was arrested. Another son of the elder Evans was then sent in to get a bond written out with the hope of inducing the justice of the peace to accept it, and release the prisoners, but before he could return his father and brother had been foully murdered.

The guards stated that about 12 o'clock on Saturday night about 25 men entered, took the prisoners out and ordered the guards to lock themselves in the storehouse where they had been holding the two Evans. There they quietly remained while murder was being committed, notwithstanding they had the key to the door.

The bodies of the men were found next morning hanging to a tree on either end of five feet of rope. The bodies were within three feet of the body of the tree and though the feet of the men were not around. Every seat was taken. MOSBY ON HIS MUSCLE.

The Confederate Chieftain Fights in a Street-Car.

Fur flew on a Leavenworth street-car this afternoon, says a San Francisco special of Sunday to the Philadelphia Times. A conductor collided with Col. John S. Mosby, the old guerrilla chieftain, and the Colonel laid the conductor hors Oils, Paints, Varnishes, Windu combat on the floor. Then the gripman tried to slay the Colonel as he was shaking the prostrate conductor. Then, the ladies in the car came to the old Colonel's rescue, and carpeted the dummy with the gripman's hair.

Colonel Mosby started out from his hotel for a quiet ride on the cable-cars. Owing to the crowd he was obliged to take an inside seat. Presently the inside began to fill up. A lady entered and tooked formed the courtesy the Colonel looked around and noticed that some of the scats on the grip-car had become vacant. The door was open. The afternoon was awfully hot. The Colonel went outside. "May I cross to the dummy?" he asked Office over S. L. Whitehead & Company's Drug Store
