LOUIS FRIEDMAN & CO.

A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE DURING THE CIVIL WAR

When the war between the states began, my husband, S. M. G. Gray, and William T. were students in the South Carolina College, at Columbia. John H. was elected captain of the college cadets, who volunteered to go to the taking of Fort Sumpter and William T. was elected, a lieutenant. Captain John H. was killed at Battery Wagner, Charleston harbor in 1863, while in command of a company of artillery of the regular Confederate state army. William T. served through the war and died in Augusta, Ga., in 1864. He was judge of the Circuit Court, and had many honors conferred on him by his countrymen. Another brother, M. W. Gary, a lawyer of Edgefield, South Carolina, with the first troop of war proceeded to raise a company, was elected captain, joined the Holcombe Legion, commanded by Col. Wade Hampton, which did heroic service in the first battle of Manassas, where Lieutenant Colonel Johnson was killed, Colonel Hampton wounded and Captain Gary then took command and was in the hardest of the fighting around the Henry House. He was in most of the battles in Virginia, and before the close of the war was commissioned a major-general. He was never wounded, never taken prisoner, never surrendered, never paroled, and his command was never in a battle at which he was not present to lead them. He was one of President Davis's escorts from Greensboro, North Carolina, to Cokesbury, South Carolina, where the President and his cabinet spent a night at the home of his mother, and where they determined to go on without any large body of soldiers to attract attention. Here in his native village, and at the home of his mother, General Gary's career as a soldier was ended. Fourth Brother Volunteered. Early in the war a fourth brother of my husband, Dr. Thomas P. Gary, of Florida volunteered and was appointed surgeon in the Confederate states army, followed by the fifth brother, who was also appointed a surgeon and stationed at Charleston. My husband was a member of the Florida convention that passed the ordinance of secession, and held himself in readiness to enter the service of the Confederacy whenever men of his age were called for. Till then he felt that with five brothers in the field, his wife and four small children, a widowed mother and two young sisters, had claims on him. But when the army was depleted, and reinforcements were called for, he said to him, "Go, your country needs you now, and we will trust the God of battles to take care of us." He raised a company, was elected captain, and for a time was stationed on the west coast of Florida; afterwards his company participated in the battle of Olustee, and subsequently being incorporated with the Ninth Florida regiment, commanded by Colonel Jno. M. Martin, was sent to Virginia.

of which my cousin, Mrs. William Goldsmith had dyed with indigo, raised on her plantation, and this I had woven into little blue checks to make suits for them. I had refurnished my own wardrobe with goods that had run the blockade from Cuba. In October the ladies formed a Soldiers' Aid Society, with Mrs. Mariah B. Taylor as president. The society sent several boxes of clothing, blankets, etc., to the soldiers. After we sent all the blankets we could spare, we cut up our woolen carpets and sent them on. Old linen was scraped into lint and sent to the hospitals. Our pastime in those days was knitting socks for the soldiers. In Cokesbury I was a member of a society which sent every day three or four of its members to the railroad station with baskets of provisions to feed sick or wounded soldiers going on furlough to their homes, or returning to camps. How grateful these half-famished men were for help thus bestowed. During the four years of the war I saw four of the enemy. These were wounded men captured on the coast of Florida in a fight with a blockade, I think and brought to Ocala till their wounds healed sufficiently for them to be sent on to be paroled on exchange.

Delicacies for the Enemy.
The ladies of Ocala, wishing to obey the teaching of the Bible, called at the improvised hospital and carried them some delicacies—fresh milk, eggs and fruit, thinking the time might come when some of our own loved ones might be wounded prisoners.

After the burning of Columbia, we expected Sherman's army to pass through Cokesbury, and we buried our silver and jewels, and secreted provisions for an emergency, but a heavy rain, swollen rivers and washed away bridges, with the intervention of General Cheatham's corps, Confederate states army, below Newbury, caused him to change his course, so that we escaped the devastation of his army. Just before the Governor of South Carolina had called on patriotic planters to send negroes to work on the fortifications in the lower part of the state. My uncle, Colonel B. F. Griffin, sent four of his strong, reliable negro men to aid in the work. As they were returning home they fell in with Sherman's army and were carried into his presence. He questioned them closely to get all the information from him, and then told them he would carry them to freedom. They replied "No, sah, we hab a good massa, and our wives and children are on the ole plantation, and dat's whar we want to go, sah." Sherman told them they might go on and tell their massa he would be along there in a little while. But to our great relief, owing to his change of course, he never came that way.

When President Davis came through Cokesbury, he and his cabinet and other prominent followers were entertained at the homes of the citizens, by some of the Texas troops with him slept in their tents for the night. So great was the desire of the people to shake hands with Mr. Davis, that many ladies, carrying flowers, called, after tea, to pay their respects to him, and to inquire if all was lost. There were few men in the place, they not having yet returned from the army. We endeavored to find some rift in the clouds that overhung our dear Confederacy. Mr. Davis seemed cheerful, but evaded the discussion of plans for the future. Thenceforth the Southern Confederacy became to us a sad, but glorious memory.

HERPICIDE NOT A FAKE. Unsolicited Testimonials Tell of Its Superiority.

Alf R. Kelley, residing at 2195 Devissadero St., San Francisco, Cal., writes the following:

"When I first purchased Herpicide, I thought, like the majority of half preparations, it would prove a fake. I am happy to state that, on the contrary, it is all, and even more, than you claim for it. Quite a number of barbers throughout the section in which I travel have called attention to the new hair sprouting out on my scalp, and inquired of me what I have been using. I tell them 'Herpicide,' also give them your name and address." Sold by W. D'Alemberte, druggist and apothecary, 121 S. Palafox street, Pensacola, Fla. CATARRH A UNIVERSAL DISEASE

Catarrh usually begins with a cold in the head, but does not stop there. The mucous membranes all become inflamed and secrete a filthy, unhealthy matter which is absorbed by the blood and distributed to all parts of the body. The patient is then continually hawking and spitting, the nose is stopped up, the ears have a ringing or buzzing noise, the throat becomes sore, and as the unhealthy matter more thoroughly saturates the blood a general feeling of despondency takes possession of the system.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S., and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. Lapeer, Mich. M. MATSON.
Local applications cannot cure Catarrh, because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. They allay the inflammation and temporarily relieve the disease, but as soon as they are left off the trouble returns. The only way to cure Catarrh is to treat it through the blood. S. S. S. soon clears the blood of all Catarrhal matter and purges it of all irritating poisons, checks further progress of the trouble and completely cures the disease. S. S. S. keeps the blood in perfect order so that it can eliminate from the system all waste matter that will produce Catarrh. Nothing equals this great vegetable remedy in the cure of this disease. Write for our book and any medical advice you wish. We make no charge for either.

Bitter, Black, Bile and How Right Food Corrects It.
Biliousness, from incorrect food, opens the way for an outfit of derangements of not only the body but the mind as well.
The world is a dark or gloomy place to the victim, whether millionaire or mendicant.
The wife of the head of a great insurance office in an Eastern city, was cured, completely, of the wretched affliction, by the use of Grape-Nuts. She says:
"For years I was a constant sufferer from biliousness and extreme constipation and I suffered from the most dreadful headaches once a week, which sometimes lasted 3 or 4 days at a time. Grape-Nuts food came to my notice about 5 years ago. I liked it from the first and began to use it because I liked it, without any thought that it might help my health. To my surprise I noted that after a short time all my ailments began to decrease, and they gradually but surely disappeared. I am now, and have been for years, completely free from them and enjoy perfect health.
"Everyone in my house now eats Grape-Nuts regularly, even my little two-year-old girl likes it with her Postum Coffee (another thing we are never without) and prefers it to any other cereal. It pulled her through a difficult period of teething during the hot weather—the fever refused Grape-Nuts when other food could not tempt her to eat. It is the first food I intend to give my baby boy when I wean him.
"My husband eats more Grape-Nuts food at every meal than of any other one dish. He says it never fails on him, and he finds that it regulates his bowels perfectly." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.
