WORKINGMEN ITS MEMBERS. Prominent Gentlemen Assist in the Dedication of a Club House. JUST LIKE MEN OF WEALTH.

"House Warming" Remarks by Judge Hagner, Rev. Mackay Smith, Secretary Baiter, and Others—Large House in the Ancient Aristocratic Section Fitted Out.

Ten years ago a small band of workingmen gathered in a modest room at the corner of Twenty-second and Virginia avenue northwest, and organized the Workingmen's Club.

The building, which is three stories high, contains eight large, airy, old-fashioned rooms, and is splendidly adapted to the purposes of a clubhouse.

These were held in the spacious double parlors, which will serve in the future as a lecture hall. Grouped about the speaker's stand were Judge Hagner, Rev. Mackay Smith, rector of St. John's Church; Gen. Curtis, Mr. H. Randall Webb, Mr. Lowndes, Commander Edden, T. M. G. W. Saiter, secretary of the advisory board, and other gentlemen who are contributing their means and influence to aid in this most worthy work.

The audience of club members comprised stalwart young workmen, whose smiling faces gave evidence of their appreciation of what was being accomplished for their pleasure and welfare.

Judge Hagner, in his quaint, good-natured style, told the young men about the saloons and their tendency to influence. He spoke of the benefits of sobriety and the pleasure the club members might derive from their camaraderie and associations in their new home.

"Ten years ago," said Judge Hagner, "this was an aristocratic and fashionable neighborhood. That old three-story building on the opposite side of Pennsylvania avenue, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, was the War Department shortly after the British troops burned a portion of Washington, and the German, English, and French ministers had their legation buildings in this block."

Mr. Saiter, referred to the twelve gentlemen on the advisory board and to the six who were contributors to the fund for the support of the organization, and of their desire for the full success of the club and its objects. The initiation fee, he added, had been placed at the low figure of 25 cents and 10

CHAMPIONS OF SUFFRAGE. Mass Meeting of Citizens Who Demand the Right to Vote. HELD UNDER LABOR'S AUSPICES. Master Workman Simmons, of District Assembly, K. of L., Presided and Made a Vigorous Speech—Dr. Reyburn Sketched the Various Forms of District Government.

A mass-meeting of the citizens of the District of Columbia who favor local suffrage was held last night at Hayden Hall under the auspices of the Federation of Labor and District Assembly, No. 66, K. of L.

In the absence of President Spohn, who was detained by sickness in his family, the conduct of the meeting devolved upon Master Workman W. H. Z. Simmons, of the District Assembly. The attendance was not large. It had been expected that Congressmen McGuire, of California, and Wellington, of Maryland, would address the meeting.

Mr. Orlando Montz said that in due time the newspapers now opposing the movement would fall into line. In giving his reasons for change he said that he would not advise for "pointers at 2 1/2 a day or less."

Mr. M. M. Smith was next heard. He opposed the discussion of the form of government at this time. He then mentioned some of the instances in which he said the public money was expended unaccountably or to the injury of the people.

Mr. Gustave Augustin made the next speech. He was in favor of woman suffrage as well as man suffrage. He produced a good deal of enthusiasm by waving the national flag and singing the national anthem.

The chairman was called upon and spoke of the resolutions adopted at the meeting. He delegates to request members of Congress to favor the proposition of free suffrage for this District.

Dr. Reyburn spoke for a half-hour, in which he presented a sketch of the different forms of government of the District up to the present. He then recited the reasons which, in his opinion, demand a change in the manner in which the District is now governed.

After Dr. Reyburn, there were several speakers who made five minute speeches each. Mr. Orlando Montz said that in due time the newspapers now opposing the movement would fall into line.

More people every day are learning of their folly in buying clothing from dealers who are not manufacturers. We are manufacturers—and isn't it perfectly plain that by buying the cloth and making it up ourselves in the large quantities necessary to supply our three houses—Washington, Atlanta, and Baltimore—we are able to sell for 20 per cent. less than others.

Another advantage in buying from manufacturers—we don't have to take anybody's word for the grade of material—no trimming and workmanship in any garment we sell—because every part of the making from the cutting to the pressing is under our own careful supervision.
