Commissioners Stole a March on the Citizens

The Bargain Was Made Early in June—30,000 Feet of Ground Purchased—Persuasion To Be Tried and Then the Courts.

It seems that the Commissioners have been enabled to keep a secret from seeking out. As early as last June a bargain was made for a site for the proposed pest hospital, and not until yesterday was the fact discovered. The ground purchased consists of 30,000 feet in a subdivision of Mount Pleasant known as "Subdivision Plina." It is located between Bismarck and Irving streets and Sherman and Brightwood avenues. The price paid was 30 cents per foot, and the lots purchased are numbered 6 and 7 and 11 and 20 of block 3. They lie together, and the site is said to be most eligible.

The hospital to be located on the property is for minor contagious diseases, such as diphtheria, scarlet fever, and typhoid fever. If the plans the Commissioners have in view are carried out successfully the institution will be a model of its kind.

The Times predicted more than a week ago that the Commissioners were about to locate the hospital, and in connection therewith published a story of the good work done in the matter of securing funds necessary by the Daisy Chain Guild. It now appears that even at that time the work had been done, and the only reason it was not made public was that some details had not been perfected.

It will be remembered that when Commissioner Powell was interviewed by The Times several weeks ago upon the subject, he said that whatever action should be taken by the board would be final, and that in his opinion the Commissioners would not recede. This was in substance the opinion given at the same time by President Ross.

"We are going to fight it," was the emphatic response made last night by President J. W. Semeriville, of the Mount Pleasant Citizens' Association, when asked by The Times' representative what action would be taken with respect to the location of the hospital.

"We are going to fight it," he reiterated, "I saw the president of the Columbia Heights Association, and we have agreed that a joint meeting shall be held to take action."

"We shall try persuasion upon the Commissioners first, of course, but if that does not avail we shall try the courts."

"The location of the hospital at the point selected affects two schools, the Colored Orphan Asylum and Gerding Hospital, of the public institutions. It is within about three squares of Calumet place, Mrs. C. Logan's home, and beside, nine-tenths of the buildings now being erected in Mount Pleasant are located in that section. It is a direct slap at our section."

would oppose the location without exception. He believed the citizens of Mount Pleasant feel as he does, and he is decidedly opposed to it.

A joint public meeting of the citizens of Mount Pleasant and Columbia Heights will be held on Monday evening at the corner of Fourteenth street and Florida avenue northwest at 7:30 o'clock to take action.

CONDEMNED BY ITS NEWS COLUMNS. And now the "Post" should lecture the New York Chamber of Commerce.

Errors Treated: Your morning contemporary rests its opposition to any further consideration or action by the board of trade on the civil service reform resolution, upon the ground that the subject matter of the resolution is foreign to the objects and scope of the board. Its latest utterance appears in the issue of November 21, wherein it protests against a course of action on the part of the board of trade that would belittle its influence and be liable to serious misconstruction.

In the same issue of this "dear old fellow" in true civil service reform I read an account of the annual dinner of the New York Chamber of Commerce, an organization similar in design to and at least of equal dignity with our board of trade. The principal speaker of the occasion was the chairman of the new-fangled committee of seventy, who, discussing the plans for continuing and completing the good work so auspiciously begun on November 6, said among other things: "The political influence as much as the regular Army, and this can only be accomplished with a single head. The chamber of commerce is committed to this principle by an unanimous vote."

If the chamber of commerce of New York City finds itself able to assume a position in such a matter surely the board of trade can afford to follow its example.

Ladies of the Southern Relief Society. Seidom does staid old Willard Hall experience bustling activity such as was exhibited there yesterday afternoon and evening. The ladies of the Southern Relief Society may well be proud of their efforts, for their venture promises to be a happy success, judging from the throng of callers at the luncheon and the size of the audience to witness the dramatic performance in the evening, at which a fine programme was presented and most artistically rendered, such number being applauded to the echo. The programme opened with a Shakespearean burlesque, the "Piano and Dances," which was very cleverly rendered by the following young ladies: Miss Hazel as Lady Macbeth, Miss Ball as Fortinbras, Miss Pendleton, Juliet, and Miss Elsie Page as Ophelia. Following these were recitations by Miss Florence L. Holtzman and Miss Elsie Stewart, the programme concluding with a ninth-century farce, entitled "The Register," which was very well presented by the Misses Christy and Fairfax and Messrs. Gadden and Morgan. The concerted music was furnished by Schroder's Orchestra. The luncheon will be continued to-day, and this evening there will be a dance.

Miss Stevenson No Better. ARBEVILLE, N. C., Nov. 21.—Miss Mary Stevenson, daughter of the Vice President, is no better to-day. Hope of her ultimate recovery has been about given up.

IF RUPTURED. Consult at THE ROBERTS PROCESS. J. M. Roberts, a citizen of Mount Pleasant, has selected a site for such a hospital in a section so densely populated would not be tolerated in any other city of the country. He thought the proper place for the institution was south of the Eastern Branch.

DOING HONOR TO THE CHIEF

Reception to Gen. Lawler, Head of the G. A. R., by Local Posts.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME

Three Organizations Visited by the Distinguished Visitors—Speeches, Music, and a Luncheon—Living Over Old Days—Gen. Lawler Interviews with Secretary Thurber.

There were patriotic speeches and good music, and a general interchange of G. A. R. courtesies and compliments at Potomac Department headquarters, No. 1410 Pennsylvania avenue last night, and the comrades were out, full 600 strong.

The occasion was of more than extraordinary importance, owing to the presence of the commander-in-chief of the order, Gen. Lawler, and his chief aide, Adj. Gen. Jones. Three posts had the honor of the extraordinary visitation, the party including Commander Bickford and his staff, of the Department of the Potomac.

The distinguished guests were first received by Lincoln Post, No. 3, where the commander-in-chief briefly addressed the comrades upon subjects of great interest to the order, his remarks being enthusiastically applauded. The adjutant-general responded to an invitation for a talk, and Commander Bickford was also called upon and responded felicitously.

The hall was so densely packed that it was difficult to move about, but the proceedings lost none of their interest to the enthusiastic old boys on account.

Extraneous themselves from the moving mass of blue coats, baggies, and brass buttons, whose owners were living over the old days once more, the visitors proceeded to the rooms of Summer Post, No. 9, where a similar programme was carried out. An added feature here was the splendid address by the G. A. R. Musical Union, of the choir of Summer Post, Senior Vice Commander Anderson, Junior Vice Commander Howlett, Department Chaplain Smith, and others made for the post.

Taking carriage the commander-in-chief and the department officials were driven to Costello Hall, the headquarters of the G. A. R. Post, No. 20, where there were already congregated over 300 waiting comrades, who had assembled to receive them. The numbers added by the visitors were crowded the hall almost to suffocation, but the enthusiasm was undiminished.

Speeches were made by those who had officiated as the orators on the other two occasions, by Chaplain Blackford, Comrade Dennis O'Connor, and others. Comrade Morgan sang a patriotic song as his contribution. Pipes were passed, and there was an old-fashioned "smoker" and campfire in progress within a few minutes after the arrival of the visitors, Commander Benjamin, of Lafayette Post, serving as master of ceremonies.

A beautiful luncheon of coffee and sandwiches was served here, and there was a general handshaking indulged in.

Potomac Department officials hung upon the outer walls of their headquarters yesterday a brand new edition of "Old Glory" that is double the size of any other flag in the city.

Commander-in-Chief Lawler was asked last night by a Times reporter if he had accomplished the purpose of his visit to Washington.

"I had a very pleasant interview with Private Secretary Thurber," said he, "and presented the resolutions entrusted to me. I also made a plain statement of the cases of the old soldiers discharged from the departments, and I know my papers will reach the President. I have the promise against a course of action on the part of the board of trade that would belittle its influence and be liable to serious misconstruction."

Gen. Lawler will leave this evening at 5 o'clock, but will return to the city in February to attend the department encampment.

FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Prospects Most Favorable for Placing It on a Permanent Footing—Gen. Greeley's Report.

The proposition to establish a free public library was the principal topic at last night's meeting of the Washington Library Association. President Spofford was absent to lecture at Carroll Institute. Dr. Cyrus Adler, librarian of the Smithsonian, took the chair.

Gen. A. W. Greeley, chairman of the committee on free public library, was present, but was forced to leave for Pittsburg in half an hour, and his report was heard at once. As read its essential parts are as follows:

"There has been one meeting, at which the chairman was authorized by the unanimous vote of the full committee to ask in the name of the association and individual subscribers to those already obtained to him in an individual capacity."

"So far the prospects are most favorable for placing the library on a permanent footing. About 150 names have been offered as a nucleus for the library itself."

"It has been considered that an annual income of $2,000 for five years is the sum that would be necessary for the care of a small library and reading room, but it is hoped that the sum of $4,000 annually may be contributed by the association, and the sum of $2,385, payable in five annual installments, has been secured, and $500 to $600 were promised, thus insuring an annual income of nearly $3,000."

"There has been no plan formulated, no room selected, no steps taken to advance any partial or imperfect scheme; but the whole question of organization, location, and administration is left to the action of the committee to be hereafter selected by the subscribers. Such of the members as are willing to ask subscriptions are requested to inform the chairman of this committee, and to send him lists of the individuals they are willing to approach, so that there may be no duplication of work or confusion of action."

Gen. Greeley's report was made the special business for the next meeting, which will be December 19, instead of December 26, the regular date, which coincides with the meeting of the American Historical Association. The report of the committee on lending books will also be considered at that meeting.

Secretary Fassig's report showed new members Dr. J. M. Toner, Gen. A. W. Greeley, Mrs. A. F. Stevens, Irene Tyler, Rev. Mr. Oppfins, of Georgetown, and Dr. Cleveland Abbe.

Committees appointed by the executive committee were reported as follows: Free public library, Messrs. Greeley, Spofford, and Adler; Formulation of plan, Messrs. E. H. Fernald in Washington libraries, Adair, Cutter, and Fassig; Care of maps, Prindle and Parsons; Lending books, Francis, Corwin, and Fernald; Public relations, Messrs. Low, Milk, and Church; Exchange of department books, Farquhar, Fitzgerald, and Fuller.

A discussion followed, in which participated Messrs. Dulles, of the board of education, which is working for the library; J. G. Arms, Col. Flint, Mrs. H. L. McL. Kimball, of the Treasury Department; Messrs. Lowdermilk, Fitzgerald, Thayer, and the chairman. It was made evident that not many books could really be expected from departments libraries. It was agreed that expectations of this help had grown too high. It was pointed out, however, that a small tax would raise all the money necessary.

Mr. Fitzgerald said citizens of the District should furnish the money for its own library. Others agreed and it was suggested that the bill before Congress should be modified so as to make the District pay the whole cost. Dr. Adler then gave an interesting talk on the libraries of Europe, in which he spoke of the British Museum, Bodleian, Athenaeum, Leipzig, Milan, and Altona libraries.

COMING TO THE THEATERS.

Boy's "A Temperance Town," which will be the attraction at the New National for the coming week, has been received with even greater favor than Mr. Hoyt's recent efforts: "A Temperance Town" is a satire on prohibition, and yet so happily has the author written that it pleases the temperance advocates as much as it does "the rum crowd."

The author does not attempt to preach a sermon, but as the question is presented in a merry, satirical vein the result is one of the most entertaining comedies that has ever been written. The cast is one of the best that has yet been seen in a Hoyt company. Mr. L. R. Rockwell, who plays the part of Miss Jones, the lady, good-natured, good-for-nothing town drunkard, is a comedian who has been starring for several years. Mr. Lee Harrison, another bright comedian, plays Flings, while Joseph H. Gristler, who has been in the troupe since the first of the season, plays Currie, Miss Anna Robinson, Miss Marie Lutz, and Miss Affie Warner, all of considerable reputation, will present the other characters.

The attraction at Albaugh's Opera House next week is "The New South," a play written by Joseph B. Granger, and acted by M. Green for the starring tour of Mr. Granger and his beautiful wife, known in stage parlance as Miss Phoebe Davies. "The New South" is not only a play, but as its name might suggest, it is, however, a Southern play, and is pronounced by every one a true picture of the South as it really is.

The play is written with a fine dramatic portraiture and is a most interesting and correct. The climaxes are well drawn and each act closes with a situation intensely interesting and remarkable. Mr. Granger is a playwright of the author actor, has a wide reputation. For several years he was Lawrence Barrett's leading actor, and was prominently identified with the success of this and other great actors. Miss Phoebe Davies' name is known at every theatre in the east states. Her ability and beauty have won people to her wherever she has appeared. Robert Ingersoll, the great attorney, spoke in the most eulogistic terms of her acting. In fact, however, her success has been so generally recognized that she is now a household name.

"The New South" is most handsomely staged. Some of the costumes worn by Miss Davies are gorgeous. An extra matinee will be given on Thanksgiving Day.

Canary and Lederer's big production of "The Passing Show," which played a very successful engagement in this city early in September, will be repeated at the Albaugh's Music next week. Matinees will be given on Wednesday, Thursday (Thanksgiving Day), and on Saturday. The best of the original features have been retained, and many new attractions will be offered, including an amusing burlesque on "Antony and Cleopatra." The character of "The Passing Show" is described as being a whirl of gauze and laces, a blending of colored lights, a mixing up of old concepts, a burlesquing of plays, both familiar and unfamiliar, and a general confusion of ideas and farce comedy there, and a liberal dash of vaudeville in the glass. The company numbers over one hundred people, and includes such names as Helen Gates, George A. Soubler, William Cameron, George Dixie, and the Misses Lucy Daly, Jessie Carlisle, Madge Lessing, Sylvia Thorne and Yvonne Jarman. There will be a slight advance in the prices on account of the great expense of the engagement.

C. A. Sampson, who claims to be the strongest man on earth, will return to the Lyceum next week in conjunction with Fred Waldman's Star Specialty Company. Sampson has gained a wide reputation for his strength in his already marvelous performance, and will again astonish the patrons of the Lyceum by his almost miraculous feats.

The Waldman Company is an aggregation of superior vaudeville artists. It includes Mlle Otilie, the French comedienne; the Olympic Quartet, well known by Evans and Hoop's vaudeville act; and the Chicago comedians, Patterson Brothers, acrobats par excellence, and other well-known artists.

One of the most startling, as well as appropriate names that has been given a melodrama is "The Span of Life," which will be given at Butler's Edges Theatre next week. The plot is a melodrama in which a woman with a child tries to escape from Arabs in Africa by fleeing through a wilderness. She reaches a gorge and, finding the bridge gone, resolves to stay her child and commit suicide. From this appalling resolve she is freed by three friends, humble followers of her husband, appearing on the other side of the chasm. Having been acrobats in a circus, they intertwine their bodies lengthwise, then flinging themselves across the chasm, they form a living bridge for the mother and child to pass to safety.

THOROUGHLY COSMOPOLITAN. Bret Harre Has the Air of an Aristocrat and the Experience of a Wild Westerner.

Notwithstanding his identification with British life and manners there is little of the Englishman about Bret Harre. Rather he reminds one of a French aristocrat, whose cosmopolitan contact with the world adds to the charm of his presence.

Over his cigar, with a gentle play of humor and a variety of unconscious gestures, which are always graceful and never twice the same, he touches upon this very subject—the impressions made upon him by his first sights of gold hunting in California, and the eye and mind which he brought to bear upon the novel.

Instead of being, as the reader usually conjures, one of the long-bearded, loose-jointed heroes of the Western ballads, he is a polished gentleman of medium height, with a curling gray mustache.

In lieu of the recklessness of frontier methods in dress, his attire exhibits a nicely of detail which in a man whose dignity and sterner was less impressive, would seem foolish.

Bret Harre's new serial, "Clarence," will commence in the Sunday Times of November 25, and will be published in weekly parts until finished.

Verhoof's Annual Art Display. More than usual interest attaches this year to the annual display at the art rooms of Mr. Verhoof, as he has recently returned from a tour of collection through Europe. The rooms were crowded last evening by collectors and amateurs. Among the best and most-talked-of masterpieces are: "Christ Entering Jerusalem," "The Good Shepherd," by Plockhorst; "Faith" and "Hope," two paintings by Bodenhausen; "The Card Players," by Charles Meissonier, a son of the celebrated French artist; "Morning at Antwerp," "Morning on the Scheldt," and "City of Antwerp," by George Duna; "The Music Lesson" and "A Man in Spanish Costume," by Maximal Jiminez Prieto. The exhibit also includes many novelties in statuettes and bric-a-brac. The art rooms will be open again this evening.

Gates Insanity Case Decision—In the case of Mary E. Gates vs. Helen Gates, Judge Cox yesterday, in the equity court, ordered that the property be sold to satisfy the claim of Mary E. Gates until further order of the court, and restrained Helen Gates, the committee, from interfering with Mary E. Gates in the management of the property. The application for final discharge of the committee was overruled.

This case grew out of the alleged insanity of Mary E. Gates, who filed a petition to have her niece, Helen Gates, removed as committee on the ground that the proceedings wherein she was adjudged insane were had without her knowledge and consent. The committee had failed to support her. R. Newton Denaidon appeared for the committee.
