THE IMPENDING CRISIS.

A POSSIBILITY OF THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT BEING REVOLUTIONIZED.

The Time is Not far Distant When a Napoleon Will Be at the Head of French Affairs—Queen Victoria's Daughter to Become Kaiser of Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—In calculating the outcome of the French crisis, little thought apparently, is given to the possibility that the governmental system may be revolutionized, yet if the friends of Prince Victor Napoleon are to be believed, the chances of that gentleman's enjoying what he and they deem to be his rights are increasing daily, and the time is not far distant when a Napoleon will again be at the head of French affairs.

His little court at Brussels is the resort of so many of the discontented and ambitious that it is not unlikely that the Belgian government will forestall a French remonstrance, and speedily request him to relieve that miniature Paris of his presence. Prince Victor is very popular with the Belgians who pay him many flattering attentions and profess their belief that in him the Napoleonic dynasty will be revived. The recent presence of the ex-Empress Eugenie and the knowledge that her fortune will be devoted to supporting young Victor's pretensions is regarded as another favorable indication of the strength of his cause. France is a stake worth playing a desperate game for and the Bonapartists may soon have an opportunity to prove what hold their claims have on the affections of the French people. When the expected crisis arrives, the Orleanists, Bonapartists and Republicans will have a triangular fight among themselves similar to the dust of that description in "Midshipman Easy."

An ardent follower of Prince Victor's fortunes, who has seen the rough draft of a proclamation to be issued by the prince at a suitable time, describes the document as having been written with much ability and an eloquence of diction which cannot fail to bring out the latent enthusiasm for Napoleonic dynasty which he firmly believes lurks in the bosom of every true Frenchman. The extracts which he gives from memory sound somewhat theatrical, but are replete with the pithy and sententious expressions dear to the gallic heart. The "Idees Napoleoniennes" of the last emperor have been fully drawn upon, the destruction of feudalism and the progress of the nation in arts and arms under the great Napoleon dilated upon, while in marked contrast with the good taste displayed in expressing an assurance that the country's future prosperity depends upon that national economy only possible through a prolonged peace, is a justifying hint at reconquering the lost provinces. Recapitulating the unhappy ending of the four Napoleons the proclamation repeats the absurd libels that the second bearer of that name was poisoned by the Austrians and the fourth betrayed by the English to the Zulus. The Bonapartists, like Orleanists, insist that the higher clergy in France are, and must be, hostile to a republic, and that from their teachings the women and children are carefully imbued with the wholesome doctrines that the best interests of the country demand a return to a more conservative and permanent form of government.

Shall England Rule Germany.
LONDON, Nov. 24.—Lord Salisbury, premier of the British government, is expected to give some general indication as to the policy to be pursued by his cabinet colleagues at the address which he will deliver at Oxford. Whatever course the ministry may resolve to submit to parliament upon resuming next February with regard to the future government of Ireland, it is acknowledged on all sides that the probable sense of the German emperor before parliament will be conveyed, the hopeless if not dying condition of the Crown Prince Frederick William and the serious state of health of the crown prince's own son William will precipitate questions of still graver moment upon the British cabinet than the further development of the government's coarsely policy in Ireland.

It has only been within the past few days that the condition of the young Prince William has been generally disclosed, his father's fatal malady and the dying condition of his grandfather, the emperor, diverting public attention from his own case. It is now no longer concealed that the crown prince's son is suffering in a severe degree from the same peculiar disease which carried off the late king of Prussia, after rendering him completely insane during the last few years of his reign. The technical name of the disease from which the young prince is suffering is "otitis media," and the only known remedy consists of a never ending succession of abscesses on that part of the ear situated between the tympanum and the base of the brain. The queen is greatly alarmed and affected at the condition of the imperial family, the direct male line which threatens to become extinct within perhaps the next two or three years if not sooner.

In the event of the death of the emperor, of his son, the crown prince, and of the crown prince's son William, the son of young Prince William, who is only four years of age, would be next in succession, and the question of a regency under Queen Victoria's oldest daughter would arise within the German empire. These events appear to be so imminent that Lord Salisbury is expected to refer to them, as they already overshadow the subjects originally considered likely to occupy the attention of the country if the queen convoked parliament in the ordinary way.

Will Form a Cabinet.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—It is reported that M. Rabot, member of the chamber of deputies for the department of Pas de Calais, will form a new cabinet among the members, of which will be M. Goblet and Doves.

The Journal Des Debats advocates the awaiting of the results of President Gravy's efforts to form a new cabinet, but says it is impossible not to see the gravity presented by the prolonged uncertainty, which offers the chance for the creation of a dictatorship or an outbreak of disorder.

Two Natural Gas Victims.

BEAVER, Pa., Nov. 24.—While examining a natural gas regulator here last night, Henry Camp, the Heat and Light company's superintendent, H. F. Brown, its secretary, and James H. Cunningham, a director, were dangerously injured by an explosion. One of the men struck a match to see the gauge, unconscious of a leak. Gas had accumulated in the box over the regulator, and it was ignited by the match. Two of the victims are in a serious condition, and will probably die.

RAGING FOREST FIRES.

Hundreds of People Driven From Their Homes—Work of Indians.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 24.—Special advices from the Indian Territory and Southern Kansas bring news of a terrible state of affairs throughout that section of the country consequent on the long continued drought, and the prairie fires that have ensued. For the seven last months the people living in a section 20 miles square have been hoping and praying for rain to relieve their sufferings, but now they have settled down to brood in despair over the disheartening prospects. In all directions from Vinita can be seen the glare of the prairie fires which are sweeping everything from their path. The sun has been obscured for days by the dense smoke.

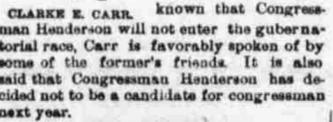

At Red Fork an area of forty square miles has been burned, destroying millions of tons of hay and many agricultural implements. Several hundred head of cattle have been destroyed and two ranches have been swept clear of every vestige of human habitation. In the Oklahoma district and along the southern border of Kansas the fires have been raging for days and the inhabitants are leaving by the hundreds.

In Oklahoma the Indians are adding to the trouble by setting fire to spots which have escaped the flames in order to drive out the white settlers.

Thousands of head of stock have been shipped in from Texas, and now they will all have to be reshipped back or thrown on the eastern markets. It is impossible to give an estimate of the loss, but it will reach into the millions. All the wells and streams in the country are drying up, and the people are beginning to realize that their only salvation is to seek some other place, and they are leaving the result of years of toil, and going back to eastern states.

Wants to Succeed Governor Oglesby.

GENESE, Ill., Nov. 24.—Hon. Clarke E. Carr, of Galesburg, has been making a tour of this part of the state. Mr. Carr is a candidate for gubernatorial honors at the hands of the Republicans. In case Oglesby is not a candidate, Mr. Carr will have a large following here. Since it has become known that Congressman Henderson will not enter the gubernatorial race, Carr is favorably spoken of by some of the former's friends. It is also said that Congressman Henderson has decided not to be a candidate for congressman next year.

CLARKE E. CARR.

Gave Himself Up.
CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—William Meyers, who shot his wife and attempted to shoot his son and daughter at Houston avenue and Ninetieth street last Sunday evening, and who has since been at large, walked into the Hyde Park police station last night and gave himself up. Meyers has been in hiding since the shooting and the police were of the opinion that he had committed suicide. He refused to say anything as to the motives for his murderous deed. Mrs. Meyers, who was reported dying last night, is said to be dying this morning.

Murderers Handed Over the Line.

OTTAWA, Can., Nov. 24.—The department of justice has been notified that Gaddy and Laotie, the murderers of McLeish, have been handed over by the United States authorities and safely lodged in jail at Regina. It was reported that an attempt at rescue would be made by the friends of the two prisoners, and the United States government, at the request of Sir Lionel West, accordingly furnished a guard to the frontier, where they were handed over to a detachment of mounted police.

Interesting to Base Ball Players.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Secretary C. D. White, of Utica, representing the International Base Ball association, has issued a circular asking all minor Leagues to select delegates to a convention of such associations to be held early in December at either Buffalo or Cleveland, to consider the question of electing three delegates to act as minor League representatives upon the arbitration committee, as such Leagues were invited to do at the recent meeting of the National League, in New York city.

Victims of the Scholten Disaster.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The wife and eight children of John P. Frost, a laborer in the salt mills in this city, were lost with the steamer W. A. Scholten. Frost came from West Prussia about nine months ago, and saved all his money to pay for the passage of his wife and children. It took all his savings—$153—to buy the tickets. His wife was about forty-five years old, and the children ranged from eight months up to twenty-two years of age.

McKay Defeats Conley.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—John McKay, of Halifax, defeated Peter Conley, of Portland, in a three mile race with turn, on the Charles river, Tuesday afternoon. The water was smooth as glass and the race was interesting throughout. Conley had a boat's length advantage during the first half of the race, but after making the turn McKay gradually closed on him and took the lead, winning by several lengths. Time 8:15. The race was for $350 a side.

WHO IS DON M. DICKINSON?

INTERESTING READING ABOUT THE INCOMING CABINET OFFICER.

A Clever Little Speech at a Supper in Which He Eulogized the Present Postmaster General—How He Prayed for Cleveland at a Michigan Convention.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 24.—The Detroit bar gave Judge Reilly a supper last night. Don M. Dickinson presided. In closing his response to the toast to his future happiness Judge Reilly proposed the health of the postmaster general, which was uproariously applauded, and Mr. Dickinson was called for.

On rising Mr. Dickinson eulogized the state of Wisconsin, while the table wavered. He spoke of her geographical position, her resources, and said she produced grain, badgers, lumber, intelligent people and able men. He said he felt honored in being called upon to respond to the toast of one of her most distinguished sons, who was one of the most distinguished men of the nation.

"A man," he said, "who had conquered the hearts of his political opponents by his noble tributes to their great chief, Ulysses S. Grant; who had won the affection and regard of his party by fidelity to its principles, and had gained the confidence and respect of the whole country by his magnificent administration of the post-office department of the Federal government. We honor ourselves as we honor him when we drink the toast to William F. Vilas."

The applause that followed was fifty parts for Mr. Vilas and fifty for Mr. Dickinson's clever transfer of the significance of the toast from himself to the present postmaster general.

How He Prayed for Cleveland.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 24.—The appointment of Don M. Dickinson to a position in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet has revived recollections of a scene during which was demonstrated a courage and a devotion such as is seldom witnessed in a politician. It was a convention held here in August, 1884. The Rev. Mr. Tilden opened the proceedings with a prayer, in which he invoked blessings on Jefferson, Samuel J. Tilden and others, but failed to mention President Cleveland. Mr. Dickinson then arose to address the convention. A hush fell on the great gathering as, with head erect and flashing eyes, he said:

"MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION—I listened with bowed head and reverent heart to the eloquent invocation of the reverend gentlemen with the sacred name. His office here was to voice the prayer in the hearts of the members of the convention, but I missed in his utterances that sentiment which I believe to be uppermost in every breast in this body, and with the utmost reverence I can speak that sentiment." Then, with uplifted hands and with full and solemn voice, he added: "God bless and save and keep that Democrat of Democrats—the noblest of them all—Grover Cleveland, president of the United States."

One could have heard a pin drop for an instant, and then the crowd rose as one man. Hats, handkerchiefs and hands were thrown up, and such a roar of human voices rose in wild cheering that speech and business were suspended for ten minutes.

HERR MOST'S TRIAL.

The Jury Complete and What the Anarchist Said in Court.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The trial of Herr Most, for delivering an incendiary speech, began yesterday. Curiosity seekers and Anarchists were excluded from the room. Eleven jurors were chosen after much byplay. The state is represented by Assistant District Attorney Nicoll, and Herr Most by Messrs. Howe and Hummell.

The Most jury was completed at noon and Mr. Nicoll at once proceeded to open the case for the people. In the course of his speech he defined the charge against Most as much more serious than at first sight appeared. The charge was only one step removed from treason, and the proof of the prisoner's guilt was of the strongest character. Mr. Nicoll then read from the code what constituted an unlawful assemblage and inciting to riot, and pointed out to the jury that Most and his friends had not only been guilty of unlawful assemblage, but that his speech on the 12th instant incited to riot.

Louis Roth, a ward detective, was the first witness. He testified that he was present at Kraemer's hall on the night that Most made his speech. It was the night following the day on which the Anarchists were hanged in Chicago. He talked with the men assembled there. When Most entered the hall he was greeted with "Here comes our leader." When Most began to speak he addressed his hearers as "Slaves." He asserted that Ling had been murdered. He said that all those who had been connected with the carrying out of the sentence should be attended to. "If I knew who had strangled our brothers," shouted Most, "I would never rest until I had strangled them."

Lawyer Howe, counsel for Most, asked Roth if he knew the German for the word "fate." Witness did not, and was cross-examined further. John J. Safe, another detective, corroborated Roth in full, and swore that he heard Most use the words inciting vengeance against Oglesby and the courts. Recess.

A Fight With a Panther.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 24.—Engineer Markham and his fireman had a lively encounter with a panther, Sunday night, between Minden and Artell. Some part of the machinery got out of order and the train was stopped. He and his fireman got out and were at work on both sides of the engine. Just as they were completing the repairs, a terrible yell was heard and before Markham could turn, a large panther sprang upon him and buried its claws in the engineer's shoulder. The fireman came to his rescue and struck the brute over the head with a heavy wrench. This partially stunned the panther, which loosened its hold, but before either of the men could take advantage of the situation, he made a vicious leap for the fireman, burying one of its claws in the man's hip. Markham then pulled his pistol and by a lucky shot hit the panther between the eyes, killing him. Both men were badly hurt and will be laid up for some time.
