

A TRULY IDEAL WIFE

HER HUSBAND'S BEST HELPER

Vigorous Health is the Great Source of the Power to Inspire and Encourage - All Women Should Seek It.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this century, in a recent article, has said: "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration, and the greatest helpmate of my life."

Mrs. Bessie Ainsley

To be such a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, to inspire him to make the most of himself, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, bearing-down pains, nervousness, whites, irregularities or the blues, she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Following we publish by request a letter from a young wife:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham: Ever since my child was born I have suffered, as I hope few women ever have, with inflammation, female weakness, bearing-down pains, backache and wretched headaches. It affected my stomach so I could not enjoy my meals, and half my time was spent in bed.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, I feel so grateful that I am glad to write and tell you of my marvelous recovery. It brought me back to my normal life and vitality.

"THE NINETY AND NINE."

The London Express says that Mrs. Charles M. Alexander, wife of the famous gospel singer of the Torrey Alexander mission, recited the "Darker version" of "The Ninety and Nine," to 10,000 people at Albert hall, London, on the evening of March 23. The Express adds: "The poem describes in negro vernacular the story of the search of the Good Shepherd for the one sheep of his flock." The poem follows:

Por ill brack sheep, don stray away, Don los in de win an' de rain; An' de Shepherd, He say, "O hirelin, Go find my sheep again."

But de hirelin frown—"O Shepherd, But de sheep am brack an' bad. But de Shepherd, He smile like de ill brack sheep

Wuz the onliest lamb he had. An' He say, "O hirelin, hasten, For de win an' de rain am col; An' dat ill brack sheep am lonesome, Out dar so far from de fol."

De hirelin frown, "O Shepherd, Dat sheep am ol and gray. But de Shepherd, He smile like de ill brack sheep

Wuz fair as de break ob day! An' he say, "O hirelin, hasten, Lo, here am de ninety-an-nine, But gar, way off from de sheep-fol, Is dat ill brack sheep ob Mine."

An' de hirelin frown, "O Shepherd, De res ob de sheep am here. But de Shepherd, He smile like de ill brack sheep

He hol it de mostest dear. An' de Sheperg go out in de darkness, Where de night was col and bleak; An' dat ill brack sheep, He find it, An' de hirelin frown, "O Shepherd, Don' bring dat sheep to me,"

But de Shepherd, He smile, an' He hol it close, An' dat ill brack sheep—wuz—me!

Several years ago a desperate man rushed into the office of Russell Sage, the great financier, and exploded a bomb. Mr. Sage escaped injury, but his assailant was blown to pieces.

While police officers, surgeons and newspaper men were gathered about the place, a woman with a shawl over her head rushed into the office, and kneeling in a corner of the room, drew aside a piece of sheeting and pressed to her bosom the dismembered head of the bomb-thrower.

No one present knew the woman, but everyone instinctively knew that she was the mother of Russell Sage's assailant. And that is "the story of the ninety and nine!"

Nan Patterson, charged with the awful crime of murder, disowned by her friends and disgraced before the court, helpless and alone—yet not alone, because her faithful father went to her support. Nan Patterson found there that the same father whose wise counsels she had ignored in her youth, was even in spite of her indifference, anxious to give her comfort in her necessity. That is "the story of the ninety and nine!"

In the presence of all this love, of all these tears and sighs and sacrifices, is it any wonder that there involuntarily arises the prayer—or if you chose to call it the wish—would that the children could appreciate the love of the parents before it is too late! Would that the children could understand "the story of the ninety and nine!" but none of the ransom ever know how deep are the waters crossed, nor how dark is the night that the Shepherd goes through, ere He finds His sheep that was lost!

MISS MYRTLE'S PRETTY BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. L. Kauffman's little daughter Miss Myrtle entertained a large party of young friends at their residence corner Belmont and Spring Wednesday afternoon. The little hostess, beautifully gowned, was the recipient of many congratulations and of many beautiful presents. She in turn entertained her friends so happily they will long remember the party as a great event. As each child entered he or she was decorated with a yellow heart with a figure 9 in green in it and tied with yellow and green ribbons.

The first game was the re-telling of a donkey that excited more fun even than usual. Miss Hazel Jacoby proving the most successful repplier received the first prize a fancy Japanese picture frame. Miss Fannie Wagenheim was the happy recipient of the second prize—a bank in the form of a donkey.

After the prizes had been awarded Miss Myrtle's father, Mr. Kauffman took pictures of the entire party, and each of the guests will be given a fine photograph of the group as a souvenir of the occasion.

As soon as the pictures were taken the children enjoyed a jolly peanut hunt on the lawn. Miss Sara Goldstucker being the most successful was awarded the first prize—a gilded peanut which when opened, disclosed a lovely silk handkerchief on which was a view of the ships on the target range and beneath was written "Target Practice, 1905."

Miss Clara Frenkel received the second a pretty ornament in the form of a "Jumping Jack."

Then the biggest and finest apple that could be procured was brought out bristling with tooth picks and the child who secured the shortest "pick" was to receive the apple which went to Miss Sadie Kauffman.

The guests were then marched out to the back porch which was gaily decorated with sweetpeas and ivy, the color scheme being yellow and green.

The long table was beautifully decorated with the sweetpeas and ivy, the center piece being the birthday cake decorated with roses and nine candles. Each child was given a slice and in each slice was hidden a tiny doll. The ice creams, cakes and candies carried out the color scheme with pretty effect.

Mrs. Kauffman was charmingly assisted by Miss Gladden, Miss Klein, Miss Fannie Wagenheim and Miss Sara Goldstucker. When the guests were ready to go a grab-bag gave each a Japanese souvenir to carry home.

Miss Myrtle's guests were, Misses and Masters Alice Wagenheim, Goldine Jacoby, Clara Frenkel Fannie Wagenheim, Sara Goldstucker, Dorothy Reeves, Julia Alfman, Campbell Jones, Lucille Gray, Katharine Van Pelt, Virgie Reed, Sadie Kugelmann, Catharine Caro, Eva Berlin, Hazel Jacoby, Eugene Bonifay, Ruth Van Pelt, Elizabeth Watson, Clinton Bonifay, Edgar and Claude Kugelmann, Genevieve Carter, Gladys Smith, Agnes Wolfe, Edna Finch, Alfred Read, Louis Kaufman, Willie Wall, Rosie Alfman.

THE DRAPED BOLERO GIVES CHARMING LINES TO THE FIGURE.

The slim woman who considers the closer fitted coats and bodies with something of anxiety has quite changed her opinion since trying the draped bolero styles. In these the little coat is built on a thoroughly feather-boned lining most carefully cut and moulded to shape. The material is fitted somewhat smoothly on the shoulders, but draped in crosswise shirtings over the bust and under the arms in a manner that gives most fascinating curves. The model herewith is in a raspberry silk warp henrietta. This fabric, by the way, is especially adapted to these draped coats. The grade is of the velvet in the raspberry shades and built on the lining with the bolero. The flaring elbow cuffs and the collar facing are likewise of the velvet. The skirt is the new circular cut with a front panel, strappings of the cloth disposed at intervals about the foot in an interlaced design; similar strappings appear on the little coat above the line of the shirring. The hat is a raspberry straw, with morning glories that shade from the reds to the purples entirely covering the flat crown, a soft ostrich feather in the dull purple laid across the crown.

Had Feathered His Nest.

The gauge by which worldly prosperity is measured is not always the same. But it does not so much matter what standard is used so long as it shows accurately the amount of gain or loss.

"I remember Bill Gassett as a shifty young fellow," said a former neighbor of Mr. Sands, revisiting his old home after many years' absence, "but I hear he left his widow quite a substantial property. How did he manage it?"

"He made choice of an excellent wife, and she took him as the smartest woman often take the poorest specimens of the men folks," said Mr. Sands thoughtfully, "and what's more, she made something of him, put some gum into him and what all. Why, sir, when he married her all he had for a mattress was an old makeshift stuffed with dried leaves, and when he died he had no less'n three mattresses stuffed with live goose feathers. I guess that tells the story."—Youth's Companion.

The Head of More.

When the wise and witty Sir Thom as More was beheaded his head was stuck on a pole on London bridge, where it was exposed for fourteen days, much to the grief of his daughter, Margaret Roper, who resolved to secure it. "One day," says Aubrey, "as she was passing under the bridge, looking at her father's head, she exclaimed: 'That head has lain many a time in my lap. Would to God it would fall into my lap as I pass under!' She had her wish, and it did fall into her lap."

Probably she had bribed one of the keepers of the bridge to throw it over just as the boat approached, and the exclamation was intended to avert the suspicion of the boatmen. At all events, she got possession of it and preserved it with great care in a leaden casket until her death, and it is now enclosed in a niche in the wall of her tomb in St. Dunstan's church, Canterbury.—Notes and Queries.

Laughter and Worldly Success.

"Speaking of laughter, I have often wondered if the laughing man and the laughing woman really get along better in the world than the map and woman who do not laugh, or if they laugh at all merely grin at some amusing thing," said the observant man. "I do not know, I am sure. Of course you will find that men and women of both types probably in your own acquaintance have been able to get along fairly well in the world. Laughter is no doubt good capital: in a great many instances. It is equally true that the grim face, the sour look, I may say, has often proved a valuable asset. The which would seem to indicate that there is a time to laugh and a time not to laugh."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
