a young man whose name we have been unable to learn, concluded he would mount a passing freight train near Guthrie and have a free ride. This he did, and from some unknown cause, jumped from the train while it was running, and was considerably shaken up, but only slightly damaged. He will, no doubt, hereafter prefer walking to stealing a ride. Next, Doc Doris, of Morton's Gap, failed to see an approaching train, and was struck, knocked off the track, and was severely injured, but to what extent we have been unable to learn. Rumor has it that the primary cause of the accident was the too free use of intoxicants, but for the truth of the charge we will not vouch.

The Paris correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung relates a comic incident which took place during some cheap trips on the Paris Havre railway. The pleasure seekers found only half the necessary quantity of carriages at their disposal, and at the station Harfleur the overplus was put into a number of cattle cars, which were quickly provided with seats made of boards set upon blocks of wood. No sooner did the ticket taker enter to demand their tickets than he was greeted with a chorus of well imitated "moos!" and the joke extending itself to all the other cars he at last desisted from his attempt. At the next halting station the station master began a remonstrance, but "Moo! moo! moo!" sounded so overpoweringly that he retired. The train finally arrived at the terminus, Montvillier. Here the passengers, imitating the awkward leaps of cattle, sprang through the gate by which traveling beasts usually leave the station. The station master caught one of them by the collar. This was the signal for the whole crowd to lower their heads and butt at him vigorously with terrible lowering, so that he was quickly obliged to take to his heels followed by a final triumphant "Moo." The whole company who had joined without premeditation in the joke, then broke out into a peal of laughter, and giving their tickets to a smiling official standing by peacefully left.
