First Tobacco in France.

Almost coevally with the introduction of tobacco into Spain did France obtain her first specimen of the weed from the hands of Jean Nicoit, French ambassador to Portugal, who, having obtained some seeds of the plant from a merchant of Lisbon, dutifully forwarded them to Queen Catherine de Medici with the label, "Herbe de la Chine," by which title tobacco in its medicinal use was to be known for the greater part of the next century.

Evidently Knew Them Both.

The bishop took a personal interest in all his servants, and, happening to pass the new maid, on his way through the back hall to the stables one day, he stopped to speak to her. "Well, child," he said, "and where are you?" "If you please, my lord," the maid replied, with a curtsy, "between the cook and the housemaid." "Heaven bless you!" said the bishop, after a moment's thought, and went on his way.

Optimistic Thought.

The block of granite which is an obstacle in the path of the weak becomes a stepping stone to the strong.

Visit Your Schools

How many of our school children's parents ever visit the schools or even know the teachers when they meet them on the street? How many know what their children are studying or how they are progressing? Is there any of you who have a building to make, or a fence to build; a dress to make, a house to paint or whatever the job may be, that say to the one you have employed: "Here are the tools and materials, go ahead and do it to suit yourself and it will suit me." Is that not what many of you are doing with your children? You say by your actions: "Here is my child with its books, paper and pencil, I've furnished him with materials and tools, educate him as you like."

Embarrassing Situation.

Capt. Tommy Munson was proud of his mustache. One evening there was a midsummer hop at the post. The lady with whom the gallant officer was dancing felt that her hair was falling over her ears, and in the course of the waltz managed to fix it up with a hair-pin. At the end of the dance poor Tommy was alarmed to find his mustache pinned up with the lady's hair-pin.

Some Odd Christian Names.

An appellant rejoicing in the curious name of Besia at the last sitting of the Somerset tribunal, caused an inquiry where he got it from. He replied from the Bible, where it is only mentioned once—I Chron. 7:39. There lived for many years in the village of Twerton, Bath, one named Miah. He was born a twin, and his parents thriftily divided the predestined name of Jeremiah between them, the other babe being christened Jere.—London Globe.

Human Blindness.

The great blessings of mankind are within us, and within our reach, but we shut our eyes and, like people in the dark, we fall foul upon the very thing we search for, without finding it.—Seneca.

For Bottle Labels.

Bottles in which chemicals are kept may have their paper labels protected by a thin coat of paraffin. This coating should extend at least one-quarter inch beyond the edge of the label.

TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY

From the vital statistics of the State Board of Health and other reliable sources we learn that our beloved State is seriously infected with the Great White Plague which is carrying death and desolation into thousands of our homes, and other wise interfering with the happiness, welfare and prosperity of our State. It has also been reliably reported that between five thousand and six thousand of our people die annually from consumption and that thirty thousand others are afflicted, who will ultimately die, unless they receive proper care and attention.

The medical profession has discovered that tuberculosis is caused by a specific germ conveyed in the sputum of those afflicted, and is therefore preventable, with proper care and supervision.

With a view to the suppression of this wide spread scourge, it has been commended by the Kentucky Tuberculosis Commission, as well as by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, that we hereby set apart December 3rd to 10th as Tuberculosis Week.

The physicians of the State are also requested to assist in the medical inspection of the school children of the various schools on medical inspection day, in order to discover children suffering from tuberculosis and to prevent the infection of others with whom they are associated.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal of the Commonwealth to be hereunto affixed.

Done at Frankfort the Second of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, and in the One hundred and twenty-fifth year of the Commonwealth.

By A. O. Stanley, Governor of Kentucky,
 By James P. Lewis, Secretary of State,
 By J. A. Scott, Assistant Secretary of State.

A Good Word For Our School Teachers

One thing can be truthfully said of the teachers in our schools at the present time, their daily walk and conversation, and their moral lives are such as to form a good example for their pupils. Our pupils can safely follow the example of the teacher. "When the roll is called up yonder" the teachers of our schools can all answer present. Good morals and good manners are taught in our schools and the worthy example set by our present corps of teachers has a great influence in moulding the character of the youth of our city.

Wife Had Him There.

"Henry," said his wife reproachfully, "do you know that it was three o'clock when you came home this morning?" "You are mistaken, my dear," he replied. "It was just half-past one. I looked at the clock on the church tower as I passed the corner." "Far be it from me to doubt your word, Henry," answered his wife, "but if that is the case it must have taken you an hour and a half to reach the front door."

Effect of Tides.

For a long time it has been known that the tides act as a brake on the rotating earth and that they tend to lengthen the day. The effect is, however, so slight that it cannot be measured in any length of time at man's disposal. MacMillan has made the necessary computation by the formula used by engineers. He finds for the increase of the length of the day one second in 460,000 years.

Substitute for Gold.

A substitute for gold is obtained by combining 94 parts of copper with 6 parts of antimony and adding a little magnesium carbonate to increase the weight. It is said that this alloy can be drawn, wrought and soldered very much like gold, and that it also receives and retains a golden polish. It is worth something like 25 cents a pound.

Chance for Genius.

Judging by the number of fats who want to get thin, and the number of things who want to get fat, a fortune awaits some Old Doc who will scheme out a method of painless transfusion of adipose.

Push Always Necessary.

In order to succeed you must have push. You can't even run a lawn mower without it.

OLD KAINTUCK GOING DRY

Old Kaintuck, the land of fair women and fast horses, not to mention the whiskey, is going dry. The very broodmares in the meadows are looking over the fences and whickering in amazement. The recognized journalistic leaders of the whiskey interests have declared that a vote is inevitable at some time and the contest may as well come now. The sentiment of the state is overwhelmingly dry but is held in leash by the fear of displacing the large amount of capital invested in the distilling business.

The result of whiskey domination in this state has startled Kentucky citizens. Blessed with a beneficent climate and a wonderful limestone soil which grows everything from grain to brawny men, possessing a beautiful landscape which ranges from majestic mountains into the rolling pastures of the bluegrass, the land of the colons, and kernels should yield to no state of the American Union in the happiness and prosperity of its citizens.

But the state is cursed with an overshadowing, brooding curse which blots contentment from the picture of her prosperity.

The two penitentiaries at Frankfort and Eddyville are filled to overflowing. The distilleries which mar the little valleys and send a telltale wreath of smoke over the summits of the mountains are grinding anarchy out of independence, poverty from humble plenty. The fued has been found to worm its deadly length from the moonshiner's bottle of "corn juice." The 1910 census sobered the people of the state by startling revelations that, despite the lure of the far-famed bluegrass, the population had increased only slightly, while other Southern states were forging ahead in the night. Education has been hampered by want of funds which have been yielded an unwilling tribute to the liquor trust. Legitimate business is being gradually choked to death by the whiskey octopus which controls the city banks and holds capital in its unproductive grasp. The people groan under an incubus the like of which is not known in another state of the nation.

Kentucky is facing such a campaign of liquor falsehood as has never been before witnessed. It will require splendid organization, an army of workers, and constant, well-placed educational publicity to win the state for prohibition but with the proper campaign victory is inevitable.

Killed Her Engine.

A three-year-old Columbus girl, who had been motoring frequently last summer with her father and mother, seems to have absorbed some of the talk she overheard. She was dragging a little chair across the floor at home, when it struck an obstruction, and her progress across the room was stopped. "Whoa," she exclaimed, "I've killed my engine."—Indianapolis News.

Change Sued Him.

Roxanne Box—"Harold, may I ask the clergyman to omit from the marriage service the word 'obey'?" Harold Hardup—"Certainly, darling. Just tell him to make it 'love, honor and supply.'"—Puck.

Coffee and Nerves.

It is a fact beyond dispute that tea and coffee act on the nervous system and that they are dangerous if used too freely. A moderate use of either (or both) is probably harmless, if not made too strong.

Uncle Eben.

"De man dat's afraid of bein' bossed by a wife," said Uncle Eben, "generally finds hisself bossed by all de help in a boardin' house."

Tricky Japanese.

The adulteration of rice with quartz sand to add to its weight has been discovered in Japan.

RUN-DOWN WOMAN Made Strong By Our Vinol

Fort Edward, N. Y.—"I was in a run-down, nervous and weak condition, so I could not do the housework for my little family of three. I had taken cod liver oil emulsions and other remedies without benefit. A friend told me about Vinol. I tried it and it soon built up my strength and made me a well woman as I now do all of my housework."—Mrs. ELLEN GILMER.
