News of the Mines.

The Sebree Oil and Gas Company have ceased work in the well recently drilled in which both oil and gas were found, it would seem, in sufficient quantities to justify further investigation. The reason for the suspension is not known.

At Henderson diamond drills are being utilized in testing the various coal veins from the surface to a depth of 800 feet, where it is expected the mammoth vein will be found. A good deal of reticence is displayed as to the "cores" obtained so far as driven, possibly 400 feet, but the known veins in that coal measure and the display of interest on the part of those immediately interested is an insurance that everything is most promising.—Marion Record.

The coal mines at Straight Creek, Carter county, Ky., have resumed operations after being shut down for the past two months.

The Reinecke Coal Company has improved its electrical equipment at its mines near Madisonville. The improvements consist of the enlargement of the engine and dynamo rooms, the installation of an entirely new dynamo and two new boilers, besides the complete rearrangement of the placing of the machinery according to the most approved modern ideas. The power house is to be equipped with a battery of six boilers, two practically new boilers of 250 horse power each, two dynamos of high power and the most improved build, to say nothing of the arrangement of the machinery in order to economize space and at the same time secure the best results.

The Manufacturers' Record speaking of the Kentucky Mineral Exhibit at the World's Fair says:

"The Kentucky exhibit is one of the showpieces of the Mines Building. Occupying a central position, it cannot fail to attract the interested attention of anyone who visits the building. On three sides it is inclosed with a wall of materials representative of the best-developed industries of the State in a mineral way. In the center of each wall there is a lofty arch, affording a commodious entrance way and forming a striking feature of the display. The east or main wall is made of canal coal set on a base of limestone. The central arch is made of canal coal from the mines of the Kentucky Block Canal Coal Co., of Cannel City, Ky. Inside the arch there are huge blocks of canal and other Kentucky coals. One of the blocks, the largest in the collection of canal coals, is 4x6 feet, and is exhibited by W. D. Archibald of the White Oak Cannel Co. of West Liberty, Ky. Some of the bituminous coals from various mines of the State are six feet high, and one measures eight feet two inches without a parting. The Northern Coal & Coke Co., makes a particularly interesting exhibit of large blocks of coal. The St. Bernard Mining Company exhibits sections of coal from its No. 11 mines six feet five inches thick, and from the No. 9 mine five feet six inches thick, together with coke made from a mixture of these two coals and Campbell washer for preparing it for the ovens, resulting in an extra fine coke. All the coals exhibited have excellent analyses attached."

Mr. John H. Tonkin, of Wilkes-barre, Pa., who it was reported several weeks ago as arranging for the development of coal lands near Wheatcroft, Webster county, Ky., is organizing the Rock Spring Coal and Coke Company with a capital of $100,000.

The Wallsend Coal and Coke Company with headquarters at Middlesboro, Ky., has filed articles of incorporation at Frankfort with $50,000 capital. The company has purchased and is now operating the property of the Pineville Coal Company at Wallsend, Ky.

The joint wage scale conference of union miners and operators in the Knoxville district has adjourned without reaching an agreement, but with a provision that the conference may be reconvened.

The erection of coal bins for local supply at No. 9 will engage the company carpenters next.

A dispatch from Birmingham, Ala., says that 50 nonunion miners from Kentucky and will go to work at the Brookside mines. It is reported that the operators have contracted for 1,000 miners to be brought to Birmingham from West Virginia and Kentucky to take the place of strikers.

SUICIDE

Attempted by Miss Nell Clark, of Crofton.—No Chance for Recovery.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Aug. 16.—Desperate over the discovery of alleged forgeries she had committed, Miss Nell Clark, a beautiful Christian county girl, attempted suicide today at her home near Crofton, by swallowing a capsule of corrosive sublimate. Physicians are working with her, but there is scarcely a chance for her recovery. Miss Clark is a member of one of the oldest and best families in North Christian county. She is a daughter of Joe Clark, a prominent farmer, and a granddaughter of the late Joab Clark, a pioneer citizen, and the founder of the Universalist Church in Kentucky. Last Saturday it was learned that checks for $550 and $30 on the account of Walter D. Bowles, a wealthy young Crofton farmer, which had been cashed for her by the Bank of Hopkinsville, were forgeries.

The bank officials had the Sheriff arrest Miss Clark and bring her to town Saturday night. She told where over $600 of the money had been placed for safe-keeping, and it was returned to the bank, and the parents agreed to pay the balance. Miss Clark claimed that Mr. Bowles had given her permission to draw the money. He recently came in possession of a large sum in cash, his share in Hopkins county mining lands which his mother lately sold for $50,000. Miss Clark has been living in the city several years, having left home, it is said after her parents interfered in a love affair. At that time she was prevented just in time from ending her life with carbolic acid. Since coming to this city she has been cashier in several stores and worked for some time in the telephone office. She is about twenty-three years of age.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 13.—A son and heir to the Russian throne has been born. The empress and the child are doing well. The birth occurred at 12:30 Friday afternoon. The child will be named Alexis.

The birth so greatly wished for, that of an heir to the Russian crown, occurred not in the grand palace at Peterhof, but in the Alexandra villa, one of a group of four small palaces in a secluded corner of the magnificent Peterhof park. In one of these buildings the empress had been living for some time. The other three are occupied by members of the imperial family, gathered there in expectation of the event, including the empress' mother, his majesty's two sisters, the Grand Duchesses Xenia and Olga, his brother, Grand Duke Michael, and other relatives.

Plattsburg, Mo., Aug. 16.—Lafayette W. Jones, a wealthy farmer living ten miles west of here, was shot and killed by his 15-year-old son, Hugh, Monday. Because he was not allowed to drive the family horse, the boy, with a loaded shotgun, lay in wait for his father, and shot him as he passed. Young Jones then reloaded the gun and fired again at the prostrate form of his father.

The boy was brought to this city and placed in jail.

IS TYPICALLY AMERICAN

Chief Characteristic of the World's Fair Its Commercial Value.

The Great Trading Communities of the World, Taking Their Cue From America, Sent Their Best.

St. Louis, Aug. 17.—"Three years ago I spent hundreds of dollars and several months of time in a trip to the coffee plantations of Brazil. In the three weeks that I shall spend at the World's fair, I expect to get almost as much valuable information about Brazilian coffee and the country generally, as I did on the tedious and expensive trip, not to speak of the sight I am having of the products of the world." Mr. Pearce O'Neal, a member of a well-known coffee importing house in New Orleans, made these statements at the Louisiana state building.

"It would be well," he went on, "if merchants throughout the country would realize that the fair has a commercial value for them as well as an opportunity to have a good time. The great trading communities of the world have sent men and money to St. Louis precisely for the purpose of educating the American public about themselves. I observe the most extensive exhibits are from commercial countries, and I am greatly surprised at the elaborate representation most of them have sent. The whole show is typically American, because it is strongest in representative American qualities. I find industry—the products of industry and the processes of it—paramount in six of the eight palaces in the main picture. Even the foreign countries have taken the cue, and each has put forth its best foot in the matter of industrial exhibits. I have been able to gauge exactly just where American methods are better than foreign ways, and just where we have something to learn.

"The people of the south will be the best patrons of the fair, I think, and to them it will bring the greatest good. We need its stimulus more than the north, which has been settled in manufacturing prosperity for years. Unless a great exposition could be held in New Orleans, St. Louis is the metropolis from that which its influence will spread farthest in the south."

Denver, Col., Aug. 17.—The News says:

Radium ore has been discovered at three different places in the Cripple Creek district. MARCHING HOSTS OF OLD VETERANS

Annual Parade of the Veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic in Boston.

THERE WERE THOUSANDS IN LINE AND MANY OTHER THOUSANDS OUT.

Forty-Two States and Territories Were Represented in the Column, Which Was Viewed by Hundreds of Thousands of Spectators Along the Route.

Boston, Aug. 17.—Tuesday dawned clear and fairly cool for the great parade of the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, and in honor of the occasion the day was generally observed as a holiday by all classes of business. During the night many trains came in with posts and delegations, and early in the day, when the crowded specials from points within 100 miles of Boston began to arrive, traffic at both the big terminals became choked. The people jammed the train sheds, and then, spreading out, began to fill the sidewalk space along the line of march.

Twenty-Five Thousand in Line. Early in the forenoon arrived the last division of the invading Grand Army. From California to Maine and Massachusetts and from the states between, a host had come, and at ten o'clock, the hour set for the parade to move, 25,000 men were in line.

Along the line of march, at every available point, viewing stands had been built, and these began to fill early. Arrangements had been made for veterans who were physically unable to engage in the parade, or who did not care to do so, to view the procession from a stand in Winthrop square. During the night final decorative touches were placed, and the center of the city was one mammoth display of flags, bunting and streamers of red, white and blue.

The Post of Honor.

In the formation of the parade, Edward H. Kinsley post, of Boston, was given the position of honor—that of escort to Gen. John C. Black, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. Chas. N. McConnell was chief of staff.

Forty-two states and two territories were represented in the column, besides the Potomac division, made up of the Old Guards of Washington, D. C. Each state comprised a division, with the exception of Massachusetts, which had two divisions, there being 135 posts in line from this state. New England posts numbered about 7,000 men; New York had two battalions, West Virginia 18 posts, Kentucky 12 posts, North Dakota 10 and Minnesota 13 posts. The Maryland delegation numbered about 1,000 men, and that from Ohio about 750. California was represented by two posts and Oregon by one. It was estimated that the column would require about three hours to pass one point.

Route of the Parade.

The parade moved from Arlington to Beacon street, up Beacon Hill, past the statehouse, where it was reviewed by Gov. Bates and state officials. At the city hall the parade was reviewed by Mayor Collins and the city council. At the Junction of Temple place and Tremont street the veterans met the most spectacular and picturesque feature of the entire route in the form of a "living flag," composed of 2,000 school children. Alternating ranks of girls wearing red and white dresses represented the stripes, while a square of blue-gowned ones formed a field of 45, carrying white stars, were placed in a way to give the effect of resting on the base of azure. As the line passed the children sang patriotic hymns.

Where the Veterans Viewed It.

Along Tremont street to Boylston street, where one continuous stand had been erected on the Common, 15,000 people viewed the parade, for the most part delegates to the G. A. R. and affiliated organizations and their applause for the soldiers, which had been spontaneous and loud along the line of march, became a tempest as the veterans moved past the continuous mass of people. On Boylston street, near Park square, Commander-in-Chief Black left his place at the head of the procession, and from a stand near by reviewed the line.
