WANT TO BUILD WARSHIPS

Great Lakes Constructors Object to the Rush-Bagot Treaty.

Modifications Desired to Permit Competition for Government Contracts—President Discusses Proposed New Government Department

Shipbuilders whose interests lie in cities on the Great Lakes are making an effort to secure a modification of the Rush-Bagot Treaty between this country and Great Britain, which prohibits the maintenance of more than one vessel of war on the Great Lakes at any time. Representative H. S. Boutwell of Illinois called at the White House yesterday to advocate a change in the treaty. It is believed that Mr. Boutwell will have strong support in whatever steps he may take to secure a change.

The President is favorable to the project, but it is understood, within the matter to ratify the inter-annual canal treaty controversy between this country and Great Britain is concluded. The establishment of a Department of Commerce and Industries, which is proposed to be a member of the Cabinet, was the subject which brought a delegation of members of the Business Men's League of Chicago to the White House yesterday. The delegation is strong in advocacy of the proposed new department. The President, it is said, expressed himself as in accord with the general movement, but did not commit himself to any special policy. The delegation consisted of E. P. Bradley, Elliott Bunker, Lawrence W. Noyes, Charles Truax, Henry F. Fisher, Charles F. Quincy, and P. F. Pettibone.

Senator Nelson is reported to be a champion of the movement, and it is said will introduce a bill to effect the establishment of the department at the coming session of Congress. James W. Tall, of this city, a candidate for Police Judge of the District of Columbia, was introduced to the President yesterday by Senator Mason of Illinois. Senator Mason and Mr. Tall were accompanied to the White House by Frank Mason, of Des Moines, Iowa, a brother of Senator Mason. Mr. Mason is the manufacturer of croquet balls, which has been adopted by the Russian navy. Senator Mason continues to regard optimistically the progress of the senatorial fight in Illinois.

The subject of irrigation of the arid and semi-arid lands is one in which the President is much interested, and one which he will give attention in his message. Senator Warren and Representative Jones of Washington talked with the President on this topic yesterday. Both gentlemen have a number of ideas as to plans to be pursued. Representative Jones, during his visit to the White House, asked the President to accord some mark of distinction to Lieut. O. P. M. Hazard, U. S. A., and Lieut. J. N. Hazard, U. S. A., who were with General Funston when he captured Aguinaldo. The two officers are from Oregon, and in addition to participating in the capture of the Filipino leader, they are said to have excellent records as to service in the new possessions. The subject of ship subsidies, in which Mr. Jones is interested, was also touched upon.

The President yesterday made the following appointments: Thomas Swobe, to be quartermaster, with rank of captain; William W. Thompson, to be second lieutenant of infantry; William W. Bessell, to be captain in the Porto Rico Provisional Battalion; and John H. Bessell, to be first lieutenant in the Porto Rico Provisional Battalion. The President yesterday morning took Mrs. Roosevelt for a drive behind his line pair of trotters. There is a general patriotic appearance to the new White House livery, in which the President's coachman and footman appear in a uniform of dark blue, with a cockade of red, white, and blue in the most conspicuous feature of the uniform. When Henry Ford, the coachman, and Reeder, the footman, made their appearance yesterday afternoon on the box of the President's motor car, they were dressed in the new livery. The uniform consists of a long paddock coat of dark blue cloth. It is military in style, with wide lapels and broad padded shoulders, while from the smart, neat-fitting collar to the waist line there are rows of buttons and pockets. On the trousers of the same material and shade there is a white cord stripe on the outer seam of each leg. Underneath the driving coat is worn a tunic of the same material, with long sleeves, buttoned with a single row of silver buttons. Dark gloves and black shoes complete the costume, with the exception of the silk hat, which bears the red, white, and blue cockade.

The President still experiences difficulty in selecting horses for the White House stables. His determination to have animals with long tails remains unshaken. Many animals have been found which are correct to every particular, but Mr. Roosevelt will not accept docked tails. Horse dealers are generally opposed to the docking of tails, and they insist on it, as a rule, because it is the prevailing fashion. It is hoped by many that the President's resolve stands, and the subject will bring about a change of sentiment and that the foolish and cruel practice will be abandoned.

Secretary Long Invited. Secretary Long received yesterday an invitation to present the presentation of a silver service to the battleship Illinois at Old Point Comfort next Saturday. Secretary Long has not determined whether he will be able to attend the ceremony, but the probability is that he will not be possible to leave the city on that day.

The Olympia Assigned. Announcement was made yesterday at the Navy Department that the Olympia, the flagship of Admiral Dewey in the battle of Manila Bay, had been attached to the North Atlantic Squadron as the flagship of Rear Admiral Francis M. Higginson. It is understood that the assignment of the famous fighting ship to that station was upon the request of the officer commanding the fleet.

Catarrh

In a constitutional disease. It originates in a scrofulous condition of the blood and depends on that condition. It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the vocal organs, disturbs the stomach, it is always radically and permanently cured by the blood-purifying, alterative and tonic action of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has wrought the most wonderful cures of all diseases depending on scrofula or the scrofulous habit. HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic.

AT THE THEATRES.

The Columbia—Are You a Mason?

It is curious to account for the popularity of "Are You a Mason?" the adaptation of Laufs and Kratz's German farce, presented at the Columbia Theatre last night. The almost incessant laughter excited in other cities, and it is hard to make a satisfactory record during its local stay at the F Street playhouse. Nothing quite so broadly humorous or completely diverting has been seen at the Columbia this season, and it is appreciated as they deserve, the Luckett & Dwyer theatre will enjoy a period of unexcused popularity this week.

If one wants a hearty laugh, "Are You a Mason?" is certainly the real thing. But persons who hanker after the legitimate drama are advised to light shy of the entertainment given by Leo Durrhein and his band of merry associates. Mr. Durrhein, besides playing the principal role, figures on the play as the adapter of the farce from its German source. He has hitherto shown a marked aptitude for the theatre, and it is really good play which for some unaccountable reason did not appeal to the general public as it deserved, and "All on Account of Kizza," that somewhat impudently named the Main-Lionen combination a season or so ago. But in "Are You a Mason?" the Durrhein is in his best. He has happily supplied any number of situations which the piece, as it is, would have given to the German authors—that opportunity of opportunity for hilarity on both sides of the footlights.

The idea of a dandy gentleman and his son-in-law pretending to belong to the Masonic order, may seem a trifle obvious, but it is a very good idea, and it is worth. Then, too, "Charles's Aunt," has been drawn upon for laughs, and this, with a subsidiary piece that have been used in previous stage plays, provides enough material to such clever hands as Mr. Durrhein's to spin together almost three hours of entertainment with hardly any intermission. The play is decidedly bright, but for the most part the success of the evening is due to the excellent impersonations of the principal characters, and the admirable acting of the supporting cast, which is made up of a number of well-known farceurs.

Thomas A. Wise plays Amos Bloodgood, whose supposititious affiliations with the Masons are so pleasing to his wife that she is willing to believe that he is a member of the fraternity. The idea of the farce is to show the wife's folly in believing that her husband is a member of the fraternity, and the play is a very good one. The acting is excellent, and the play is a very good one. The acting is excellent, and the play is a very good one.

The National—Joseph Jefferson. The reappearance of Joseph Jefferson at the National Theatre last evening in his famous play, "The Great Impersonation," was characterized by an excellent success as given to an actor only once in a decade, at least in Washington. It was a reception that must have been given to the dean of American comedians, as he is to the theatre, and it is a national glory that he still lives and acts.

The Academy—Superba. Every season Washington looks forward to the coming of the Hanlon Brothers' spectacular pantomime "Superba," and it is a national glory that he still lives and acts. The play is a very good one, and the acting is excellent. The play is a very good one, and the acting is excellent.

The fondness for the truck, plait, and flounce, combined with the wearing of the very fashionable long overcoats, naturally suggest a lightweight for the dress—hence the unusual demand this season for the exquisitely dainty, soft clinging stuffs for both house and street wear.
