"ROWDY ROWAN."

A Base Conspiracy at Morehead Nipped in Time to Prevent Murder and Bloodshed.

It seems that the troubles in Rowan County will never cease. Nearly one week of the present term of Circuit Court went along smoothly, and the outside world began to think that the "cruel war was over." Apparently, a "white-winged peace" was hovering over the town of Morehead, which nestled quietly at the foot of the mountains. She still nestles there, but not so awfully quiet. "To tell the truth and shame the devil," the town is rather gay at present. A double guard of citizens are doing duty with solemn tread around the precincts of the jail, assisting the Sheriff and other officers in preserving the peace. The reason for all this precaution was the discovery last Thursday night of a bold, bad conspiracy to murder Judge Cole, Taylor Young and Allie Young, the County Attorney. This diabolical movement was detected just in time to save their lives. About 4 p. m. on Thursday, the Sheriff arrested, on suspicion, a young man twenty-three years old by the name of James A. Harris, who had been loitering near the court house. That night about 10 o'clock, the prisoner divulged to his uncle, Hayden Harris, a secret that caused much uneasiness and many sleepless eyes in Morehead. His confession was in substance about as follows: He was a resident of Fleming County, and had been persuaded and hired by one, Henry S. Logan, M. D., of Rowan County, to come there and aid in the killing of Judge Cole and Taylor and Allie Young. Logan was to furnish four assistants, viz: Morgan McClurg, Lou Rayburn, a man by the name of Healy, and another by the name of Logan. The would-be assassins were to be provided with guns, knives and pistols, and paid $100 each by the said Henry S. Logan when Judge Cole and the Youngs were put out of the way. Harris said he had been staying at Henry S. Logan's home for about two months, where he had lived and talked with two of his accomplices, McClurg and Rayburn, who told him the men could be easily disposed of. Harris put in his spare moments practicing shooting with gun and pistol. The murderers, according to Harris, had agreed to wait until court to do their bloody work, when the Judge and the Youngs would all be there. The plan agreed upon was to shoot them from ambush or through the windows of the hotel. Should this fail, then to fire the hotel and shoot them as each ran out. Harris swore to this, as did also one, James Peltry, and other circumstances tended to show pretty conclusively that his story was true. Warrants were sworn out for the arrest of these desperadoes, and Henry S. Logan and Morgan McClurg were brought into court on Saturday and were put under $1,000 bond to keep the peace and Wm. H. and Jack Logan, sons of Henry Logan, were bound over in the sum of $250.00 each to keep the peace. The grand jury same day returned true bills against Henry S. Logan, Morgan McClurg and Lou Rayburn, charging them with confederating and banding themselves together for the purpose of killing Z. T. Young and others. Logan and McClurg were put under $6,000 bond each to answer the indictments, and in default of the required bail they were sent to jail. G. A. Cassidy, of Flemingsburg, is their lawyer.

Judge Cole has placed the town under heavy guard and the danger seems safely over for the present. The intense excitement that prevailed for a few days has entirely subsided, and the law is reigning supreme, with the court on top. Our readers will be glad to hear that Commonwealth's Attorney James H. Sallee is not connected in any way with these troubles, and is kindly received and courteously treated by all factions. The court has transacted much business and punished many offenders, and the present term will likely be productive, ultimately, of much good to Rowan. All that Rowan needs is a rigid enforcement of the laws, and Judge Cole and Attorney Sallee are doing their best to that end, and it is devoutly hoped will bring order out of chaos in due time. Court will adjourn this week.

Attention, Knights of Pythias. There will be installation of officers in the Uniform Rank to-night at 7:30 o'clock. All members of Limestone Lodge are respectfully invited to be present. Knights in full dress uniform.

An Ex-Maysvillian in Los Angeles.

W. E. Neal, who was engaged in the dry goods business here several years ago, but whose home is now in Falls City, Neb., is sojourning at Los Angeles, Cal., for a few months for the benefit of his health. He and his wife are delighted with the place, and think of moving there and making it their home. In a letter, dated "January 10, '87," to his brother, Thomas Neal, of this city, he says: "We do not regret our trip here, for this certainly is nearer paradise than any place we have ever seen in this world. We are enjoying the delightful climate and beautiful scenery very much. It never gets cold enough to freeze in winter, and is never very hot in summer. Vegetables grow and flowers bloom the year round. The yards are now full of roses, geraniums and flowers of most all kinds. The geraniums grow as high as one's head, and such lovely evergreens, trimmed and trained in all manner of shapes. Los Angeles has about 40,000 population. It has many beautiful residences and fine business houses. The streets and business houses are lighted with the electric light, and the street railroads are run with horses, cable and electricity. Oranges and fruits flourish here in abundance, cultivated mostly by the 'heathen Chinese.' A person can live here, as far as clothing and eating is concerned, as cheap as in Maysville or Falls City, but the rents are very high. * * * I went to the Christian Church last night. They commenced with twelve members six years ago, and now have 220. Brother B. F. Coulter is the main man in the church. He told me they wanted to get Brother Powell, if possible. * * * I left home with the rheumatism that had kept me in the house for nearly a month, and have only been here a few days, but I have improved so I can walk three or four miles a day. * * * Tell our friends that we think we are as near paradise as we will ever get in this world."

How's This For Natural Gas?

Says the Portsmouth Times: "Last week we alluded to the proposed piping of natural gas from the Warfield wells on the Big Sandy river to this place and neighboring towns and cities. There is reasonable foundation for such talk. The prospect is well under way, and by the 1st of March the work will begin."

"A prominent young gentleman of this city learned from Geo. A. Bowen, Esq., Vice President of the company, that it is an assured fact. Said he: 'Our company is a solid one. It has just issued $2,000,000 6-20 bonds that were purchased by a New York syndicate. The right of way has been granted by C. P. Huntington along his railway. The pipes will be laid to this city by November and completed to Cincinnati next year.'"

The Young Men's Literary Society met with Mr. Will Johnson last evening, with a large number of the members present. Rev. Russell Cecil and Mr. J. C. Rains were initiated, after which the society passed to the regular order of business. The debate was the most interesting the society has yet listened to, and showed a gratifying improvement in those who took part in it in the command of language and the better use of "gestures." The society now has about twenty-five members, and it is hoped the number will be doubled ere the year is out. The young men of Maysville should avail themselves of the advantages offered in the way of improvement and the pleasant and profitable methods of passing part of their time. The society expects to hold an open meeting in the near future.

About two years ago, a prominent citizen of Chicago was told by his physicians that he must die. They said his system was so debilitated that there was nothing left to build on. He made up his mind to try a "new departure." He got some of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and took it according to directions. He began to improve at once. He kept up the treatment for some months, and is to-day a well man. He says the "Discovery" saved his life.
