THE EDITOR'S FIRST TRIP TO NEW YORK

Frank Harris, of the Ocala Banner, Tells of Harrowing Experiences of a "Green" Shortly After Close of the Civil War.

Editor Frank Harris, of the Ocala Banner, writes of his first visit to New York City as follows: Just after the civil war, the editor of this paper, still a youth, was seized with a desire to see something of the resourcefulness of the people and the people themselves who were able to crush the armies of the south in that stupendous four-year struggle, says the Ocala Banner.

Our objective point was New York City—there we expected to stop with friends whom we had met in Ocala, but as we were to reach the city at midnight we thought we would stop at a hotel and hunt up these friends the next day.

On the way from Washington to New York we fell in with a congressional party and were invited, or advised, to stop at their hotel until the next day.

In crossing the bay at Jersey City this party was approached by a hackman and his hack was secured, but as the congressional party were just enough to occupy the inside seats the hackman asked us if we had any objection to riding on the outside seat with the driver. He saw that we were "green" and acted accordingly.

Roped in by Driver. He spoke very confidentially and persuasively. He said that it was a very beautiful night and we would be able to see the sights of the great city as they appeared at midnight under the glare of the lamplight. We of course readily consented to occupy the seat with the driver.

We had not gone a very great distance before the horses stopped and the driver urged us to dismount quickly. As soon as we did so he popped his whip and before we realized it the hack and congressional party were off and out of hearing, and we were left in the middle of the street with the hackman.

We realized at once that we were up against a tough proposition. The hackman claimed that he had misunderstood us entirely, but that the hotel into which he immediately began to take our trunk was a nice one, and he assured us that we would pass a most comfortable night.

We followed him into the hotel and he demanded ten dollars for his pay, saying that the usual price was twelve dollars.

There were a lot of sailors sitting around a table smoking their pipes, and when we objected to the payment of the bill these sailors got up from their seats and formed a circle around us, and declared positively that ten dollars was less than the customary price and that the hackman must be paid for his services.

We realized that we were in a trap and consented to pay the price but first suggested that if it were a hotel we wanted to register and secure a room.

Bolted Out. While the clerk was hunting around for a register and the hackman and his friends were off their guard we bolted for the door and ran up the street as fast as our legs could carry us, not forgetting, however, to remember the number of the building.

In New York in those days there was a drug store on nearly every corner and they were kept open all night. We entered one of these stores about two blocks away and told the clerk our "tale of woe." He took no interest in the relation of the story whatever. He did not say either yes or nay. But there happened to be a fireman in uniform standing near and he told us that he had experienced the same treatment when he first landed in New York years before. He said that the place where we had been taken was a sailor's boarding house and had the reputation of being the vilest place in the city; that if we had remained there all night we would probably have been murdered, and certainly would have been robbed.

During the course of conversation the fireman asked us if we had left our money in the trunk or not, and for fear that we had already been robbed we pulled out our pocketbook and showed it to him.

The thought instantly occurred to us that we had blundered.

Friends in Need. The fireman told us that the sergeant at the nearest police headquarters was a friend of his, that he would go with us there and have the sergeant detail a squad of policemen to go with us to the sailor's boarding house, get the trunk and have it taken to a hotel where we could stay all night.

The thought occurred to us that to go tramping alone through the streets of a great city with an entire stranger at midnight and he a Hercules in strength and knowing that we had rather a large sum of money on our person, was almost like jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

But we thanked our new friend sincerely for his kindness and accepted his proposition to go with him to police headquarters.

He proved true blue; every word he said was true; the sergeant was his friend and manifested extreme interest in the case, and confirmed the fireman's story of the awful reputation the sailor's boarding house bore and said that some awful crimes had been enacted there.

A squad of policemen were detailed to go and rescue the trunk, and the faithful fireman accompanied them.

We found the trunk in the middle of the floor and searched the house from top to bottom, but not a soul could be found. It was absolutely deserted.

The trunk was taken to the Courtland street hotel and the fireman and policemen spurned the offer of pay.

Many times afterwards we crossed the Jersey City ferry at the same hour of the night in an effort to spot our man, but we were never again approached by a hackman.

The "green" had been worn off—that is one of the inevitable effects of living in a city.

OPENING OF THE GULF COAST FAIR

Fine Display of All Products that Go to Make Up an Agricultural Exhibit.

The DeFuniak Breeze of Thursday had the following article relative to the opening of the Gulf Coast Fair and Agricultural Exposition:

The Gulf Coast Fair and Agricultural Exposition opened yesterday morning without any blare of trumpets or sounding of tocsins, but with pushing and crowding exhibitors all anxious to make a display of the products of their farms and homes, and the show is one that must be seen to be appreciated, and the man who has been prophesying that such a Fair could not be made a success has several more guesses coming to him. The knockers and kickers are simply bewildered and blinded by the magnificent display of corn, cotton, potatoes, hay and all the products that go to make up the true agricultural fair.

In the ladies department everything has been arranged with that care and taste that is as much a part of the make up of femininity as a love of the beautiful.

In the poultry department there is crowing and cackling and singing and quacking, and over in the live stock department there is the squealing of little pigs, the grunting of the bigger ones, the lowing of cows and the neighing of horses, all music to the ears of all lovers of all that is good in live stock.

At the time we go to press it is of course too early to make any mention of individual merits in any department, but the cry of a poor crop year and that the stuff would not be as good as last year has been drowned in the exclamations of "I did not think such stuff would grow in West Florida." "Did you ever see such stuff in your life," and so on to the end of the chapter.

We believe that everything, so far as could be foreseen and arranged for, was more neatly ready yesterday for the opening than at any practically new institution we have ever known of. The Board of Directors are deserving of the thanks individually and collectively of the whole community for the time and energy that they have expended on it.

But the only way to really know of it, is to come and see.

A CLEANLY AGE. Twentieth Century Ideas Incline Toward Sanitation and Preventatives. Nowadays scientists believe in cleanliness lies the secret of prevention of diseases.

To prevent a disease, remove the cause. Just as unclean habits breed many disease, so careless habits will breed crudities. Improper use of another's brushes, combs, etc., will surely cause crudities, and, in time, will just as surely cause baldness.

It's microbial infection, nothing more nor less. Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ, and causes hair to grow luxuriantly. Herpicide is absolutely free from grease or other injurious substance.

For sale by W. A. D'Alemberte, druggist and apothecary, 121 South Palafox street, or send 10c in stamps for sample, to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

A HOT WATER BOTTLE STORY. A man bought a hot water bottle at a "nine cent" store for 50c. We went to charge him a dollar for a good one, and he said, "I have saved 50c." But the first time he used the bottle it leaked and the second time it came apart, and then he said, "Oh, that I had my money back," but he could not get it.

MORAL: A dollar well spent is better than fifty cents badly saved. Our hot water bottles are made by a reliable firm, and are worth the price we ask because they last and won't leak. Every bottle guaranteed perfect. Prices $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50, depending on size. Don't be like the man in the story.
