CONCERNS OF THE DISTRICT Medical Men to Talk About the Water Supply.

CITIZENS WANT A SCHOOLHOUSE Commissioners Found It Impracticable to Include a Building for the Rock Creek Section in Their Estimates—Northeast Improvements to Be Reconsidered.

The Medical Society of the District has invited the Commissioners to attend a meeting of that body on the 24th instant, when there will be a discussion of the District water supply.

The Woodburn Citizens Association was represented before the Commissioner's board by a delegation with a request for increased school facilities.

In commenting upon the visit, President Ross said yesterday that while the board had made more recommendations for school purposes this year than usual, it had found it impracticable to include a building for the Rock Creek section.

WIT WAS THEIR PUEL. Comrades of Schofield Garrison Give a Campfire of More than Ordinary Interest.

Triumphs filled with delicious coffee, sandwiches, pipes, good Irish songs, speeches that ranged from grave to gay, were the chief features of a programme provided for the celebration of Gen. J. M. Schofield Garrison, No. 28, of the Regular Army and Navy Union, at Grand Army Hall, last night.

Previous to the display of tin-pins and the flow of oratory the garrison held a business meeting, at which there were sundry enactments of interest to the membership.

The reception of a report from a committee previously appointed on reorganization, and the provision was made for important revision of the ritualistic work and the by-laws; certain instructions were also given to the representatives to be hereafter elected to the National Union, which will be held in Chicago, February 22, 1895.

It was arranged among other things that the garrison should devote more attention hereafter to benevolence and fraternity, and such recommendations as were made upon this and other points by the committee were formally and unanimously adopted.

Commander W. H. Signor presided over the deliberations, and Adjutant G. A. Warren attended to the records. The camp fire opened at 9 o'clock, when the substantial comforts were dispensed, it is needless to say, with a lavish generosity.

Gen. Schofield is an honorary member of the garrison. It has a membership of 215, and is composed, as its name indicates, of regular Army and Navy veterans.

"Don't see why they will persecute a man so, and especially an innocent one."

When the desperado was taken back he walked through a living lane, and another amusing incident occurred.

"Say, old man, that fellow there is trying to take a picture of you and I'm going to prevent him."

The young man had his side toward the camera, with the camera man walking thus all the way to the jail chattering away at a lively rate, thus shutting off the other man from getting a picture completely.

"When the desperado was taken back he walked through a living lane, and another amusing incident occurred."

After Searcey was securely locked up again the crowd lounged about for a while. An amateur photographer was again brought into unpleasant prominence.

More excitement was furnished very soon when the Kodak found out to be wrong, and there was a heated discussion.

When the desperado was taken back he walked through a living lane, and another amusing incident occurred."

EXHIBIT OFFICIALS PLEASED BUT RETICENT. The two messengers and the express officials hurried to the Queen City Hotel, and had a long talk.

It was not until the identification of the man by Crutcher and Murray, after it was over the corresponding approach of Mr. Hill, and asked him if the messengers had recognized the man.

"Well, it is a hard thing to tell a man afterward with the case in such circumstances as a robbery," he replied, with a smile, "but we have nothing to complain of."

Nothing more could be obtained from Mr. Hill, and the case was then approached. He absolutely refused to say anything and so did Murray.

When the 5:55 train left Cumberland among the passengers were Agent Alexander, of Charlottesville, Va., who had reported the robbery was committed; Assistant Messenger Murray, and Attorney Thomas. They said that there was no further use of them staying, and Mr. Thomas will see that the requisition is carried up.

PROBABLY SEARCEY'S PAL. Arrest in Cincinnati of a Man with Money Concealed About His Person.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—The police received word this afternoon that a stranger was being held on suspicion at Chester Park. The man in attempting to get on a train at that station slipped and broke his leg.

He acted suspiciously in refusing to go to a hospital or receive medical attention. It was found that he had a large sum of money on his person.

It was then suspected that he was one of the Virginia express robbers. To-night it is learned his name is Charles Augustus Field, and it is believed he belongs to the Aquia gang, although he made no confession.

Twelve hundred dollars was recovered from him, $150 being in his hat, other amounts in his clothing, boots and satchel. He wore a false straw hat of money.

WORKING ON CLEWS GALORE. Adams Express Officials May Turn the Current of Suspicion.

The Adams Express officials in this city held numerous conferences last night behind locked doors in the company's office on Pennsylvania avenue, and it was reported that they had received important clues which will cause several Pinkertons to take a trip down the Potomac to-day.

When queried by a Times reporter last night the officials were as mute as clams, and would only say: "We are awaiting the outcome of Searcey's hearing at Cumberland."

Several of the Washington detectives are of the opinion that the plot to rob the express car was concocted in Washington, and they expect to have some important information on that point before the end of this week.

Mr. Heidenheimer, the Avenue pawnbroker, told a Times reporter that on September 27 a rough-looking man, who gave his name as Charles T. Arlington, and his occupation as an employer of the Washington & Georgetown Railroad Company, came to his place and pawned for $17 a lady's gold watch and a plain gold ring.

He was about thirty-two years of age, needed shaving badly, was quite talkative, and stood about five feet nine inches in height. He said he needed money badly and wanted more than $17 on the articles.

The railroad officials deny that there was ever such an individual as Arlington in their employ. On the same day, September 27, the alleged Arlington pawned a valuable gold Masonic ring at Steinhilber's pawnshop under the name of C. J. Searcey, Memphis, Tenn.

Adams Express played the Lost Horn as a coronet solo, and there was more fancy dancing by Eugene Walter and Willie Campbell; and Misses Clara May Reicherbrock, Fannie Edwards, Bessie Otterbrook, Rosie Steiner, Lottie Hutchins and Margaret Wilin. Miss Margie Macawell sang a soprano solo; Miss Perry Langley gave a fancy Indian club drill, and the Independent Band and Mandolin Club rendered several selections.

The program concluded with a banjo solo by Billy Eberhart, after which there was dancing until a late hour.
