Character Suits

Our suits for men and young men are full of character. The fit and drape of the garments are precisely correct. In garments that are as thin and lightweight as ours their perfect drape is the result of their being built by the best clothing architects of America, the House of Kuppenheimer.

$12 and $16 will give you a flatteringly good suit; $18 to $25 will give you an unsurpassed standard of clothes goodness.

VERY MUCH IN NEED OF BEING FILLED OUT

Army Too Skeletonized for Good Results, Assert Authorities.

By Associated Press. Washington, July 18.—"There is something wrong with the army," said General Bell, chief of staff, in a western speech recently, and that statement is being echoed in various bureaus of the war department. There are different explanations advanced for that disquieting criticism, but the weight of opinion at the war department is that the Secretary of War summed up the case when he remarked that the trouble with the army was that there was not enough of it. The general staff has been compiling some tables that bear out this statement and these will be made the basis for a strong presentation of the needs of the army to congress at the next session.

For instance, here is a company of coast artillery, by regulations required to number 105 men, which according to the last return to the department, mustered just eight enlisted privates in its ranks. Of course, the company drill with such a skeleton organization is impossible. And this is only one of a number of such organizations.

According to the state the men will not re-enlist at the expiration of the first term of service. Wages outside the army are so much higher that they attract the most energetic soldiers in private life. Never before have recruiting officers found few opportunities to wear their soldier uniforms which is one source of pride with them and a factor in attracting them into the army.

The staff is trying to find corrective measures, but some measures will require legislation to make them effective.

ACUTE RHEUMATISM.

Deep tearing or wrenching pains, occasioned by getting wet through; worse when at rest, or on first moving the limbs and in cold or damp weather, is cured quickly by Ballard's Snow Liniment. Oscar Oleson, Gibson City, Ill., writes, Feb. 16, 1902: "A year ago I was troubled with a pain in my back. It soon got so bad I could not bend over. One bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment cured me." Together, Yet Separate. "I know three women who live in the same flat," said the bachelor girl. "I wish you could see the way they manage it. It's awfully funny. They live as separately as if they were in three flats. They hardly have anything to do with each other. For instance, each gets her breakfast tray ready the night before. All she has to do is to make her coffee in the morning and boil her eggs. Each has the same daily paper. You'd think they would buy a different one and exchange, but they don't. So every morning they go out in the kitchen at different times, get their breakfasts, bring them back to their bedrooms on their little trays and read their papers, all separately. I don't believe three men living in the same apartment would do that. Do you? I believe they would hobnob together at breakfast time and start the day with a little fun."—New York Press.

Eating Stew Through Straws. Doing as my Indian friends did, I seized in my turn a chunk of mutton from the kettle and proceeded to eat it. How I was to get my share of the stew, however, I could not conceive, as licking one's fingers is a slow process and inadequately nourishing. On the floor table, however, was a pile of what looked like dark blue lead pencils. The governor took one, stuck it into the kettle and peacefully sucked until he was satisfied. It was simply sucking, not lemonade, but mutton stew, through a straw. Then he carefully proceeded to eat the straw. Sucking the stew through it had softened and flavored it for eating. I mastered the game at the first trial, writes Frederick Monson in the Craftsman, and from that time was a devoted adherent to piki bread, as well as to many other dishes and customs of my good friends the Hopi.

An Unusual Topic. It was a real hardship for Judge Brown to have to keep silent for any length of time. Even when traveling he usually found some one who would at least listen while he talked. But on one occasion he found himself in a railway coach with only one other occupant—a stiff, dignified old lady who did not deign even to look at him when he raised his hat upon entering the coach. The judge grew restless after they had traveled several miles. He drummed on the window, coughed several times, then finally, in desperation, cleared his throat and asked in a stentorian tone: "Madam, did it ever occur to you to wonder whether it had ever rained any before the time of the flood?"

The unusual question started the old lady out of her dignified silence, and the two old people were soon engaged in animated conversation.

The Servant Problem in Cuba. The Cuban matron has little to say in the management of her own household, as the family literally board with their cook, who has sole control of the cuisine. When a cook is engaged, she is paid so much per month—$10, $15 or $20, as the case may be—for her work. She at once inquires how much is allowed for the marketing, which she is to do each morning. On being told, she figures out how much she can save from the amount, and if the graft amount to say 15 or 20 cents per day, she is likely to accept the position. She rarely sleeps at the house and usually has a family of her own who are fed from the larder of her employer. Early breakfast is light—fruit, rolls and coffee—and at noon there is a meal known as late breakfast, which resembles the American luncheon. When this is finished, the cook spends a few hours at her home and returns at 5 o'clock in time to prepare dinner. A half grown girl is employed to wait on the table, answer the doorbell, etc. In some families male cooks are employed. If the meals do not suit the master of the house, he adds more money to the marketing allowance.—Mrs. C. R. Miller in Leslie's Weekly.

CAME VERY NEAR TO MARRYING HER OWN LONG-LOST FATHER

Erastus Siniger, a well known and wealthy ranchman of Wyoming and always considered a bachelor by his friends and acquaintances, recently became engaged to marry his own daughter, and their relationship was only discovered when they were about to be married. His daughter is Mrs. Nettie Farmer, a handsome widow of about 30 years. The denouement occurred at the home of a friend of Mrs. Farmer, near Anaconda, Montana, where the wedding ceremony was to have taken place. Siniger became engaged to Mrs. Farmer through an Eastern matrimonial agency, and he did not inquire too closely into her past life. She stated that she was a young and good looking widow of good character and that her home was in Portland, Oregon. Siniger did not go into details as to his past life, and admits having misrepresented his age when corresponding with his daughter. She expected to meet a much younger man than she did. When the couple met at the home of Mrs. Farmer's friend, Siniger thought the face of his prospective bride looked familiar, and for a day he tried to recall where he had seen the young woman before. The features of the pretty widow haunted him but he did not dare to ask questions that might seem impertinent until an hour before the ceremony. Then he requested Mrs. Farmer to open the book of her past. When the story was finished Siniger exclaimed with tears in his eyes: "You are my long lost daughter; I am your father." Mrs. Farmer looked at her father a moment, and then fainted. The minister who had been summoned to perform the ceremony was dismissed, but he was given a substantial fee just the same.
