YE OCALA EDITOR HITS THE LIMIT

Discusses Several Questions of Great Importance and Finally Concludes to Let the Old World Wobble Along Without Hindrance.

Editor Frank Harris, of the Ocala Banner, had the following highly entertaining article in his valuable publication some time since:

The editor of this paper was reared in a whig family and his political mentor was an ardent disciple of Henry Clay. Hence he started out on his political career as a high apostle of protection.

But when he began to investigate the subject of the tariff for himself and with some degree of seriousness; when he saw that goods of American manufacture were sold cheaper everywhere else on earth than at home; that the system of protection enriched the few at the expense of the many, he quit worshipping at her shrine, and became an out-and-out free trader, and for thirty years he has persistently and consistently advocated that policy. He has never wavered from his belief for an instant.

But what are the fruits of this unremittent labor?

The country is further away from free trade today than it was thirty years ago.

Along about the year 1870 the editor was a reader of the New York Merchants Journal and became a convert to Wallace's theory of paper money.

He believed that all money is but money and that paper money alone should become the money of civilization. Why? Because the material of which it is made has very little if any intrinsic value; therefore, cannot be easily and quickly gobbled up by monopoly. Where is the sense of issuing paper money for the purpose of paying a premium on gold when the government can issue paper money direct and has the taxing power behind it to make it good?

But what do we find?

The country is further away from paper money today than it ever has been.

If we were not to have paper money and are to have metallic money, the mines of which can be so conveniently cornered, we thought it were better to have two metals than one, so this paper favored the free coinage of silver along with that of gold.

But what is the result?

We are further away from bimetalism today than at any time since the birth of the republic.

The editor of this paper believes that the private ownership in lands, which puts it in the power of a few individuals to corner all the gold, all the silver, all the oil, all the coal, all the iron, all the copper, all the zinc, all the tin, all the marble, and all the gifts of God to man, wisely and munificently stored away in the bowels of the earth, not for the use of one but for the use of all, is the greatest of all earthly evils, the mother of corporations and the granmother of trusts, so he became an early convert to the theory of the "single tax."

But what is the result?

The "single tax" is deadlier today than it was before Henry George was born.

The negro was such a bone of contention and misunderstanding between the sections, there was so much of him in the newspapers, that this paper advocated the acceptance of the constitutional amendments concerning him, thinking that it would end the agitation and the quarrel, the amendments would become a dead letter on our statute books and we would have no more of Mr. Black Man in our public discussion forever.

But what is the result?

The negro is as much of a problem today, and occupies as much space in the newspapers, as he did sixty years ago.

Believing that the farmers of the country would be benefitted by organization, the distribution of literature and public discussions of all topics, the editor early joined the Grangers, and would have joined the Alliance, had he been permitted so to do.

But what is the result?

Both organizations have crumbled to pieces and those who rushed to them in search of featherbeds and graft, like the sow spoken of in the scriptures, have returned to their wailow.

There was such universal complaint among shippers about excessive freight rates and the rapaciousness of railroads, that the editor early became an advocate for the creation of a state and inter-state railway commissions.

He got everything he asked for, but what was the result?

It is the consensus of opinion among merchants and vegetable shippers that freight rates are higher today than they ever were before. Indeed, they were so excessive the past season that the vegetable men were knocked out of business, "all in a heap on the floor," as one of them expressed it, and from present indications are likely to remain there.

He next tried the banks and they failed on him, and he was next advised to put his earnings in an insurance company, and, hard luck following him, he selected the New York Equitable Assurance Society of the United States, and what is the result?

Recent developments have uncarried as sickening and abominable state of graft, and loot, and plunder, as any

THE ANT.

Facts About One of Nature's Most Industrious Creatures.

When spring comes with all its wealth of opening buds and new flowers, the ant is preparing for a season of profitable industry.

It comes out of its winter quarters and locates a new home where it can store away, during the summer months, the sustenance for the long winter days.

Just as industrious as the ant—but in a different way, are the countless infinitesimal germs which burrow into the scalp and eat away at the roots of the hair.

As they burrow away Dandruff forms, and if the germs are not killed Baldness results.

Newbro's Herpicide is the only known remedy which kills the germs.

PENSACOLIAN IS ANXIOUS TO RETURN

Refugee Longs For Time When He Can Return to Land of Flowers in Safety.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 25, 1905. Editor Pensacola Journal.

For seven weeks I have sojourned in this beautiful city and enjoyed a hospitality that is prodigal in its profusion. I have visited its city hall and the state's imposing capital building and beheld with admiration and wonder the wonderful collection of exhibits whose towering roofs rise 16 stories above their ground floors. I have been impressed with its many costly viaducts, its attractive parks and its remarkably beautiful, clean streets.

This is indeed a city of which her people are intensely and justly proud. Atlantans are for Atlanta first, last and always. No matter what personal differences or prejudices exist between them and its citizens, when a question or measure that affects the welfare of Atlanta arises all differences are promptly laid aside until the matter is disposed of to Atlanta's best interests. Herein lies the secret of her wonderful development; here she furnishes an example worthy of imitation.

In common with all who visit Atlanta I admire the pluck and energy that have made her great, and I bow with oriental devotion to the shrine of her hospitality, and yet, "for a' that and a' that," from the depths of an unsatisfied heart comes a longing that will not be hushed—a pleading that will not be stilled—take me back to the home I love so well—down where the beautiful Perdido murmurs to the sea, where the honeysuckle and rose breathe their richest perfume; down where song birds sing their vespers the livelong year; down where the flags of all nations are mirrored upon the placid bosom of our beautiful bays, while they kiss with their silken folds the gentle breezes of our sunny climate. When the glad tidings break upon my longing ears, that our dear city is at last delivered from her adversity, and her wandering ones may with safety come home, it will be to me like the awakening of the first strains of long hushed music, not that I love Atlanta less, but Pensacola more.

JUDGE PORTER VISITING HIS OLD HOME

Well Known Citizen Writes From His Native State of Conditions 50 Years Ago.

Editor Pensacola Journal:

Your correspondent is now visiting his native state, and county, and old homestead, and church and school, and other points of interest in what has ever been considered one of the best countries—and having the best people—in one of the very best states in this best of all countries; and we cannot restrain our pride in the seat of our birth, and the three in which we have resided before reaching our proud state of Florida; namely Illinois, Iowa and Alabama. But it is of our native state, and county we would now write. And our vivid recollection goes back sixty years, and lacks but one year of the full half century since reaching our majority.

A little more than fifty years ago there was no railroad in Fayette county, and the only outlet for its products was the Monongahela river, and the town of Brownsville; with some steam boat landings at other points for convenience; and that stream was often too dry for steamer navigation, and frozen for some months in the winter.

Early Coal Mining.

There was no coal mined except where it "cropped out" along the river, and was thus available for river transportation; and a considerable amount was transported to Louisville and Cincinnati, and the cane factories of Louisiana. There were also inland coal banks throughout the county for home consumption, but there was but few places where it could be mined by going into the hills, and often I hauled coal over these big hills, and rough roads, for our own use, and our mechanics uses. These were good old times, and plenty of hard work, and close economy made a noble, and hardy class of citizens; and the county became beautiful with its green pastures, and waving hillsides of wheat and corn; and then the period when the beautiful flocks of blooded sheep, and herds of choicest strains of cattle, made a picture we now sadly miss.

National Turnpike.

The old "national turnpike," from Wheeling to Cumberland, the first thoroughfare across the mountain—passes through this county, and is my earliest recollection, the great six and eight horse teams, with the heavy covered wagons, were never out of sight, going day and night, with relays of teams and drivers. The building of this "turnpike," at national expense, was then a large scheme, to the settlers along its route, as the Panama Canal seems for our nation now; and its comparison is about in keeping with the phenomenal growth of this part of our prenominal country. For many years this has been known as the greatest center of production of coke in the United States, but within the past five years this has been given an impetus which is almost startling.

A Mountainous Country.

Fayette county is on the west side of Laurel Hills mountains, and about two fifths of its area is in the mountains, and which is comparatively worthless, its total area is 341 square miles, less than half that of Jackson county, Florida. It has one hundred and ten thousand inhabitants, and its present taxable valuation is fifty-seven million dollars ($57,000,000). It has one hundred and two towns, or Post Offices, Uniontown, the county seat being the largest, and having less than eight thousand inhabitants at latest census. The county now has more than three hundred miles of railroad and sidings, and a proposed railroad up every ravine that will admit such. It has now over seventeen thousand coke ovens, and building others so fast that this enumeration won't hold good over night. Each oven is expected to turn out 11 and 12 tons per week, or 550 tons of coke per annum; hence the output will reach near ten million tons, bringing a revenue of near thirty million dollars annually. It has between fifty and a hundred miles of trolley lines, and about the same of telegraph and telephone. The banks of Uniontown now contain five million dollars of deposits, and its leading bank with capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars has a surplus of eight hundred thousand dollars.

High Priced Land.

Farms that were sold from twenty five to sixty dollars per acre fifty years ago have recently sold the coal hidden; from 300 to 600 feet below the surface at a price from $150.00 to $1,500.00 per acre, and this varying price not because of depth, or difference in strata, or quality of coal, but just as the owner held and asked, for the same, and the surface is found out of five of the farms are yet retained by the original owners—in view of which, we can reasonably claim that this part of Fayette county, has the richest class of farmers, and that Uniontown, the county seat, is the richest town per capita in the United States and the end is not yet, but we will end this letter.

Yours,
JOHN THOS. PORTER,

MOTHERHOOD

Actual Sterility in Women Is Very Rare—Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes.

Many women long for a child to bless their homes, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the entire female organism, curing all displacements, absorption and inflammation of the organs.

A woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution. Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for thirty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be a great decrease in miscarriages, suffering, and in disappointments at birth.

The following letters to Mrs. Pinkham demonstrate the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in such cases.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice-President of Milwaukee Business Woman's Association, of 614 Grove Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

I was married for several years and no children blessed our home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles, and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. For months I took his medicines, trying in vain for a cure, but at last my husband became disgusted and suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; this I did, and I improved steadily in health, and in less than two years a beautiful child came to bless our home. Now we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Mac P. Wharry, Secretary of the North Shore Oratorical Society, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me, and I am so glad I took it, for it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy one within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, which is the pride and joy of our household. Every day I bless Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the light, health and happiness it brought to our home.

If any woman thinks she is sterile, or has doubts about her ability to carry a child to a mature birth let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is free to all expectant or would-be mothers. She has helped thousands of women through this anxious period.

Women suffering with irregular or painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, displacement, ulceration or inflammation of the womb, that bearing down feeling or ovarian trouble, backache, bloating or nervous prostration, should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of woman's ills, and accept no substitute.

Many Women Have Been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine.

of the mayor. He said: "No, I have not. The number of new cases reported today is in itself a sufficient reply why quarantine should not be lifted."

"Just as soon as it is safe," said the doctor, "the quarantine will be removed as no one is more anxious to do so than I, but there is now great danger in opening the doors and allowing people to come and go. In present quarantine will remain in force until it is safe to all concerned to have it removed."

Dr. Porter also stated that the stegomyia has been known to live for five months, and he is not anxious for any infected mosquitoes to get into country houses, and there hibernant until warm weather next year, and thus start another fever epidemic.
