MESSRS. FOSTER & SUTLER have recently added to their mill on Fourth street, a steam drying-house, for drying corn and other grain, and are successfully applying steam drying to corn, by which it is perfectly dried ready for immediate use in the manufacture of hominy and meal. This will enable them to more fully supply their growing trade in hominy. It is said that steam drying for grain is much superior to fire or furnace heat, as by it the grain retains all of its natural flavor and richness.

Attention

The interest in the protracted meeting at the Baptist Church is increasing daily. The church last night was crowded to its utmost seating capacity, and numbers had to be turned away. For this reason the meeting has been changed to the court house, where Mr. Hale will preach this evening at 7 o'clock on the subject, "Dry Bones." This service is intended especially for non church goers, and they are earnestly invited to be present. Everybody welcome.

Very, Very Little Things,

but very important—your blood corpuscles. They are bright red. They are so small that it takes over 3,000 of them in a line to make an inch. The bright red color comes from the iron in them. When there is not enough iron the blood is thin and watery and impure. Purity and vigor go together. Brown's Iron Bitters is the only safe iron tonic ever made. It enriches the blood, builds up the system, gives health, strength and enjoyment of life.

A Literary Treat.

James E. Murdoch, the veteran actor, will appear at the opera house Thursday evening, December 16, when our citizens will have an opportunity to hear some choice poetic and dramatic recitals. Mr. Murdoch is one of the most distinguished elocutionists of our times, and this will probably be the only opportunity our people will have of hearing him. The proceeds will be for the benefit of a local enterprise—the Soldiers' Monumental Fund. The price of admission will be 75 cents for reserved seats, 50 cents for general admission, and 25 and 35 cents for balcony and gallery.

HERE'S NEWS.

The Newport, Maysville and Big Sandy Railroad to be Built Next Year—Our information is correct.

The Broken Chronicle in a late issue stated that Huntington's road up the river, that has been talked of for such a long time, better known as the Maysville and Big Sandy road, would certainly be built. It said that work would be resumed, in earnest, next spring, and the road pushed to completion. We don't know where the Chronicle obtained its information on the subject. What we do know, however, is that we ourselves have received a few "pointers," as the boys would say, which tend to corroborate the truth of what our contemporary stated about the road. Where the people are interested the BULLETIN is always willing and anxious to give them the full benefit of its information on any subject. The "pointers" which we received are now given to our readers, who can judge of them as they may see fit. Some three or four months ago the Cincinnati, Georgetown and Portsmouth railroad was purchased by a syndicate of Cincinnati railroad men. M. E. Ingalls, President of the "Big Four" road, was a member of this syndicate, and was placed at the head of the new company. Work was begun at once to complete the C., G. and P. road as far as Georgetown, and has been carried on vigorously ever since. Ripley has been longing for a railroad from time almost immemorial, and when her citizens learned that the C., G. and P. road was to be completed to Georgetown, they determined to have it extended to their own place, (Ripley), if by any possible means the undertaking could be accomplished. A committee composed of two or three of her good citizens was sent to Cincinnati to interview President Ingalls on the subject. He received them pleasantly, listened to what they had to say on the subject, but told them plainly that the C., G. and P. company could not extend its road from Georgetown to Ripley. He was satisfied that it wouldn't pay his company to make the extension, for the reason that there wouldn't be a great deal of business to be done at that place, and the road if extended would have to compete with steamers. But he (Ingalls) added: "You folks up there at Ripley need not be uneasy. You'll have a railroad before long. Huntington intends to build his road up the other side of the river next year." The above may not be the exact language used, but it is the substance of what the President of the C., G. and P. road told the committee. The conversation was of some length. In addition to the above, Ingalls told the committee that he understood it was Huntington's intention to resume work in earnest next spring, and push the road to completion.

The BULLETIN obtained the above information from a member of the committee referred to, and it can be relied upon as correct. If President Ingalls got this information from a reliable source then there are reasonable hopes of seeing the road completed within a year or so. Since the above news was obtained a gentleman of this city, who has some business relations with Huntington, told the BULLETIN he was satisfied work would be resumed on the road next spring.

A VERITABLE VACUUM.

He was a dude, His attitude Was striking as he sat On the v-randa banquette The while a cigarette he made. He wore a derby hat.

With such a brim It covered him. His coat was made so tight His arm could not touch his side; His elbows thus extended wide Were really quite a sight.

His trousers, too, Exposed to view the much bludge; A Jim, so very slight You scarce could tell it from the cane The silver head of which he fain Would swallow if he might.

He uttered slow, "Aw, don't you know, This really's quite a bore." Then rolled his cigarette again And looked as if he tried in vain To think of something new e.

But no! you see Very actually On every feature plain: Beyond his cigarette and clothes, He absolutely nothing knows—Except to suck his cane. —[Exchange.

RE.

Did I press thee, dear, too tightly? But my heart was on my sleeve, And was struggling but to conquer Thy fond love, and not to grieve.

No, indeed, you did not grieve me, Happiness may breathe a sigh, And the heart you own has taken Answers thus, and tells you why.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Lewis Apperson and daughters, Lizzie and Hattie, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., took Thanksgiving dinner with Dr. A. H. Wall and wife. The doctor celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday on the 24th, and is remarkably well preserved for such an age.

Baird's Minstrels.

Baird's Mammoth Minstrels will appear at the Washington Opera House next Tuesday night. The Baltimore American of October 9th in speaking of the troupe says:

"The Academy of Music has rarely held as large and so pleased an audience as that which gathered last night to see Baird's Minstrels; and it is no exaggeration to say that a finer or more amusing minstrel performance has never been given upon its stage. The company is strong in numbers and vast in its resources. The music, vocal and instrumental, is even above modern minstrel music which is always excellent, and the dancing and specialties excel in every detail anything of the kind ever seen here. Every number of the programme was executed, and the performers so cheerfully responded that the performance lasted nearly an hour longer than usual. They have every reason to be pleased with their reception."

MR. GEORGE H. OWENS, of the firm of Owens, Michel & Co., is rejoicing over the arrival at his house, yesterday of two little visitors—a boy and a girl.

The most extensive wheat raiser in Christian County is Mr. W. T. Radford, of Pembroke. In 1883 he raised 10,000 bushels; in 1884, 16,000, and this year, 12,000. He sowed this fall over 500 acres in wheat, which is up and looking well. —[Louisville Post.

Georgia's Natural Ink.—A natural ink is found at the bottom of a copper mine at the foot of the Kennesaw Mountain, in Cobb County, Georgia. It is a peculiar liquid of a deep wine color, and when a few drops of nutgall are added it turns jet black, and at once becomes ink of the best quality. The records of the county have for years been kept in this natural ink, which neither freezes, fades, nor corrodes. —[Exchange.
