It was all Celia's fault. If it hadn't been for her it would never have occurred to me to quarrel with Jack; it would never have occurred to me that any quarrel was necessary to prove the strength of his love; I should have taken it for granted and been happy still.

I detect Celia. We were so happy till she came to stay with Jack's people and told me I was spoiling him. Of course it was no business of hers if I were, she admitted that, but she was so fond of me that she felt she must speak, being older and more experienced, and I implored me to remember that it wasn't only my lover I was spoiling, but my future husband; and if I let him have his own way in everything now, I should never be able to have mine by and when we were married. She spoke so seriously about it that I couldn't help being a little impressed, though of course I didn't let her know that, and I wouldn't have told her for the world that I intended to ask her advice on the first opportunity that offered. For it was one thing to quarrel privately with Jack, but quite another to tell Celia that I was going to do it, and take her into my confidence against him. So Jack and I quarreled at the Hornes' dance last night. I hardly know what it was about in the first instance, but it grew and grew until it seemed to me there was nothing was about in the quarrel; and Jack was soon terribly in earnest. Though we had been engaged for three weeks, I had no idea he had it in him to be so angry; and, of course, I lost my head, and ASKS FOR INVESTIGATION Tom Johnson's Resolution in Regard to the Affair of Tuesday. POLICE ARE ROUNDLY SCORED They Beat and Bullied a Defenseless Man, Says the Representative—Speaker Crisp Turns the Issue Down—Lemuel Eli Quigg Objects to Immediate Consideration.

The scenes which occurred on the Capitol grounds Tuesday, when in the presence of thousands of spectators, including many Congressmen, the Coxeyite marshal, Carl Brown, was arrested, and a number of onlookers were clubbed and beaten by the police, were the subject of resolutions introduced by Representative Tom L. Johnson yesterday morning. In the course of his remarks Mr. Johnson took occasion to denounce the manner in which the commonwealers had been treated. The resolutions were adopted by a large assembly of people, including a considerable number of the regular and special police of this District and area.

THE Speaker then gave Mr. Johnson the floor to show whether there was any question of privilege presented by the resolutions. Mr. Johnson—No, I want to pass it. The Speaker then gave Mr. Johnson the floor to show whether there was any question of privilege presented by the resolutions. Mr. Johnson—No, I want to pass it.

"No, no, I can't start with it. He could not be so cruel, so unreasonably." His letters, too. Must I give them up? I turn them over in my hand, such a little bundle of them as there is, and so very hard to read till one learns to know how to write, or to love the writer, which is it? And remember the pleasure with which I first received them, and the pride with which I have poured over them since. I pore over them now, straining my eyes to decipher the well-known characters in the flickering firelight. Dear Jack, what a vile hand he writes, and how very nicely he expresses himself.

DUE TO GOLD SHIPMENTS. New York Stock Market Weak Owing to Anticipation of Them. New York, May 3.—Anticipation of large gold shipments by to-morrow's and Saturday's steamers had a depressing influence on the stock exchange markets to-day. The action of the other bondholders' committee in Reading, looking to a foreclosure to generate mortgage and the formation of a new committee for the same purpose, was another disturbing element of the speculative situation, inasmuch as it postpones indefinitely the reorganization of the company, and may possibly result in the disintegration of the Reading system.

"You have returned my letters promptly enough—how can I thank you for such promptness—but you forgot your own. As you say, I have no right to them now." "You wish me to take them? Very well." "I do! Please give them back to me!" "I can't do it," and a great tear spashes on the packet. "I'm very sorry, but I can't do it." "Don't bother about it, and he lays his hand on mine suddenly. "No need for such a fuss. Give them to me as they are." "What are you going to do with them?" as he takes them from my trembling hands. "Put them in the fire!" and he turns to do so. "No, no, no!" I cry, springing forward and laying a detaining hand on his arm. "Oh, don't do that!" "Why not?" pausing. "You don't want them, and I'm sure I don't." "I do! Please give them back to me!" "What for?" "To keep! To remind me!" "Of my folly?" "Of your folly!" "Your folly is over and done with! Our engagement is broken off!" he says moodily. "Better forget it ever existed." "I cannot do that with an irremissible little sob. "I am waiting for those letters." "Take them, then," and he throws them down on the table. "Keep them to compare with Horne's, if you like. I don't care!"
