

AFTER THE EXECUTION.

ARRANGING FOR THE FUNERALS OF THE DEAD ANARCHISTS.

Thousands View the Remains of the Victims of the Scaffold—The Terrible Revenge Predicted by George Francis Train—Did Lingg Really Suicide?

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—An examination of the dead Anarchists after they had been cut down revealed the fact that none had broken necks. The fall was but four feet, and all were choked to death. The jury certified to the death of the doomed, and the law was satisfied. All the bodies were turned over to their friends.

After the bodies of Lingg and Engel had been examined they were placed in plain coffins and taken to the store of Mrs. Engel, who, with Ida Mueller (Lingg's sweetheart), sat weeping in the room. Hundreds of friends filed into the shop to take a last look at the faces of the dead Anarchists.

At 503 Milwaukee avenue, in an undertaker's shop, were the remains of Spies, Parsons and Fischer. Mrs. Parsons and Nina's mother sat hand in hand with their backs to the windows, through which hundreds of curious people peered. Mrs. Spies sat alone in the corner, rocking to and fro in the agony of grief, strangely contrasting with Mrs. Parsons, whose eyes seemed riveted on the corpse of her husband.

Arrangements for the funeral of the dead Anarchists were completed at a meeting of the defense committee. There will be a procession, which will start from the home of Mrs. Fischer, No. 2 Dean street, and proceed then to Mrs. Parsons, No. 785 Milwaukee avenue. Then the procession will march to Aurora Turner hall, on Huron street, near Milwaukee avenue, where the remains of Spies will be guarded by the Aurora Turn Verein, of which Spies was a member. The next stop will be at Engel's residence, 280 Milwaukee avenue, where lies the remains of Engel and Lingg.

The German Typographical union will take charge of the remains of Fischer, and the German Carpenters' union of the remains of Lingg and Engel. Parsons was a member of Local Assembly 1367, and Knights of Labor in general have been invited to the funeral.

Four thousand or five thousand people gazed on the bodies of Parsons and Fischer at Mueller & Hardekoff's undertaking establishment this morning. Spies' remains had been taken home during the night, but the bodies of the other two remained where they were. At 6 o'clock the doors were thrown open and the crowd began to file in. The bodies rested on stretchers and were dressed only in the underclothing. At first the visitors were few, but the number steadily grew and before 7 o'clock there was a steady stream of men, women and children pouring past the stretchers. The crowd outside grew in numbers also, but it was quiet and orderly, occasionally one of the curious would mutter something as he gazed upon the upturned distorted faces of the dead, but most of the people passed on silently after a single glance at the countenances of these much talked-of men.

At 9:30 o'clock the doors were closed. At that time there was a big crowd outside, but little or no excitement. At 9:50 o'clock Fischer's body was removed to the Dean street residence. Parsons' corpse was taken to the Anarchists printer's late home on Milwaukee avenue at 10 o'clock. No excitement attended the transfer of either of the bodies.

Messrs. Stanley, Oppenheimer and Linne-meyer have selected a lot in Waldheim cemetery in which to bury the bodies of the five Anarchists, the intention being to erect a monument to their memory. Spies' body will lie in state in Aurora Turner hall, he being a prominent member of that Turnverein, and his obsequies will be conducted by the society. The procession will be formed with the defense committee at the head, followed by the Aurora Turnverein, the Knights of Labor organizations, German Typographical union, No. 8, the carpenters' union, the painters' union, singing societies in carriages, the bearers and the families' relatives and friends in carriages.

Brass bands with muffled drums will play funeral marches, while the cortege moves on to the Wells street depot, where a special train will take the funeral party to Waldheim cemetery. Speeches will be made in English and German by well known orators. It is determined to make this the greatest funeral ever held in Chicago if the authorities do not prevent it.

Flaster casts have been taken of the faces of the dead Anarchists, except that of Lingg.

In answer to a question as to whether he feared any trouble at the funeral of the dead Anarchists, Sheriff Matson says: "I do not expect any trouble whatever. The good sense of the people will prevail. Standing in the presence of those dead bodies all people must solemnly realize that the law will prevail. The funeral may be a tribute to the memory of the dead, but it will be a reverential one on the part of their friends and cannot, under any circumstances, be marked by any disorder."

Speaking of the last words of the Anarchists and the abrupt termination of Parsons' speech, the sheriff said: "It has been customary to let men say a last word on the gallows. There is no law on the subject, and it rests entirely with the indulgence of the sheriff. Some time ago the men asked me to give them each twenty minutes for speeches, but this is more than I could grant. Just before the march to the gallows they intimated that they did not care to say anything. I did not deem it expedient for them to make long speeches, and it is never customary to permit any delay after the caps have been adjusted. I delayed the execution until 12 o'clock in order to get the last and final decision from the governor. I wanted to give them every chance for their lives."

How the World Was Informed.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—When Anarchist Parsons arose from his cot Friday morning he heard a sound which instantly riveted his attention. Hastily putting on his clothing he came to the door of his cell and peered through the bars into the cage on the other side of the corridor, where the members of the bar held consultations with their clients. There in the center of the cage, with the doors locked and barred on either side, as much prisoners as any of the condemned men, sat the representatives of the United Press. The finger of the operator was upon the key of the telegraph instrument, and it was probably the steady "click," "click," which had been echoing through the corridors for hours which broke the slumbers of more than one of the condemned men.

Parsons stood there and looked with a half mystified, half inquiring look upon his face. And well he might. Knowing much of the newspaper business himself he probably knew that it was the first time in the journalistic history of the world that the electric current had been introduced right into the very corridor of death itself for the purpose of chronicling the final movements of men who were about to expiate a crime with their lives. From long before daylight until cold and limp the bodies had been removed from the building, the instrument kept up its ceaseless click, and the pile of copy in front of the operator grew and grew. The cage was so located that every movement of the four men could be discerned. There was scarcely six feet of space between the table and the door of Parsons' cell on the left, while to the right around the bend of the corridor, not ten feet away, the operator could see the last of the condemned men as they stepped from the gallery to the gallows.

The white linen shrouds of the four rubbed against the wires on the outside of the cage as the procession left the corridor, and ere the head of it had commenced to ascend the steps the fact that the final moment was at hand was flashing over the United Press wires in all directions. Then with his finger on the key the operator sat motionless. His eyes were riveted on the little sentry box a few feet away where the unknown executioner was awaiting the signal. He heard the short crack upon the chisel that severed the rope. He pressed his finger upon the key, and even before the bodies had fallen the full length of their ropes it was known in tens and hundreds of cities throughout the country, that the dread sentence of the law had been fulfilled. Never before had realism in the distribution of news been more graphically illustrated, and never before had the echo of the hammer and chisel of the executioner been literally flashed over the wires to the outer world.

Schwab and Fielden Taken to Joliet.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Mrs. Schwab, bar mother, Mrs. Schnaubelt, and her two children were admitted to the jail, the latter behind the screen, this morning, where the husband and father took a long farewell of his family. Jailer Folz had first given leave for them to assemble in the jail office, but changed his mind at the last moment, and husband and wife said their adieus through the wire screen.

Mrs. Fielden and her little ones came later and had an affecting interview with her sturdy, but then tearful, husband, with the same restrictions.

The two convicts left this forenoon for Joliet, where they will be met by a portion of the mercy delegation that laid over at Springfield to the last.

Did Lingg Really Suicide.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—George Francis Train arrived from the west last night. He says the Anarchists will blow up every city between New York and San Francisco until they feel that the murder of their four comrades is avenged. He says Lingg did not commit suicide, but that a dynamite cartridge was placed in a candle in his cell by the authorities, who feared that the men would be pardoned unless it appeared that some violence was done by them.

Newspaper Comments.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Volks-Zeitung to-day, in commenting on the executions in Chicago, says: "Those who were consecrated for destruction met their fate bravely, looking into the eyes of death without flinching. To them it was something holy to perish for their convictions. Our enemies for the time triumphed. To-day the vengeful press of the capitalists blows noisy bugle blasts over the 'order' which prevailed and exults over the brutal fashion in which the relatives of the victims and their disciples were greeted on the occasion of the judicial murder."

The Freiheit in discussing the subject, says: "As pioneers of a pure rational organization of society they saw the evil condition into which our social civilization had fallen and they criticized it in their newspapers and from platform and rostrum sharply and severely. In their propaganda they expressed strong sympathy with the workmen and did their best to direct the people to a higher standard and convince them that it was an absolute necessity to bring about a better and purer state of things. For this cause were these people in murderous fashion put to death. They were warriors against social and political corruption."

Work for the Fool-Killer.

GALESBURG, Ill., Nov. 14.—Some Knox college students suspended five effigies from a wire stretched between two high trees, above the ground, just in front of the college, Thursday night, and, apparently to prevent interruption, smeared the posts of the college gate with tar, and passed a board between them. Four of the effigies were of men, the fifth a woman. In addition to bearing the names of four members of the senior class, and one of the seminary, the effigies were also named Parsons, Spies, Engel, Lingg, and the female effigy Nina Van Zandt. The affair has caused a sensation, and is roundly condemned. The mass of students are organizing a vigilance committee to ferret out the perpetrators, and expulsions will probably result.

"No Funny Business."

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The police reserves in this city were to-day ordered to be held in reserve at the station houses from now until Monday evening. The authorities do not propose to tolerate any such thing as Anarchy in their midst. It will therefore be useless for the Anarchists of New York city to cross over the bridge or the Williamsport ferries with the expectation of finding a safe retreat for their fulfilment of their lawless distributives on this side of the river. "We are not going to allow any party of Anarchists to parade in Brooklyn," said Police Superintendent Campbell. "We will have no funny business whatever. That must be understood once and for all, as we are in earnest."

Only to Fool a Reporter.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The story telegraphed from this city last night that a group of Anarchists were active here and had sent threatening letters to Governor Oglesby is entirely without foundation. It was the outcome of a barroom joke wherein a number of gay young men pinned red badges to their lapels and imposed upon an unsophisticated reporter.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 14.—The Nauge-tuck Agitator, a weekly paper, run in the interest of the Labor party, and managed by Henry C. Baldwin, came out yesterday with reversed column rules, in sympathy with the dead Anarchists. Last night the stockholders held a meeting and voted to put the concern in the hands of a receiver.

Tailors Accused of Anarchy.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 14.—Anton Fix and John Maerten, cranky tailors of Walnut Hills, were arrested last night by Constable Ismael up on a complaint of Philip Burckhardt, a hysterical young man of Elm street, Walnut Hills, who fears personal violence from the tailors, and who says they are Anarchists.

A Denial.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The report published this morning that a Chicago Anarchist armed with a bomb had visited Mrs. Miller's and Ashton's saloons in Williamsburg yesterday is now denied by the chief of police and by both the saloon keepers.

REVENUE CONFERENCE.

TARIFF REFORMERS TO MEET BEFORE CONGRESS CONVENES.

The President Believes that the Tariff Question Will be the Great Issue of the Next Campaign—Legislation Planned on the Subject—Other Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—It is understood that there will be another conference of leading tariff reform Democrats in Washington before the assembling of congress. The president has been an earnest advocate of tariff reform ever since he entered the White House. It is known that the president was disappointed at the failure of the house to pass a tariff bill last session.

Mr. Cleveland believes that the tariff question will form the principal issue of the next campaign. His annual message will probably recommend, in ever stronger terms than before, a substantial reduction of the tariff. Mr. Carlisle is expected here soon, and it is thought that before the end of next week a definite program will be mapped out to secure some legislation on the tariff this winter.

Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, has been here for several days, and is regarded by many as the probable successor of Col. Morrison at the head of the ways and means committee. In an interview with a reporter Mr. Breckinridge said: "I think there will be a reduction of the revenue this winter, and I hope and believe that it will be not only a reduction of the surplus but a reduction also of the burdens of taxation. I think that events have so shaped themselves that no man can stand up in the house this winter and resist a motion to go into committee of the whole for the purpose of agreeing upon a bill for the reduction of the revenue—and no man will say that the revenue should not be reduced. I think it will be agreed that whether the bill presented be a good or a bad bill, that they should take it up and bring to the intelligence of the house to trust to a good act. Just what the result may be I have no idea, but I think that among Republicans and Democrats—men of all shades of opinion, who think something should be done—a bill meeting in some way the demands of the occasion will be passed, and the revenue will be reduced without increasing the burdens of the people."

Increasing the Marine Corps.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The annual report of Col. McSawley, commandant of the Marine Corps, asks for an increase of 500 in the number of enlisted men, and a corresponding increase in the number of the officers. The present force is equally divided between sea and shore duty, and is inadequate and overworked. The barracks at Norfolk and Philadelphia are declared to be unfit for habitation.

Lamar and the President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Secretary Lamar had a long conversation with the president this morning. At noon no communication from Gen. Sparks had been received at the White House.

ARMOUR'S NEW SCHEME.

The King Meat Man Invests in a Florida Railroad.

SANFORD, Fla., Nov. 14.—It is stated here that Phil D. Armour, Chicago's millionaire pork packer, is backing up the Orange Belt railroad, a corporation now building a line from Lake Monroe, 135 miles south of Jacksonville, to the gulf. The line was originally a saw mill log tramway five miles long. It was first built to a neighboring village, then extended by slow degrees, a company formed and new iron laid. Traffic on the road had stopped several times, even after fifty miles was in operation, and a failure was predicted. But P. A. Demewa, the president, is an exiled Russian nobleman and an indefatigable worker.

After his last trip north, it was learned that new capital had been secured, but nothing could be fully learned till to-day, when it was ascertained that Armour had a finger in the pie. The Orange belt runs from Monroe, a station on the Jacksonville, Tampa & Key West railway, a few miles north and west of Sanford, and thence in a south-westerly direction to Point Pinellas, on the gulf, a distance of 150 miles, and will open up one of the finest and most picturesque portions of the state. It is also reported that Mr. Armour has other enterprises on foot in that section, involving the use of large capital.

Tremendous Business Transaction.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—One of the largest single business deals probably ever consummated in the world was ratified here to-day, when the entire property and franchise of the Chicago West Division Street Railway company passed into the hands of new purchasers, a Philadelphia syndicate. The sum agreed upon was $13,000,000. This is two or three times as large as the deal of the Baltimore & Ohio telegraph transfer about which so much was said in Wall street, and which made and lost fortunes for speculators. The length of the street car lines owned by the company aggregates about ninety miles, and the price paid therefor is in the neighborhood of $180 a mile, the franchise, rights and privileges being included in the estimated mileage value.

A Crazy One-legged Dentist.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14.—Dr. A. C. Walker, a one-legged dentist, enamored of a mulatto woman, shot her yesterday in Lawyer Wiley's office, where she had gone to prepare to defend herself in a case made against her by Walker to force her to return here from Birmingham. He tried to persuade her to go with him and upon her refusal, he shot her just above the right nipple. She lies dangerously wounded and will probably die. Walker has attempted her life at other times and has been frequently arrested on account of assaulting her.

Wrecked Whisky.

HALIFAX, Nov. 14.—A dispatch from Ingonish, N. S., says the schooner, Anna Maria, Capt. Bloom, from St. Pierre for Quebec, laden with whisky, has been wrecked at Black Brook. The cargo was saved and taken to Ingonish where it was seized by the collector of customs and held for orders from Ottawa. There was no insurance on the vessel or cargo.

HIS REASON AFFECTED.

Young Choate a Wreck from Bral Hazing at Williams College.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 14.—Developments in the Choate hazing case at Williams college indicate that the guilty Sophomores will be made to suffer. The college trustees have interviewed the faculty, and it is understood that the faculty are censured by them for not being more vigorous in pushing the investigation of the affair. It has leaked out that there was some plain talk by the trustees who feel that the college has been disgraced and wish to have the matter sifted to the bottom. Francis L. Stetson, vice president of the alumni, came on from New York yesterday, had a consultation with the faculty and met the Sophomores class.

The Sophomores have been asked to have the men who did the hazing appear before the faculty and give a full account of the affair. Mr. Choate recently told a friend in Pittsfield that he should not rest until he had made a full investigation of the case. Young Choate is in a bad condition. His mind is unbalanced, and he may become hopelessly insane. The Sophomores are thoroughly frightened, and it is evident they are making every effort to conceal the real facts. Recently developments in the case strongly indicate that the worst has not yet been told, and that young Choate was more shamefully treated than has yet been made public. It was reported last week that he would go back to college, but his mental condition makes it probable that he will never again be a well man, and that he can not complete his college course.

Wholesale Jail Delivery.

TANLEQUAH, I. T., Nov. 14.—A wholesale jail delivery took place here Thursday evening, and fifteen of the worst desperadoes in the southwest secured their liberty. The jail is a large square stone structure in the outskirts of the town. The interior is wainscoted with two inch planks, and closed with sheet iron. Last night the sheet iron was torn away, a plank wrenched off and used as a lever on the stone wall, and a hole large enough for a man to pass was cut through. The two guards in the interior were bound and gagged, and the cells were broken open. Among the prisoners who escaped were five murderers, three horse thieves, and seven lesser criminals. "Red Jim," one of the murderers, has a record of killing six men. The excitement caused by the affair dwarfed the fight in the legislature, and a posse was hastily raised and is now in pursuit.

Heavy Clothing Failure.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Harry E. Moss, wholesale manufacturer of clothing, at 633 Broadway, has made an assignment to Samuel Jerkowsky. The failure was entirely unexpected, and Mr. Moss says it is due to the dishonesty of Mr. Schlesinger, who he declares is now a fugitive, with a shortage of $10,000 or over in his accounts. Mr. Moss went traveling recently and left Schlesinger a lot of checks, signed in blank, to be used exclusively in the business and a power of attorney to dispose of the money in bank in the business. Mr. Moss discovered, so he charges, that Schlesinger used these checks to draw money to speculate with on his own account. Mr. Moss said that as near as he could estimate, his liabilities were $130,000. He could not tell what the assets would be.

Trouble Among the Miners.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 14.—Trouble exists at the mines near Pocahontas, Tazewell county. The miners of American birth, both white and colored, have demanded that the Hungarian miners be sent away, and this the company refused to do. Friday the Hungarians were prevented from entering the mines, after a bloody encounter with the native workers. Work in the mines was suspended in consequence. Several men on each side were seriously hurt in the fray, but none fatally. The local authorities have sworn in a large number of deputy constables, and intend to preserve the peace at all hazards. Further outbreaks are feared, as the Hungarians, with the approval of the company, will endeavor to re-enter the mines.

Robber of a Stage Coach Caught.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 14.—E. E. Evans, a Texas cattleman, was arrested in Madden's Ranch, a West Fifth street saloon, at 3 a. m., on a charge of robbing a stage between Buffalo Gap and San Angelo, Tex., on the night of August 19, of $4,000. The charge is made by Samuel Ferguson, a restaurant cook, who says Evans wanted him to take part in the robbery. Evans claims to be manager of a cattle company in Pan-Handle, and denies the charge.

Blamed the Freemasons.

LAFAYETTE, Ore., Nov. 14.—Richard E. Warple was hanged at 12:50 Friday, for the murder of David I. Corker. He made a long speech declaring his hanging a judicial murder and blamed the Freemasons for it. He also denounced the lawyers who defended him as his worst enemies. His neck was not broken, and he died of strangulation in twelve minutes.

Explosion of a Gasoline Tank.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—A gasoline tank in the cellar of the house of J. J. Campbell, at Ocean Point, L. I., exploded early this morning, immediately setting fire to the house. The building cost $50,000, and its furnishings $15,000 more. The property is a total loss. Mr. Campbell, his wife and family barely escaped with their lives.

Railroad Wreck.

BORNTOWN, N. J., Nov. 14.—Extra train No. 51, the Lehigh Valley train, bound east on the line of the New York division of the Pennsylvania road, broke in two and subsequently ran together near Houtonville early to-day, smashing a number of cars, blocking four tracks and causing a delay to travel of several hours.

Killed by a Falling Chimney.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 14.—To-day at noon while playing in the ruins of the Ohio Valley planing mill, which was destroyed by fire last evening, Rebecca Isaacs, aged eight, was instantly killed by a falling chimney. Several other children were seriously but not fatally injured.
