MARQUIS ITO COMING HERE

Japanese Statesman to Meet the President on Monday.

No Official Mission to Perform—Cabinet Meeting Barren of Interest—W. H. H. Miller and Thomas B. Reed Visitors at the White House

Marquis Hirobumi Ito, the Grand Old Man of Japan, will be received informally by President Roosevelt at 10 o'clock on Monday morning. The reception was arranged through the State Department. Mr. Kusuro Takahira, the Japanese Minister, arrived last night from New York, where he went to pay his respects to the Marquis. Mr. Takahira's statement that the visit of Marquis Ito is entirely unofficial, and that his trip is for the purpose of consulting with the President on the frequent declarations made since the Marquis landed in this country.

The Marquis will arrive in Washington either tonight or some time tomorrow. He will be accompanied by Mr. Tsuzuki, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs. They will today be the guests of the Japanese Consul, Mr. Oshimori, in Philadelphia, and may possibly spend the night in that city. Mr. Oshimori, who arrived last night, has been received at the Japanese Legation. While in Washington the Marquis and Mr. Tsuzuki will be quartered at the Arlington. They will dine at the Japanese Legation Sunday evening.

After calling upon President Roosevelt Monday morning the Marquis will probably be taken to various points of interest about Washington. No arrangements have been made for an entertainment or social function to be held at the Legation, and in regard to such wishes of Marquis Ito will be consulted. Midori Komatz, Secretary of the Japanese Legation, stated last night that all the health of the distinguished visitor was not the best he might desire to rest Monday evening, if, indeed, he did not leave Washington during the day.

The Marquis is to be present at the Yale bicentennial ceremonies, and will go from Washington direct to New Haven. According to present plans, he will leave this country on the 21st inst., sailing for either England or France. He will be attended on the Washington trip only by Mr. Tsuzuki, his secretary, and a body servant. The carriage of the Japanese Legation will be placed at his disposal, and the Japanese members of his suite will remain in New York.

Mr. Knox, the Attorney General, Justice White, and Wayne MacVeagh, ex-Attorney General, were guests at dinner at the White House last evening. The schedule of social functions at the White House will be announced soon after the return of the President from New Haven. The cabinet meeting yesterday proved, as far as the cabinet developments as it was brief. Secretary Hay attended for the first time in the present Administration a regular meeting of the President's cabinet. The meeting lasted only thirty minutes in duration. Secretary Wilson took occasion to inform the cabinet of the other officers of the cabinet of the rapid advance in the cultivation of tea in the South. The important number of officers available for all kinds of duty. This is a fact, but for every three commissioned officers taken from the engine room and transferred to deck, only one commission officer has been promoted to deck. This is a fact, but for every three commissioned officers taken from the engine room and transferred to deck, only one commission officer has been promoted to deck.

Attorney General Knox held a conference with the President at 1 o'clock yesterday. The President was accompanied by certain applications for pardons which have been received, occupied about an hour. Mr. H. H. Miller, who is now under Harrison's Administration, was another caller at the White House. The President desired advice upon a question concerning which Mr. Miller was employed as a member of the cabinet. Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, who called at the White House yesterday, has a thorough knowledge of the business of the cabinet. He was received by Mr. Roosevelt in the cabinet room. The call was apparently only social in character.

Representatives Cannon and Payne, and the respective heads of the House Committee on Appropriations and the Senate Committee on Finance, were in conference with Mr. Roosevelt until the members of the cabinet were briefly discussed. A number of plans for improvements which would greatly benefit Utah are being considered by the President. Senator from that State. He called on the President yesterday and made suggestions for the improvement of the Reservation. This tract of land covers half a county, is said to be rich in minerals, and Secretary Taft is said to be negotiating for its opening. Another plan is to build a dam on the Colorado river, in view of the Administration's policy, involves the extensive improvement of Fort Douglas, and the maintenance there of a permanent camp. The plan contemplated in Secretary Root's plan for the establishment of military points for the military forces in the West is an extremely fine point, especially for winter quarters.

Senator Cannon is greatly interested in the irrigation problem, and discussed it briefly with Mr. Roosevelt. He will sail on Tuesday for the West, and will meet his family. He will return to the country before Congress convenes. Representative Adamson, of Georgia, accompanied by a party of politicians from that State, paid his respects to the President yesterday. Mr. Adamson was an advocate of the furtherance of progress on the Nicaragua Canal during the last session. He also altered his views in that he desires to see a canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific treaty agreements with England.

JUSTICE FULLER ACCEPTS. He Becomes a Vice President of the McKinley Arch Association. Commissioner Macfarland, as President of the William McKinley National Memorial Arch Association, is anxious to hear from the prominent people throughout the country who have been elected national vice presidents of the association. The responses indicate great interest in the project. Yesterday he received a letter from Cardinal Gibbons, acknowledging the receipt of the communication notifying him of his appointment as one of the national vice presidents, and closing as follows: "I gratefully accept the office tendered me, and heartily endorse the patriotic project, and trust every success may attend it."

Walter S. Logan, President General of the Sons of the American Revolution, writes from his office in New York City, "I accept the appointment and shall be very glad to have the honor to further the objects of the association." The Executive Committee of the association will meet in New York City on Monday. Commissioner Macfarland received the following from Chief Justice Melville: "I accept the honor of election as a Vice President of the William McKinley National Memorial Arch Association."

Allen, detached Bureau of Equipment, Navy Department; to navy yard, Boston, in connection fitting out Olympia, and to that vessel when in commission as executive officer. Lieut. Louis M. Nulton, detached navy yard, Washington; to the Office of Naval Intelligence, Navy Department. Lieut. William D. MacDougal, detached Amphitrite; to home, to the navy yard, Washington, 25th corp. Lieut. William S. Montgomery, detached St. Mary's, November 1, to the Wabash, with crew of Olympia, and to that vessel when in commission. The Naval Cadet John P. Jackson, detached Sybil, October 30, to the Massachusetts. Sumner Allan S. Smith, detached duty at works of E. W. Bliss Company, to the Kearsarge.

FEW EXPERT ENGINEERS.

Retrospection in the Mechanical Personnel of the Navy.

A number of important recommendations in regard to the needs of the navy are made in the annual report of Rear Admiral George W. Melville, Engineer in Chief, United States Navy, and Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering. The most important feature of the report, made public yesterday, deals with the personnel of the navy. Admiral Melville strongly urges the strengthening of the navy along engineering lines, upon which subject he says: "It is because it is much more difficult to solve questions relating to the personnel than of the material that the problem of securing a trained and efficient engineering corps continues to command the thoughtful attention and study of distinguished naval authorities. This interest in the development and maintenance of an efficient and satisfactory personnel is not confined to the commissioning officers of the navy, for from many outside sources I have received important communications concerning the necessity and manner of best securing an efficient engineering personnel for the future needs of the service."

"From both within and without the service suggestions have reached me urging the imperative need for strengthening the navy along engineering lines. It is the requirements of the future rather than the demands of the present which should be provided for. In case of present necessity there are available for immediate need a good body of young officers who have been carefully trained in the guiding principles of engineering science. As these young men have also had considerable practical experience in professional engineering work their services are in readiness for emergency. It will not be long, however, before they will lose interest, aptitude, confidence, and even efficiency in engineering duties if they should specialize in other directions. From this and other causes engineering efficiency in the navy is rapidly decreasing. With such a state of affairs the outlook for securing a trained engineering force for future needs can hardly be regarded as satisfactory."

"It should not, therefore, excite surprise when I unqualifiedly assert that there has been retrospection rather than an advance along engineering lines during the past two years. This fact is so clearly demonstrated by the statistics that have even gone so far as to suggest that a separate engineering corps is again a necessity, and the time is opportune for the enactment of such legislation. It is a suggestion which has been made at the present time, for I believe that it only requires a more liberal and different interpretation of the personnel bill to secure many of the advantages that were contemplated by its originators. The personnel bill, and that there is an inadequate number of officers available for all kinds of duty. This is a fact, but for every three commissioned officers taken from the engine room and transferred to deck, only one commission officer has been promoted to deck. The Bureau has included in its estimate for the fiscal year 1902 the cost of erecting a building to be used for an experiment station and testing laboratory for the investigation of the properties of marine engineering and naval construction. This building to be two stories high, about 119 by 119 feet, and will be used for the construction of the steam engine and boiler, and for the testing of the properties of marine engineering and naval construction. The difference between an efficient and inefficient force on board a warship was shown at the battle of Santiago. The crowding act of that victory was the crowding act of the Colonel by "The Oregon." In this case a battleship of sixteen knots was crowded by an efficient force of twenty-two knot armored cruiser whose motive power was inferior to that of the battleship. The half the boiler power was developed on board the Col. that could have been secured by a similar force of modern and modern engines directed by a trained and educated complement of engineer officers. The experience of the past has shown that the only way to secure an efficient force of young line officers sent to engineering duty is to secure a similar force of modern and modern engines directed by a trained and educated complement of engineer officers.

"It cannot be expected that immediate results will be secured from this change in the future engineering training of the naval personnel. Satisfactory progress can only be secured by the adoption of the experience of the past.
