Last Night's Magnificent Gathering.
 The last grand rally of the White Primary Democracy held last night was unquestionably the greatest political gathering in the history of Pensacola.
 There were men on the speakers stand who had never been together before in a municipal campaign. They represented, it may be said, the antipodes of factional politics, but they were united last night as they are today.
 There were men in the audience who never voted for the same candidates in their lives, but they cheered for one cause last night and they will vote solidly for one ticket today.
 That great gathering, probably 5000 strong, was representative of the best citizenship that Pensacola possesses. It represented the men who have built our city and who are making it greater and stronger as the years go by. It represented a majority of the laboring men—the brawn and brain and sinew upon which every class is dependent for existence—and it represented probably 90 per cent of the business and professional men of the city.
 But more notable and more potent than all this was the splendid representation of Pensacola womanhood, which listened to the eloquence of the occasion and applauded to the echo every sentiment for clean politics and white supremacy which the speakers uttered.
 Surely no cause has ever had a more united or a nobler support than the one in whose interest the great gathering of last night was held, and surely no cause ever had brighter hopes than the one whose issue will be determined by the ballots of voters today.
 We understand that Mayor Welles now says he did not decline to be governor, but simply declined to run for the office. This being the case, he has plenty of company, as about 40,000 other democrats declined to do the same thing.

Russia Must Accede to Japanese Demands.
 The talk of continuing the war is apparently subsiding in the Russian capitol and, in its place the authorities as well as the populace are speculating upon the probable demands of the Japanese, both as to indemnity and the cession of territory. The feeling appears to be general that Russia should pay no monetary war indemnity, but it is hardly probable that peace can be secured without full acceptance of the terms imposed by the victorious little Brown men of the East.

 The Japanese have for many years had their hearts set upon regaining possession of the island of Saghalin now used by the Russians as a penal settlement, which was formerly a portion of the Japanese Empire. This, it is believed, will be included in the demands. Another thing that will probably be demanded by the Japanese is the cession of a strip of Siberian territory including the Port of Vladivostok. This the Japanese believe necessary in order to obtain permanent peace, they holding that the life of the Japanese nation would be endangered by a Russian naval base upon the Pacific coast.
 The Chinese Eastern R. R. running from Harbin to Port Arthur, a large part of which is already in the Japanese hands will undoubtedly have to be ceded to Japan, although the territory through which it runs would probably be returned to the Chinese Empire, as would all of Manchuria; possibly under a guarantee by the powers that it should remain inviolate.
 The hardest blow that could be given the Russian Empire would be the blasting of her ambitions on the Pacific. The Trans-Siberian railway was constructed to this end as was the Chinese Eastern Railway and the magnificent terminals at Dalny, now a mass of ruins.
 Much as Russia may fight against acceptance of the terms of peace imposed by Japan, which will undoubtedly be severe, it is hard to see, in view of recent events how she will avoid their acceptance in toto. France is bringing pressure to bear for peace and other nations have expressed their willingness to act for either belligerent if such service is desired.
 With the sentiment of the world against her Russia cannot long resist the demand for peace, especially as she is in no condition to prolong the war.
 After several months of apparent

Beware of Over Confidence and Let Every White Democrat Get Out and Vote.
 The city campaign is now almost ended and it is not likely that any votes will be changed between now and the close of the polls tonight.
 It would be a good idea then for the supporters of the White Democratic ticket to pause a minute, go over the estimates, and see what will have to be done to defeat the opposition. In other words, we may now well take a careful survey of the field and see what we are "up against."
 There are in the city, in round numbers, 500 qualified negro voters. Of this number, 50 will possibly go to Robinson and 450 will go to Shine. This will give the opponents of the Democratic ticket 450 votes in a lump to start with. In addition to this they will get some white republican votes and a few other white votes, but the main point to remember is that the Shine forces will have 450 negro votes with which to begin business.
 This solid negro vote will have to be overcome by the ballots of White Democrats. There were 965 of these White Democrats who voted in the Primary. If those White Democrats all get out and vote, there can be no doubt as to the result, but—
 The whole issue hinges on whether or not the supporters of the White Democratic candidates do their duty today.
 The Journal presents the case plainly in order that no Democrat may misunderstand the situation and that no feeling of over-confidence may permit anyone to relax effort until the votes are all cast and counted.
 Everyone remembers the feeling of over-confidence which was responsible for the defeat of the Jones ticket two years ago. Had the Welles forces raked the city with a fine tooth comb they could not have secured another vote, but so confident were the Jones supporters that many of them failed to vote and the election was lost by 5 majority.
 Two years ago, the Negro vote controlled and decided the election. This time it simply remains to be seen whether the White Democrats of this city are going to allow 450 Negro voters to decide for them who shall govern the city for the coming two years.
 If the supporters of the White Democratic ticket get out and vote, there can be no doubt of the result.

successful publication the Jacksonville Sun has suspended. The Sun was one of the best equipped and most ably edited papers in the south and to all appearances it was doing well. It was unfortunate, however, in two particulars—first, the field was already fully covered by one of the best afternoon papers in the south; and second, it was not large enough for two evening papers. The Jacksonville Metropolis now ought to have full swing for many years to come.

After last night's magnificent meeting, the Anti-Primary bunch ought to be willing to subsidize.
 You can do a service to the community by voting for clean politics and white supremacy today.

GREAT CROWD AT THE BLISS RALLY

 a very simple one: Shall the white people rule or shall a portion of those white people with the assistance of the negroes rule? (Cheers and applause. Cries of No! No!)
 Mr. Blount referred to the days of the reconstruction period at considerable length and called attention to the time, still vivid in the minds of many, when Pensacola had a negro mayor—mayor by virtue of being president of the council—and a negro city marshal. He disclaimed any desire to injure the negro or restrict his rights in any way, but declared most positively that the white man should rule; whatever rights the negro has should be his but his rights did not include governing the white man. In this connection Mr. Blount feelingly referred to the fidelity of the old colored "Mammy" of his childhood days, to a little colored boy, a slave, with whom he made mud pies and explored gopher holes in his boyhood days and to a faithful colored servant who had been with his family for quarter of a century—all were faithful and, in their proper place, filled the sphere for which they were intended. He had no feeling in the matter other than that which every white man should feel in the supremacy of the white race. The white man must rule, irrespective of numbers.
 Continuing Mr. Blount said:
 "A singular condition confronts us in this campaign. The leaders of the other side say they believe in white primaries. We say we believe in white primaries. 'Ye shall know them by their works,' and we vote the white primary ticket and they vote against it. They say they believe but there are reasons why they should not vote in the primary. And when we come to analyze it they are purely personal and purely factional. They say, so I understand, that the action of the Democratic Executive Committee was not legal, but further they will not say. Frankly, honestly, I have not examined into that question. I am content to take the opinion of the Hon. S. R. Mallory whom you all know recently made an address upon that question. But I can say this—that even if the calling of the primary was illegal and irregular I would still vote for it, just exactly as I expect to vote for it tomorrow. (Applause and cheers)."
 Senator Blount closed his address by urging upon the voters the necessity of standing firm and earnestly working for the success of the White Primary ticket, which alone guaranteed the control of government by white men.
 In introducing the next speaker,

Frank L. Mayes, Mr. Jones eloquently referred to the great service The Journal had rendered the cause of good government in its unqualified and energetic support of the White Democratic Primary and to the work Mr. Mayes had done to the same end. The speaker was heartily applauded as he stepped forward.

Mr. Mayes spoke in part as follows: "Mr. Chairman, Ladies, My Friends and Fellow Democrats: It gives me pleasure to stand on the same platform tonight with these distinguished and able gentlemen and to speak in support of a cause which, to my mind, should challenge the support of every loyal and patriotic democrat in this city.
 "I am glad to see this magnificent outpouring of people—glad for two reasons. First, because your presence here demonstrates the interest you feel in the men and the issues at stake in this campaign; and second, because the advocates of the White Primary system are tonight glad to meet and greet, face to face, the great mass of white democracy that is to carry the day for clean politics and white supremacy tomorrow. (Cheers and applause)."
 "The opposition has vainly tried to inject numerous issues into the campaign—issues which had no bearing whatever upon the real question at stake. They have attacked the legality of the Primary and have lost out on that proposition. They have tried to inject the labor question and have found out that the majority of the laboring men were opposed to them. (Applause). They have tried to make an issue out of the purchase of a bad mattress (Laughter and applause), but even that was too hard to lie upon. (Laughter)."
 "I see in this great gathering and seated upon this platform, men who have never been together in a political campaign before in this city. But in the great common cause of white democracy and white supremacy they are together now.
 "Why, my friends, just as an example of the trend of public sentiment on this matter, I have but to point to the position of your public officials. Nearly every public official in this city, from United States Senator down to district constable, is supporting the Primary and its nominees. (Cheers and applause). Sergeant Mallory—and we all love and honor him—who holds a seat in the upper branch of the highest legislative body in the world, has told you why he is supporting it. Senator Blount, who occupies a similar position in the legislature of Florida, and in whose splendid record there we all have a common pride, has told you why he is supporting it. Every one of your county commissioners, with the exception of one county commissioner, is supporting it. Every member of your city council but two is supporting it. The vast majority of white citizens everywhere are supporting it and are going to vote for its maintenance tomorrow. (Applause).

 "I regard it a good sign, my friends, when such men can rise above the differences of faction and fight together in a solid phalanx of democracy for cleaner politics and better government."
 Mr. Mayes here said that the primary people had tried to conduct a clean campaign—that no word against the private life or personal character of any opposition candidate had been uttered or printed, and that he desired to pay a personal tribute to each of them as gentlemen and good citizens. He then closed as follows:
 "When the great orb of day on tomorrow ascends to his zenith he will look down on the most important battle of ballots which has ever been fought in this city, and I have so much faith in the patriotism and sound judgment of our people that I believe at night when he buries his golden head in the sea he will set on a victory for 'White Democracy.'" (Applause).

Hon. Chas. H. Bliss.
 Hon. Chas. H. Bliss, White Democratic Primary candidate for mayor was next introduced. Mr. Bliss made only a brief address which was devoted wholly to cautioning the voters against political chicanery at the polls and warning them that most any old kind of a scheme might be attempted to defeat the will of the people. He urged upon voters the necessity of voting early and doing everything possible to get out a full vote and closed by predicting the success of the White Primary ticket from top to bottom.
 He was heartily cheered and applauded and several beautiful bouquets were handed up to the platform as he took his seat.
 J. Emmet Wolfe made a brief address upholding the legality of the primary and predicting the success of all the White Primary candidates. Like the others, he was cheered and applauded heartily.
 Other short addresses were made by C. F. Schad, candidate for reelection to the office of Marshal and J. Cary Whiting, candidate for City Tax Collector, both on the white primary ticket.
