A MYSTERIOUS SOCIETY.

An Ex-Member Tells Some Of The Secrets.

The Oriental Order of Humility Which Flourished in Tucson Some Twenty Years Ago

It was twenty years ago, Tucson was the capital, and the legislature was in session. Times were lively, drinks were two bits and the "third house" was quite as busy as its legalized contemporaries.

Among the members of this particular body was one Henry Bigelow, from Prescott, of pleasing appearance, tall, with long, heavy black beard and a fairly musical voice, a man to impress one in address. He was also fond of a practical joke of the deeper class for many of which he was quite as peculiarly fitted as in his duties as lobbyist.

Soon after his arrival in Tucson talk was about of a certain new secret society. "It is the best thing out; the very best I have ever seen," said a memb. "Talk about your Masonic fraternity, its symbols, its protection and its fellowship, it doesn't compare with our Oriental Order of Humility," said another. The society did seem most popular, and no sooner did a man become a member than his praises were of the loudest. "So secret! so deep! so mysterious!" Its ranks swelled all being anxious to penetrate its depths, and awful mysteries. An ex-member tells of an initiation:

"We all stood around the candidate, each incognito from our black masks and robes. All was solemn, still, impressive. Bigelow as head of the order stood before the candidate and drew from him the most impressive oaths of solemn secrecy, and the candidate would shudder as Bigelow said in his deepest voice: 'Let the grand final ceremony be performed!' All around was deathly quiet. Not one of the solemn black figures moved. The candidate could hardly breathe for the awfulness of the occasion. Frightened and wondering he was prostrated before a black curtain near. Down and down, till his head touched the floor. Still the masks did not move. They might have been of stone. Invisible hands drew back the curtain, and the candidate lifted his head and gazed on the emblem of the order; a dilapidated burro stood before his astonished gaze. Then a laugh so loud and hearty that the dupe gazed at the beast again. No, it was not the animal; only the masks, but how they enjoyed it! They almost doubled, and usually at this portion of the situation the candidate demanded that he be released. 'One more signal my brother,' said Bigelow; one more signal, and then you are one of the mysterious and wonderful order. And now my brother, learn the signal of distress. Will the brethren kindly show the candidate the signal of distress, that he may repeat, if likewise in distress.' Each of the figures placed his thumbs on his hips, and slowly waved his hands back and forth in imitation of an animal moving its ears. 'This means that the emblem of order, otherwise the member, is athirst, and would drink,' said the chief. 'Are the brethren athirst? If so give the sign of the order.' The brethren were of course athirst, and the candidate was supposed to acquiesce in their feeling, provided he followed by the signal of the distress, when asked to show how it is done.' Invariably he showed the method, and off came the masks. All most bodily the candidate was carried to the best bar in town. Two bits a drink meant $50 $60 or even $100 for the relief of the distressed brethren, and then plans were laid to take in another candidate. The late dupes were of course most anxious that others be caught, a preacher being among those initiated, who begged for dear life to be released when the emblem of the order was introduced. That bar made thousands of dollars from the Oriental Order of Humility."—Citizen.

OF FEMINE INTEREST.
In thirty of the largest cities of the country there are now well equipped cooking schools.

A granddaughter of George III, and Hannah Lightfoot, the Quakeress, his organogatic wife, lives in Chicago.

There are a dozen women piano tuners in Philadelphia. The new Conservatory of Music of that city will give instruction in piano tuning and regulation.

Following the example of India and Japan, the Siamese are about to establish a school for native girls of high rank under the management of English ladies.

To Lady Brook, the noted English beauty, is due the founding of a school of needlework for poor girls near Easton, in the midst of a poor agricultural district. The school has been very successful.

Mme. Modjeska has more faith in art than in mere feeling of the stage. She is quoted as saying: "But I always act worse when I feel most. Feeling is all very well in a way, but it should not dominate a part. Acting is, after all, a little bit of feeling added to a great deal of art."

The gallant young gentlemen of the St. Louis Medical College recently handed in a petition to the dean praying for the exclusion of the lady students from the institution. The dean gave the petitioners their choice of withdrawing their names from the paper or leaving the college.

Fraulein Helene Lange of Berlin has proposed to the German government that all girls between the ages of 18 and 52 years shall be compelled to serve one year as nurses in the hospital, attendants in the people's kitchens, the kindergartens, the homes for nurses, governesses and servants in order to increase the number of capable nurses and attendants necessary in war times.

Another marriage between an American girl and a Chinese is chronicled. The bride, Josephine Neely, is the niece of a Presbyterian clergyman, and the groom is a tea merchant, a naturalized American, and a Christian convert. His name is James D. Bruce.

At Gloucester, Mass., the golden wedding of Captain and Mrs. Charles Babson recently took place. At one time there were in the reception room five men, Captain Babson, Judge James Davis and Messrs. Calef, Caswell and John Babson, who had been married fifty years.

Pang Yun, credited with being the richest Chinaman east of San Francisco has become the husband of Miss Ada Norton, a recent graduate of the High School in Indianapolis, where Yun is also in business, and described as the handsome and accomplished daughter of a wealthy citizen of Indiana's capital.

Mrs. G. M. Harris, an American woman, who for many years has resided in Venice, is one of those gentle heroines who are still remembered with grateful affection by survivors of our civil war. In no less than forty-nine battles this sweet woman found opportunity to wait skillfully upon wounded soldiers, in camp and upon the field of angel of mercy, while in many a hospital she cared impartially for the suffering on both sides, even washing the weary feet of the dust grimed and pain stricken fellows.

over the Apache bad lands, when we found a lake entirely surrounded by Indians. The color of the lake was brown, and its cool breezes were of a most fascinating odor. We were surprised to see half of the Indians with their heads in the water; the other half were dancing and yelling as if on the warpath. Our guide filled a tin pan with the contents of the lake, and we drank it; I never drank such a pleasing liquid in my life. If there had been a cherry in the bottom of the pan I would have taken an oath that we were tasting cocktails. We carried a painful to town, and as a fact you could not distinguish it from a Manhattan cocktail. It was the most mysterious incident that I ever came across, but the phenomenon is easily explained by the Arizona sages.

"In prehistoric days that country was covered with prickly pears or cactus, from which mescal is distilled. This growth was covered with water and mud, and heat and chemical forces of the earth's interior worked upon the process of distillation, just as oil is formed beneath the earth's shell. Some volcanic force pushed it out of the ground, and it was nothing more than a whiskey geyser. It disappears now and then, but can be found about half the time."

"Do you suppose it is there now?" quickly asked the Englishmen.

"Certainly."

"Then I'll change my route and take in Arizona."—Chicago Herald.

AND STILL IT GROWS.
Good Crops, Reciprocity, the New Tariff and Unprecedented Trade.
Taken altogether the past year stands as the most striking in the history of the foreign trade of the United States. It is really remarkable in how many different ways the year is distinguished beyond all other years and takes first rank.

The Bureau of Statistics has this week furnished the statement for December and the twelve months, and by comparing it with the statements for the years preceding we discover a number of very prominent characteristics.

To cite only the more important of these, we find:
First.—That we exported more wheat and flour than ever before in any period of twelve months.

Second.—That we also exported more cotton than in any previous year.

Third.—That our total merchandise exports have never been equaled.

Fourth.—That our imports have likewise been unexcelled.

Fifth.—That the total trade (imports and exports combined) is far in excess of that of any other year.

October was the first month to break the record, with exports of $102,877,243. This was followed in November by still better results, namely, a total of $110,193,537, and now for December as stated, we have an aggregate but a trifle below $120,000,000.—Financial Chronicle.

Crisp And Casual.
False teeth increase life from four to six years.

The government of Nicaragua offers 240 acres of coffee land to every married immigrant an one hundred and twenty to every single one.

A descendant of General James Oglethorpe, the founder of Georgia, is suing for a large portion of Savannah real estate, to which he believes himself entitled.

In computing a man's age Chinamen always reckon two years back from the day when he celebrated his first birthday; or, in other words, as though he were a year old at the time of his birth.

The Belgian Minister of War has just decided that in future every soldier will be furnished with a small bone disk, bearing the name, birthplace and regimental number of the holder, so that in the event of his being killed or injured on the field of battle identification will be easy and rapid.

Out of each 1,000 people living there died during the year ending May 31, 1890, in New York city, 27; in Brooklyn, 25; in Boston, 24; in Philadelphia, 22; in Chicago, 21; in Detroit, 20; in St. Louis, 19, and in Minneapolis, 17, while in the country districts the loss was only 11 or 12 out of each 1,000.

Yuma! What recollections the name itself brings up! Yuma, where they dig for wood and climb for water; where they chop wood with a sledgehammer, cut hay with a hoe, and plant corn with a crowbar! Where there are more Mexicans than Americans, and more Indians than either. Where the thermometer seldom gets above one hundred and eighteen degrees in the shade, and where the wicked Yumaite in sheet sent home for his blanket. Where the seat of honor is the left hand, and the railroad hotel gives the traveler tender beefsteaks. Where the river is the color of the earth, and the earth the color of the water. Where steamboats run comfortably on moist sand, and the prisoners in the penitentiaries keep store in the prison yard. Where the girls are "tough" and the boys are "gentle and refined."

Where they eat strawberries in January, and where the desert blossoms (sometimes) like the rose. Where the rainfall is less in a year than it is in Oregon in a day, and where the old men pitch pennies and fly kites. Where the Indian man is practically peaceful and clean, and where the entire world seems topsy-turvy. Such is Yuma, a no-man's land, where California and Mexico meet.—Ventura Free Press.

The Dead Soldiers.
The bones and dust of the men buried in the different post graveyards throughout Arizona and New Mexico will probably soon be gathered together in one camping ground, in the national cemetery at Fort Leavenworth. The government has advertised for bids for their removal and the work of digging up, disinfecting, re-boxing, etc., has begun in some of the long ago abandoned posts. From Fort defiance there passed through Albuquerque, this week, 32 boxes with the dust of brave boys who 40 years ago reported to the Great Captain on the Other Side. How light they were! Those wooden tents and all that was left of the stalwart fellows who in those days stood be-

A white livered, craven hearted, leathery lunged, dwarf scaled, chicken gizzard, pudden brained, pigeon-toed, weazel faced, buzzard billed, bear eyed, hawk nosed, claw fingered, son of Belial, suggested a day or too ago that he would rather have the Flail against him than for him. He thought differently before this paper gave him a twist for his meanness.—Fremont (Neb.) Flail.

Mrs. Henry K. Updegrave of Tower City, Pa., is a great-grandmother at the age of 47. She was married when she was fourteen and her eldest child followed in her hymeneal footsteps by walking to the altar at the age of 15. The grand daughter came in due time and was wedded when 16, and now every lady in Tower City is wondering whether the great-granddaughter will be married when she is 17.
