

BUSY DAYS AHEAD IN REAL ESTATE

Many Brokers Return Home From Their Summer Vacation.

NEED FOR BUSINESS HOUSES

try. It is colonial in its main features, but characteristic of modern American country building. On the first floor there is a large hall leading from the entrance to the end of which is a double stair leading to a broad landing. On either side of the hall are the entrances to the parlor, library and dining room. On the two upper floors are the housekeeper's room, sleeping rooms, and bath rooms.

The real estate brokers, who have been enjoying a vacation, are beginning to return to town for the fall season, which is expected to prove a record-breaker. They arrive in time to find their clerks busy making changes in the bulletin of houses to rent.

Up to the present, however, there has not been a big demand for those seeking to invest in Washington realty, although it is rather early as yet for business. Nevertheless, some of the brokers are selling houses, although as a rule the dealings have been in small properties.

As in past seasons, there is found to be trading in business properties, for there is always a demand for such realty, providing it can be secured at a reasonable price. The indications are also that suburban property will be given a call during the fall, for people are beginning to realize that the greater Washington is a thing of no distant future.

Buy Suburban Homes.

During the past few years prominent business men of the city have purchased homes on the outskirts, instead of summer residences, as in the past.

Mr. Louis P. Shoemaker, who owns considerable property about Brightwood, Takoma, and Tenleytown, is of the belief that much outside capital will be invested here within the next few years. Ten years ago, he said, men of national reputation who came to Washington to live either rented their homes or purchased residences for occupancy during their stay here. Now, however, he said, they come here not only to live, but to invest their money. This has done much to build up the city, and has helped the small investor. People are beginning to know that the price of realty here is likely to go up, and not so much attention is paid to these so-called "booms," he said. Those who invest in property here know from their own experience that while no boom is on, so to speak, the market is entirely satisfactory, and lots on F. G. and Fourteenth streets and New York and Pennsylvania avenues sell for more than they would have brought in 1890.

"Not long ago fifty acres of ground at the intersection of Connecticut Avenue and Pierce Mill Road were sold to men who began at once to spend perhaps $100,000 in improving it, exclusive of the cost of buildings. Some land near Brightwood, sold as acreage property at $1,500 per acre, has been subdivided and is now selling for 20 or 25 cents a square foot.

Conservative Increase.

"I might go on citing instances, but they are enough to show that capitalists feel abundantly justified in making investments in the District, although property here is not now on any boom, but conservatively increasing in value.

"Speculative and more rapid advancement in value will be found to exist in the new or greater Washington beyond the city limits. The reason for this is well understood. For public and private improvements have been made in the city, and the business sections have been induced to their utmost extent.

"Whereas public and private improvements are just being made in the new Washington, and this development is causing, and it will continue to cause, great increase in values."

These who have desirable properties here are extending their advertising to newspapers of other cities, and this has tended to attract to this city people with money who know what bargains are. During the past few years a number of prominent men from the East and from the West, as well as from the North and South, have come to Washington, built homes here, and now make this city their permanent residence place. Scores or more might be mentioned, but among the most prominent are Mr. Thomas F. Walsh, Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, ex-Senator John B. Henderson of Missouri; Mr. H. H. Warner, of Ohio; Mr. W. P. Kellogg, of Louisiana; Judge J. M. Wilson, a lawyer of national reputation, of Indiana; Mr. C. J. Hillier, of California; Mr. Beriah Wilkins, of California; Mr. Patterson, of California; Mr. Lester, Judge Boardman, Gen. Anson Mills, Mr. Patterson, Mrs. Childs, Mr. Page, Mr. James Elverson, Chief Justice Fuller, Justice Brewer, Justice Howland, and Justice Harlan, of the Supreme Court; Senator McMillan, Senator William A. Clark, Senator Sawyer, Senator Elkins, and many members of Congress, and Secretary Hay.

New University Home.

Work is progressing on the new home of the National University under construction on K Street, near Sixth Street northwest, which is to cost about $50,000. It will be built of brick and stone, and the plans provide for a medical dispensary, three lecture and clinical halls and other recitation and study rooms for the medical and dental branches of the institution.

The American Ice Company is having plans drawn for a large artificial ice plant to be erected during the coming fall and winter. This is thought to be a step toward the solution of nature's law from Maine, a consummation in which the ice company expects to find increased profits. The building will probably stand on the water front near the foot of Ninth Street southeast, and will be modern in all its details. As so far determined it is to have a capacity of about 100 tons per day, and is expected to be ready for use before the beginning of next summer's steady demand for ice. If this move proves successful other plants are to follow.

The residence of Gen. S. M. White, recently created near Bethesda, Md., on plans prepared by Mr. Appleton F. Clark, is one of the most handsome country houses in this vicinity. It is located on a knoll in the middle of a fifteen acre tract and commands a beautiful view of the surrounding coun-

F Street Deals.

There are many rumors of deals about F Street, but most of those whose names are connected with the same are out of town at present and no definite information can be secured. Not much credence is placed in them by the brokers. In most instances they deal with properties which have been on the market for years.

While some business will be done within the next two or three weeks, it is not expected that the market will be active until the latter part of September or early in October. However, some inquiries have already been made for both improved and unimproved.

BANDIT WORSE THAN TRACY.

Mexican Who Is the Terror of Lower California.

The most alarming brigandage of many years is terrorizing the inhabitants of the northern portion of the California peninsula. Within the last six months murder and bloodshed have become almost daily occurrences, a band of twenty men, under the leadership of Maguello Cabrezo, having completely shut off all stage travel on the State stage road between Escondido and Tijuana and thence into the United States via San Diego. The bodies of the murdered men, some of whom were prominent citizens of this section of the republic, and the atrocities which are perpetrated under the direction of Maguello exceed in heartlessness any crimes of which the Yaguas have been accused.

Maguello Cabrezo is the most daring outlaw and jailbreaker in Lower California. His career as a brigand dates back six months ago, when he cruelly murdered Judge Raymond A. Fogarty, of the First judicial district, at Real de Castello. A year ago Judge Appleton sentenced Maguello to a term of six years in prison for horse stealing.

Maguello is now in the hands of the law, but he would break jail and kill him. Scarcely three months had passed when Maguello broke loose from his prison bars and disappeared. He was not heard of for three months, but he reappeared in the form of a roving band of bloodthirsty in the extreme.

With the vindictive hatred of his race, Maguello had in wait for the judge, who had sentenced him. He captured his victim at Escondido, California, on the Escondido-Tijuana State road. Maguello and eighteen men under his command removed the judge and his secretary, who was traveling with him through the country, to Sonoran canyon, where they murdered their prisoners after the fashion of Apache Indians, cutting off their ears, nose, fingers and finally nailing their enemies by the loose skin to a live cactus. The bodies of the murdered Mexican officials were discovered ten days later. The horses were still alive. They had been tied to trees, from which they had gnawed all the bark.

It is believed that time Maguello's career is a record of the most fearful crimes which have ever been committed in all the wild, chaotic history of the California peninsula. Each new atrocity in the career of its devil in the boldness of its execution has surpassed the preceding crime.

Maguello is a past master in the art of torture. He is a bold, daredevil fighter, and he is a man of iron will. He is a man of iron will. He is a man of iron will. He is a man of iron will.

KING BORROWED A COAT.

An Interesting Anecdote About an Italian Monarch.

Although Victor Emmanuel III is the first monarch of United Italy to visit Petersburg, he was well known there as crown prince. His grandfather, the other Victor Emmanuel, was equally well known, but through the Russian royalties coming to Italy. There is one characteristic anecdote of him not generally known. The King was very stout, loved his comfort and ease, and would always prefer to wear a shooting coat rather than a uniform.

In 1873 the then Empress of Russia, Marie Alexandrovna, visited the Eternal City, with her daughter, Marie, later the Duchess of Edinburgh, putting up at the Russian embassy in the Corso, where they were treated with every courtesy by the court. One evening Victor Emmanuel went to the theater, absolutely alone, in a negligee jacket. In the middle of the first act what was his horror to see the Empress and her daughter enter an adjacent box! He could not slip away because they had seen him, and it was equally impossible to go to them in that costume.

Suddenly the King had an inspiration and calling Senator Gadda, prefect of Rome, also present, ordered him to take off his dress coat and give it to him. This surprised Gadda, but he even helped the King to put it on, but Victor Emmanuel's shoulders were extraordinarily broad, and no sooner had he forced himself into the coat than the seam gave way from neck to waist and he was left in a predicament. The King was obliged to join the Empress and her daughter in his jacket, but never wanting in aplomb, he made such good excuses that the Empress enjoyed the incident thoroughly. A couple of days later Senator Gadda received a new dress suit from the royal tailor, with a pin in brilliant pinned to one of the lapels.—Fall Mail Gazette.

A MILLIONAIRE DEGENERATE.

Mad Freaks of Dissipation of Wealthy American.

In a paper on detectives read by Dr. Martin W. Barr, chief physician of the Pennsylvania School for Feeble-Minded Children, before the summer school of philanthropists, recently, a remarkable instance was mentioned by him of degeneracy that has caused comment in London and continental scientific circles. It was the case of an American multi-millionaire, who is at present living in far Eastern countries, and leading a life of such satyr-like excess as to be almost incredible. Attempts to learn the identity of this degenerate American have been fruitless, and Dr. Barr has taken the greatest pains to conceal it from the public for the wisest possible reasons.

According to Dr. Barr, this man is a neurotic. It is estimated that his fortune is in the neighborhood of $10,000,000, but no attempt has been made to have him declared an incompetent; he is left free to run his course. His family are refined, socially prominent. Whenever they speak of the same course, they refer to it as his "nervousness." They will not admit that he has a deranged intellect, though he has left friends and position here to take up a life among the hordes, the grave-diggers and social outcasts of the Far East.

"He was a physician, rich handsome, cultured, of esthetic tastes," said Dr. Barr in his paper, "a graduate of one of the most prominent medical colleges in America, a man, who, in his youth, made a pronounced hit as a specialist. His fortune enabled him to secure every medical appliance known to science, and for some years he enjoyed phenomenal success. Wine and women proved his ruin. He sank lower and lower. His excesses no longer tolerated at home, he drifted from capital to capital of Europe, and finally established himself in Japan with a harem, he exhibited mad phases of moral degeneracy, causing his body to be tattooed with wonderful skill, every picture a work of art. His back bore a huge dragon, the shading of every scale above the perfect of his hair, on his right arm, with utmost variety he shamelessly exposed. He was turned out of the clubs. Returning to Japan, he bought a performing bear and wandered from place to place clad in the garb of a lion, exhibiting himself, his bear and his harem, and distributing photographs of each and all in endless variety.

"This postmaster of vice," said Dr. Barr, "looking both Europe and America, and astounding even Japan, he hires a squad of Japanese boys, practically buying them outright from their parents, who, attired in full uniform, are trained in military exercises. To these he imposed an equal number of monkeys dressed as Chinese soldiers, and the war of China and Japan is constantly renewed for the entertainment of himself and his harem, who watch in an ecstasy of delight the suffering of the monkeys. Revivals are offered and the more bloody the contest and the greater the atrocities, the more intense is the gratification."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Smoke and Fog. Influential Londoners believe that the famous fogs of London are due as much to the large clouds of smoke which overhang the city as to the moisture in the air, says the "Baltimore Sun." The factors are a moist, still air, and the large quantities of uncombusted smoke. Sir William Richmond estimated that as many as 6,000 tons of coal were carried up in suspension in the atmosphere daily from the chimneys of London. This gives some idea of the magnitude of the nuisance in that city. The dirt caused by this black fog is only one of the resulting evils. Days spent in darkness or in artificial light affect the mind as well as the body. The expense of artificial light as well as the large amount of oxygen consumed by artificial light is another item of great importance which should be considered in connection with the smoke of dark cities are never cheerful, and this may be the reason for the spleen of the English, which, is supposed by the French to be characteristic. The London society states that there is even a heavy increase in the death rate during the heavy black fogs, and there can be no doubt that so much smoke in the air is a cause of bronchitis and other inflammations of the respiratory tract.

Dying Do Not Grieve. "I have stood by the bedside of hundreds of dying people," said an old physician at Toledo yesterday, "and I have yet to see a dying person shed a tear. No matter what the grief of the bystanders may be, the stricken person will show no signs of overpowering emotion. I have seen a circle of agonized children around a dying mother—touched by the quick sign of grief in a child—yet she reposed as calm and unemotional as though she had been made of stone. There is some strange and inexplicable psychological change which accompanies the act of dissolution. It is well known to all physicians that pain disappears as the end approaches. And nature seems to have arranged it so that mental peace shall also attend the last lingering moments."—Kansas City Journal.
