A Summer Drama.

Miss Summer Girl with deep intent
The cunning meshes hung,
And swaying in the idle breeze

The empty hammock swung

Miss Summer Girl sat down in it, A mass of pretty fluff,
The hammock sagged a little bit—

This shows you plain enough

Miss Summer Girl was shortly joined By Mr. Summer Man.
Appearance of the hammock then

Was somewhat on this plan.

A parted strand, a smothered shriek, A quick eclipse of bliss;
The busted hammock on the ground

Was strewn in shreds like this.

followed by music and dancing until a late hour when the young hostess guests reluctantly departed.

RETURNED FROM A
DELIGHTFUL OUTING.

Mr. J. E. Creary of Corinth, Miss., dad, who, with his family is now spending a few weeks in his summer home night from a week's delightful outing

WOMANLY APPEAL
TO DR. PORTER.

Dr. J. Y. Porter—who is "great" in more ways than Alexander was—the eminent gentleman who, despite "the marines," has been improving and defending the health conditions on the Gulf coast since long before the invention of mosquito fleets, is in the city, and—We women are simply dying to—know—to find out—you know—that is, to learn how to—to tell the difference between—that is from—O, Doctor, you know—how to—to differentiate—yes, that's it—how to differentiate between one of those poor dear innocent blind creatures and the—those horrid—O, hush, Doctor, what is a stegomyer fascinator, or whatever it is? We really ought to know you know, Doctor, for the heartless authorities—O, Doctor, if all men were only kind and gentle, and merciful, Doctor! O, if—if they were only merciful to such poor, helpless creatures. But—they are so cruel—so unfeeling Doctor—they would have us slay hundreds, thousands—aye even millions of poor harmless, innocent singing creatures fitting happily about in the free air of their own natural sphere—on the chance, the bare chance that we might, possibly, kill—oh, that dreadful word —I mean, destroy—one lonely, single, wandering alien.

Isn't it heartless, Doctor? And we refuse to engage in the wholesale slaughter. There is no use in it when we can all have our houses screened for a trifle. Why—a good, kind man—a builder and contractor—offered to screen every door and window in our house, nearly, for a trifle of $75.00 cash.

Just think of it Doctor. And just think how much nobler to screen ourselves in, even though it is hard on some of us, than to destroy millions of helpless creatures like that. O, Doctor! Do—do—use your influence against this wholesale destruction and tell—O, tell us, as plainly as you can—what is a stegomyer fascinator and what is a musca culex, and which is the really bad one, and—and—Doctor, don't you think it would be much wiser and kinder to watch for the—the—whichever it is that is really bad and catch 'em in little nets, you know—and instead of really hurting them, Doctor, you know, just feed 'em and treat 'em humanely until they die, or get away, or we kind of get tired of bot-tering with them, you know? Don't you think so Doctor? And, don't forget Doctor, to tell us how to tell a what you may call it from the other kind, please sir.

JIM HOLLY TURNED
OVER TO THE COUNTY.

Jim Holly, who was arrested by the police Tuesday on the charge of having fired upon Officers Spottswood and Reed the night previous, was yesterday turned over to the county authorities, and will be tried in the criminal court upon several charges.

Recorder Laney heard enough of the testimony to satisfy him that there was sufficient evidence to warrant the prisoner being turned over to the county for trial.

I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale

BAGDAD HAS A
CUTTING AFFRAY

ARTHUR DeGRAFF DANGEROUSLY
INJURED BY KNIFE IN HANDS OF COLORED MAN.

Special to The Journal.

Bagdad, July 26.—Arthur DeGraff of Pensacola, a train hand on the Stearns & Culver log tram was very painfully cut with a knife by Darby Jackson, colored, a mill hand when the mill stopped at 6 o'clock last evening. The log train was standing on the track and caboose was at the Milton plank walk. Jackson was climbing over the caboose and DeGraff spoke to him about climbing over the water barrel.
Jackson jumped off and began to curse him, calling him all kinds of vile names. DeGraff ran after Jackson and caught him, when the negro began to cut him about the face and back, the knife penetrating the right eye.
Drs. McKinnon and Eldridge dressed the wounds and pronounced the patient's condition dangerous. He was taken to a Pensacola specialist last night to receive treatment. Sheriff Mitchell promptly arrested Jackson and put him in the Milton jail.

LOW RATES TO
THE TAMPA FAIR

Tampa, July 26.—The railways have granted remarkably low rates from all points in the union to Florida in honor of the State Fair, and thousands of home-seekers will visit every section of Florida, in view of which no county can afford to go without representation in the exhibit departments of the Fair. The rates in brief are as follows:

From all Western states 80 per cent of one fare for the round trip with maximum rate of $20.00 for the round trip from all Ohio river points. From the East south of Washington, the rate by rail is one fare for the round trip, and from all eastern ports the rate by boat is one fare for the round trip.
An extensive advertising campaign has already been inaugurated by the railways and Fair Association, and Florida will be overflowing with home-seekers on the Fair dates—November 15-30.

A DEEP SEA GLUTTON.

This Marine Wizard Can Swallow a Fish Twice Its Own Size.

"That one animal can devour another twice its own size at a single swallow is a statement that may seem as incredible as any fish story ever invented," writes Dr. Sanderson Christison.
"Nevertheless it is true of certain fishes. So far as known such fishes are inhabitants of the deep seas, where utter darkness perpetually prevails, with an unvarying temperature almost as cold as ice and a pressure ranging, according to depth, from a quarter to three or four tons upon every square inch of their body surface. The deep sea is commonly regarded as commencing where the rays of sunlight cease to penetrate, which is estimated to be less than 1,200 feet below the surface, and may extend to twenty times that distance or even much more, down to the bottom of the ocean. Fishes have been dredged from below 12,000 feet.

"A deep sea fish, the Chiasmus niger, six and five-eighths of an inch long, has been found to have swallowed another fish ten and a half inches long. The stomach of the devourer is stretched as thin as gold beater's skin. It has sharp, hooked teeth, which cross each other from opposite sides of the mouth and usually point backward.
According to Gunther, the fish after having seized its victim with its capacious and very movable jaws partly presses it down as a snake would do and partly draws itself over it. The prey is received into an esophagus and stomach the membranes of which are as extensible as an india rubber pouch.
The stomach when empty is contracted and folded up and projects but little below the abdomen.

"When a deep sea fish is brought to the surface, bow gradually and carefully soever, its bones are often like so much touchwood and its muscles like rotten pulp, while its eyes are burst from their sockets and its viscera are often blown out of the body cavity by the expansion of the air bladder. It frequently happens that deep sea fishes are found floating helplessly on the surface of the ocean with large prey in their stomachs. Their appearance under these circumstances is accounted for by the efforts of their struggling victims to escape from their jaws, causing them to ascend beyond the horizontal zone which they usually inhabit.

"Deep sea fishes are commonly black or dark brown. But, although it is claimed that light is essential to the formation of colors, some deep sea fishes are scarlet in parts or uniform red or rose. Others are silvery white, while, according to Alcock, the necopolus is 'one dazzling sheen of purple and silver and burnished gold, amid which is a sparkling constellation of luminous organs.'"

When the Gods Love.
There are two standards of measurement of human life—the one by years, the other by achievement. Measured by years, Sidney Lanier's life of less than twoscore was a broken column; measured by achievement, his life is not yet ended—he is immortal. Robert Burns died at thirty-seven, Byron at thirty-six, Poe at forty, Raphael at thirty-six, Lanier at thirty-nine. It is whom the gods love die young. And yet who shall say that the Scottish plow boy, or the author of "Childe Harold," or he who sang of the "Raven," or the painter of the "Transfiguration," or the composer of "Centennial Cantata," do not, one and all, still speak to us in voices whose echoes will command enraptur-ed listeners away down the centuries?

CHIC SIMPLICITY FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL.

Almost any of the materials that are in use for the youngsters will make up charmingly in this chic design. The original is in a double with crepe de chine, with a lace yoke and lace strap-plings on the bodice. The yoke shows the popular Dutch neck, and is cut in stallow points back and front, where the bodice proper is fitted on. The sleeve is a full puff, with double ruffle edged with lace and ends at the elbow.

The skirt is in two parts, the upper one skirting to the band and coming only to below the curve of the hips.
The second part is a very full flounce that is applied with much shirring and groups of deep tucks, and adds much to the style. A band of black velvet ribbon fits in snugly about the waist.
