SOME OTHER TELEGRAMS SUBMITTED.

As the public is well aware, The Journal is not much of a believer in either the efficacy or the reliability of political matter that comes in the form of telegrams.

The Journal has also made the point—and made it plain, we think—that what a man was or did twenty years ago is not a material issue as compared with what he is and does now and what he proposes to do in the future.

Be these things as they may, however, The Journal submits on another page today some telegraphic inquiries and answers thereto which were sent and received yesterday and which speak for themselves.

The Journal assures the public that these are real telegrams and we hope the public will be willing to take The Journal's word for it without requiring any notarial attests in the premises.

The telegrams are therefore respectfully submitted and original copies of same may be seen at this office.

A Word or Two at Courties Received.

In an editorial comment on the subject of the respective circulations of The Journal and the News, the News of yesterday says:

The facilities of this paper did not seem so insignificant to the Journal when their press facilities were not as good as they are now and when they were unable to get out their paper for four or five weeks on account of a breakdown; they were ample then to get out their immense edition on time and without a dollar's expense to them except what they paid for a pressman and fuel. It may be that on account of accident we will be called on to accord a similar favor; if so we are prepared to do so with the same ease and without charge as before.

What our contemporary says is unquestionably true. The Journal did on several occasions, during breakdowns in its own machinery, accept the courtesy of assistance from the News. That assistance was appreciated to the fullest possible extent and was paid for in accordance with bills submitted to the Journal for it.

This, however, is the first intimation ever received by The Journal to the effect that the extension or acceptance of those courtesies was attended by any other consideration than that which belongs to the great code of newspaper ethics—a code of ethics which every real newspaper or newspaper man understands and which, so far as our observation extends, has never before, anywhere in this great country, been defiled by considerations of possible political capital.

If The Journal were so disposed it might also cite instances when it had itself extended similar, though perhaps not so extensive services, but as

The Journal is not in that kind of business and has too much regard for the ethics, which among real newspapers, govern such courtesies, it refrains from doing so.

We appreciated at that time the courtesies which the News now takes occasion to boast about, but had we fully understood then, as we do now, the spirit in which they were extended, believe us, we should have felt impelled, out of regard for the honor of the profession, to get along without them.

Governor Broward yesterday appointed the following pilot commissioners for the port of Pensacola: T. A. Jennings, George L. Lappington, J. H. Harvell, I. H. Aiken and R. M. Cary. This is a good board and The Journal congratulates Governor Broward on his appointments. A pleasing feature to the people of this city lies in the fact that all of the Pensacola members of the board were participants in the White Democratic Primary and are now supporting the Primary nominees.

As the State Papers See it.

The following from the Miami Metropolis indicates something of the sentiment of the state press on a matter which is now agitating the minds of the people of this city:

The Journal is supporting C. H. Bliss, primary nominee for mayor of Pensacola, while the News is urging the candidacy of Mr. Shine, an independent aspirant for the office, with the result that one of the most bitter political campaigns ever conducted in that city is being waged between the two papers and the supporters of the warring office seekers. In supporting the primary nominee and thereby acquiescing in the desire of the majority of the people of that city to have Mr. Bliss as its chief executive, The Journal is following party policy and Democratic doctrine and there is little doubt but that Mr. Bliss will be landed a winner. Independents and independent supporters usually get the vote where the chicken got the axe.

This is exactly the sentiment of a vast majority of the white voters of Pensacola and it is pleasing to note that the state press regards the situation in a similar light.

Only one more day and the agony at Tallahassee will be over.

Editor Pensacola Journal:
 My attention has been called to an anonymous communication in the Daily News of today which has aroused indignation among the Catholic Knights. It is as follows:
 BLISS WRONG AS USUAL.
 Editor Daily News:
 I have nothing to do with the present controversy between the candidates for mayor of Pensacola, but I do wish to enter a protest against what one of them wrote in the Journal this morning. Mr. Bliss says, in referring to the Good Government League, that they were "organized some weeks ago in a negro dance hall." He tells who compose the League, what they are, etc., but it is not this that I wish to protest against; it is against calling our hall, the Catholic Knights Hall, a negro dance hall. Dances are given at this hall, it is true, but it is not the disreputable place that Mr. Bliss would lead one to believe from the connection in which he refers to it. Our daughters attend dances there and it is a sad reflection on all who attend to have the Catholic Knights Hall spoken of in this way.
 CATHOLIC.
 Now, Mr. Editor, I do not believe any Catholic Knight was the author of the above and I will give my reasons for my belief.

In the first place I do not believe any Catholic Knight would draw his lodge into Pensacola politics; but the Daily News would not hesitate at anything.

In the second place if any Catholic Knight was offended at this article he would, in all probability, be man enough to sign his name to the article; but the News deals in anonymous stuff of all kinds.

In the third place I have never said anything about the Catholic Knight's hall, directly nor indirectly, by words, implication or inference, and hence there is no reason for any Knight to write any such article; but the Daily News had several reasons for writing such an article: One reason was the News wanted to clear the so-called "Good Government Club" of the odium of its birth and another reason is that it wanted to tell another lie on Bliss.

The so-called "Good Government Club" was organized in a negro dance hall upstairs at the corner of Tarragona and Government streets. That is what I said and that is what I repeat. I am not responsible for the fact. If they are ashamed of it, why did they organize there? The place has always, so far as I can ascertain, been used for negro dances and I do not know of a single instance when it has ever been used by white people except in the organization of the so-called "Good Government Club." The fact that the club met at the Catholic Knights hall subsequently has nothing to do with the place of its organization.

I sincerely believe the pretended communication was written in the editorial rooms of the Daily News, precisely where the other pretended communications were written, and written by the same person that has written the columns about that has appeared from time to time, which News alleges has been written by "business men" who are too busy to do anything but dabble in dirty politics. At any rate there is one Catholic Knight who went to the News office and demanded to see the communication, and was refused. He then demanded of the managing editor the name of the writer and this was also refused. As the regular Anti-gang was much in evidence in the News office yesterday the public may rest assured that no Catholic Knight had anything to do with the communication.

CHAS. H. BLISS.

Need of Organization.
 An illustration of the need of an organization among the business men of the town was presented yesterday. A carload of Lakeland tomatoes started yesterday to the Lewis & Clark Centennial Exposition soon to open in Portland, Ore. Possibly they might wish they had some of our citizens and some of our climate up there before their show is over with, much as they seem to ignore us now.—Palm Beach News.

Great is Manatee.
 It may be truthfully said that all eyes are on Manatee county, the home of the prosperous fruit grower and trucker. From all sections of the country comes the report that the industry and home owner have been more in abundance than ever before known in Manatee county's history, and especially is this true of the north side of the river and more particularly Palmetto, and all who have visited the veritable garden of Eden go away expressing delight with its climate, and natural advantages over all other sections in the south. Palmetto has good schools, fine church buildings, good citizens, fine climate, is exceedingly healthy, and is steadily growing and her future is certainly encouraging. The municipal authorities now have on the market bonds for sale, and when a sale has been consummated, Palmetto will build her own waterworks and have her protection, build sidewalks and pave streets, and a committee appointed by the council for that purpose are at present negotiating to properly light the town. All of which are some of Palmetto's signs of prosperity.—Palmetto News.

Sumter Melons.
 Will Odell of Oxford came up this noon to show the Marion melon growers what Sumter could do in this line, and brought with him the largest ripe melon plucked in Sumter county this year. It weighed 21½ pounds and was grown by G. W. Baker, several miles west of Oxford, who has a field of fifteen acres nearly as large as the first car of melons will go out from Oxford next Wednesday. The field is full of twenty-five and thirty pounders, and the vines are the picture of health and productivity. Mr. Odell invited into the bank a few of his friends, dissected and ate the melon, and the melon was laid on the table, juicy and sweet and those who saw it was the finest "stomach" ever, and the editor of the Star was not overlooked. It was a feast out of the ordinary, a kind of Delmonico fiddler, and as such was enjoyed. May Baker, the grower, made his 100 per cent on his investment, and may the shadow of Will Odell outdo the giant melons of the woodlands of Sumter. The melon was of the improved Kolb Gem variety.—Ocala Star.
