A DISPATCH from Washington says: In the event of a reduction being made in the number of Internal Revenue Collection Districts, those of Marietta, Chillicothe and Belpointe, in Ohio; Maysville, in Kentucky, and Warsaw, Anderson, and either Evansville or Terre Haute, in Indiana, are the ones that will be abolished.

SOME particulars of an Independent political movement in this State, comes from Washington by telegraph to the New York Sun: "A number of the very best men in Kentucky, without regard to party, have united in calling a meeting at the Capital of the State, to set in motion an independent movement for next Autumn's election. The revolt against the combinations which have so long ruled the State is extending. The school system is becoming an important question. The free navigation of the rivers of the State is a question of vast moment. The most important in the State, the Green River, was navigable by a system of locks and dams many years ago. Since the war the Legislature has leased out the river and harbor improvements to a corporation, whose management has shut out all competition on that river to the great detriment of the fairest portion of Kentucky. Last winter the Legislature tried to lease all the Upper Cumberland River lying within the borders of the State and create another monopoly, and inflicting even a greater injury on the State. The press of the State has taken hold of the new movement, and general feeling is arising. For some time party lines have been weakening in Kentucky. The large Republican vote and the dissatisfied portion of the Democrats are expected to prove a strong backing to the independent movement.

Persons from Kentucky represent that it is likely to become formidable and bring into the field new and able men, of whom there are plenty, who of late have been out of politics."

ABERDEEN ITEMS.

The traveling drummers vote the Tier Hotel a daisy, although it presents a sorry exterior from the sad and trickling tears. A coat of paint would efface the furrows caused by many years weeping.

It behooves Squire Beasley to keep on his feet to attend to the numerous wedding couples—as they never mind the weather.

Mr. Murphy, of Georgetown, was the guest of Mr. David Cheesman, last week.

A troop of our enterprising young men are going to seek their fortunes in raising tobacco.

We wouldn't be surprised to hear of one of our popular Second street young ladies stepping off soon with a Maysvillian in search of a 'q' ire.

What is more difficult to perform than to ascend the grades when the wind is on a rampage; instead of life-preservers we need a cable attached to us to prevent our landing into the river.

We hope the young lady and gentleman, who were recently taking a stroll, with their heads soaring moonward, weren't hurt from their fall, orange peeling is capable of bringing our sublimest thoughts earthward.

Some of the young ladies who seem to be deeply interested in agitating the question, why is it, that the "three merry old bachelors" are so opposed to matrimony.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," is certainly verified, by the artistic and subduing music rendered by Miss Maggie Reidle and our popular musician Mr. F. Ellis.

The lecture delivered by Mr. Rathbone, was attended by a large and attentive audience.

"EPITAPH ON A COQUETTE."

Here lies one who lived and died, And left the world unsatisfied; Like, yet unlike, the valiant Greek, Of whom the ancient annals speak.

She conquered everywhere and then, Sighed for new worlds? O, no, new men, If far above there is no flirting, What can she find at all diverting.

It is strange there are so many young men, who when they call upon young ladies, don't know when to go home. If they only knew how their inconsideration subject these young ladies to tedious curtain-lectures, they would tear themselves away earlier.

Occupation in life is beneficial both physically and mentally—a purpose in life causes more true happiness than a life of idleness. Train yourself to a useful occupation, remember it is wicked to waste time.

To maintain an amiable disposition, accept the daily little crosses with patience and cheerfulness. And we will soon learn that trials accepted in this manner, teach us a lesson of wisdom.

The Aquarium.

In answer to several inquiries we condense directions for making an aquarium. A tank of ten by eighteen inches will support about twenty fish. These should be nearly of a size, and not more than three or four inches long. Lizards, eels, tadpoles, several species of beautiful snails, and some kinds of bivalves, which are valuable as scavengers, should not be omitted. The tank should be filled with clean pebbles and sand to the depth of about three inches. A few larger stones arranged so as to form caves and grottoes produce a pleasing effect, and most fishes love such hiding-places. Nearly all plants found growing under water are suitable for a tank; yet they should be sought in slow-flowing streams and ponds rather than in rapid-running brooks. None but soft spring or rain water should be used for filling. It is a mistake to suppose that it is necessary to change the water frequently. The contrary is true, as fishes can not thrive when subjected to frequent changes of water. In an aquarium, as well as in lakes and ponds, the water is kept pure by the action of the plants growing beneath the surface. The tank should stand near a window or skylight, and not in direct sunlight for any length of time. If the glass becomes coated with a fern or some, it can easily be cleaned with a sponge fastened to a stick. The plants and animals should be so selected and disposed that they become mutually self-supporting and flourish as well as in their native locality, forming a little world of their own.

The Sweet By and By.

The author of the well-known song, "The Sweet By and By," S. Fillmore Bennett, denies in the Chicago Indicator that he and the composer were drunk when they wrote the words and music of that song, as has been charged. Neither of them were drunk. Bennett was at his place of business when Webster, who was of a nervous and sensitive nature and easily susceptible to depression, came in, in one of his melancholy moods. "What's the matter now?" asked Bennett. "It's no matter," he answered; "it will be all right by and by." The idea of the hymn came to me like a flash," says Bennett, "and I replied: 'The Sweet By and By!' Why would that not make a good hymn?" "May be it would," he said indifferently. Turning to the desk Bennett then wrote the three verses of the hymn. "In the meantime, two friends, N. H. Carswell and S. E. Bright, had come in," says Bennett. "I handed the hymn to Mr. Webster. As he read it his eyes kindled and his whole demeanor changed. Stepping to the desk he began writing the notes in a moment. Presently he requested his violin, and played the melody. In a few moments more he had the notes for the four parts of the chorus jotted down. I think it was not over thirty minutes from the time I took my pen to write the words before the two gentlemen before named, myself and Mr. Webster, were singing the hymn, in the same form in which it afterward appeared. While singing it, Mr. R. R. Crosby, now a resident of Richmond, Ill., came in, and after listening awhile, with tears in his eyes, uttered the prediction: 'That hymn is immortal.' I think it was sung in public shortly after, for within two weeks almost every child on the streets was singing it." It was translated into several languages and "sung in every land under the sun."—Detroit Free Press.
