Dust and Dusting.

People are slow indeed to recognize how formidable an enemy they have in dust, especially dust in the home, which is the one place where it could and should be treated with some recognition of its dangerous power. Outdoors one must encounter it all the time, willy nilly, but it has been proved by scientific experiment that at its worst the air outdoors has fewer harmful germs in it than the air where people are closely congregated.

At the very worst that the biggest and dirtiest cities can do, there is such a splendid vastness about the great open spaces of "outdoors" that it may be trusted to dilute danger to the safety-point. But in most public places of meeting and in almost all dwelling houses it is a different story, and this largely because people will not put their minds to the subject.

Old-fashioned cleaning meant do the very worst you can to stir up all the dust you can find, and knock it about the place. It will settle again shortly, it is true, and some of it inevitably in your nose and throat, but never mind. Grandma was a splendid housekeeper, and when she swept, you could not see yourself for dust, and she lived to be ninety! Perhaps if she had used a vacuum-cleaner she might be alive yet. But we cannot all have vacuum cleaners even today, although it looks as if that good time may be coming.

In the meantime it should be easy for all to learn and remember that dust has one great foe that it will never be able to resist, and that is moisture. As salt is supposed to be on the tail of a bird, so is moisture on the tail of dust. This moisture may take the form best suited to the material to be cleaned—it may be water sometimes and oil sometimes, and very little of either. Where floors are covered with stationary carpets, damp sawdust or tea-leaves or pieces of wet newspaper should be thrown down to catch the dust as it is swept up.

Everything that can be carried out into the air to be swept or shaken or beaten should be so carried. Many persons seem to labor under a delusion that simply hanging things up outside and leaving them motionless is sufficient. They call it "sunning" them, and this is very well for the little way it goes; but unless it is a very windy day, the things go back to the house with the same germs in them that they took out.

Finally, in the name of the brotherhood of man, we protest against the whiskbroom of the railroad porter as an offense against order and decency, as it should be against law.

Science Notes.

The cucumber usually has a temperature one degree lower than that of the surrounding atmosphere. Hence the expression "cool as a cucumber."

The village of Aumone in France is said to be the healthiest place in Europe. It has only forty inhabitants, twenty-three of whom are over eighty years old, and one is over 100.

The report from Canada that a great lake has been discovered in the Northwest of the colony is a reminder that the common belief that explorers have now nothing to conquer save some polar region is very far from the truth. Vast tracts of the North American continent are still virgin ground, the extensive nature of which may be gathered from the statement that the newly found lake is 375 miles long and more than 150 miles wide.

Quite recently the large wireless station at Nauen, near Berlin, has maintained communication with a steamer of the Woermann Line during the whole of the journey from Hamburg to West Africa, and continued to exchange messages with it after it had come to anchor at the Cameroons. From there to Nauen the distance is roughly 4,000 miles, and the wireless waves had to negotiate such obstacles as the Alps, the Algerian tableland and the mountains of Adama. This is by far the best over sea and land record yet made.
